HOUSE TO SEND THE TARIFF BILL DIRECT TO CONFEREES

Agreement For That Procedure Reached By House Republicans—Provides For House Votes On Sugar, Cement, Lumber and Shingles Before These Rates Are Finally Determined By the Conferees—Democrats Wanted to Vote On All the 1,250 Senate Amendments—An Effort Will Be Made In House to Send the Bill to Conference Wednesday.

[illegible] March 31.—(AP)— [illegible] settled their party [illegible] procedure with the [illegible] by agreeing to send [illegible] directly to conference [illegible] but providing for [illegible] sugar, cement, lumber, [illegible] before these rates are [illegible] by the conferees.

[illegible] was reached after three [illegible] of the republican [illegible] to smooth out [illegible] a compromise be[illegible] forces who [illegible] to conference in [illegible] disagreeing to all [illegible] and certain groups [illegible] conference votes [illegible] duties. [illegible] what we requested [illegible] conference at the [illegible] first up," said [illegible] republican.

[illegible] proposed by the [illegible] if it will be possible to secure final action before June 1.

"I wish to suggest to those representatives who are interested in the welfare of agriculture that a vote for the majority program will be a vote against the senate's amendments to the agricultural schedule, and that adoption of the program will mean that the senate's agricultural rates will be just that much trading stock for the conferees."

How the house would line up on the four major rates is not known, but in all instances except one the senate has curtailed or eliminated entirely the house duties.

The house increased the Cuban sugar tariff from 1.76 to 2.40 cents a pound. The senate reduced this to 2 cents. The house duty of 8 cents a hundred pounds on cement, now on the free list, was reduced to 6 cents by the senate with a proviso that cement intended for public construction by state and municipal governments be admitted free. The senate returned shingles to the free list, while the house made these dutiable at 25 per cent.

While the house retained softwood lumber on the free list, the senate adopted a rate of $1.50 a thousand board feet on fir, spruce, pine, hemlock and larch lumber and railroad ties and telephone and telegraph poles of all woods.

Adoption of the majority program, which is virtually certain, will mean that both house and senate will be called upon for roll call votes on half a dozen of the major disputes between the two houses before the conferees make their final report.

Informal pledges have been given by the senate republican conferees that they will not agree in conference to throw out the export debenture and the provision for repeal of the existing flexible tariff provisions without first seeking instructions from the senate. These assurances, given the coalition of democrats and republican independents who incorporated both provisions in the bill over the expressed wish of President Hoover, make certain two important record votes before final conference action.

COMMISSION REPORT ON DISORDERS IN PALESTINE

LONDON, March 31.—(AP)—The Palestine commission today made public its report on the disorders in Palestine last year, holding that the outbreak was from the beginning an attack by Arabs on Jews but that it was not premeditated.

The report said the Arabian grand mufti must accept some responsibility, adding that the part he took in formation of societies for the defense of Moslem holy places "was influenced by a two-fold desire—to annoy Jews and to mobilize Moslem opinion on the issue of the Wailing Wall.

"He had no intention of utilizing this religious campaign as a means of inciting disorder. But inasmuch as the movement which he in part created became, through force of circumstances, a not unimportant factor in events which led to the outbreak, the mufti, like many others who directly or indirectly played upon public feeling in Palestine, must accept a share in responsibility for the disturbances."

CONTEST OVER MERGER OF STEEL CORPORATION

YOUNGSTOWN, Ohio, March 31.—(AP)—The group of stockholders in the Youngstown Sheet and Tube company, who are opposed to merging it with the Bethlehem Steel corporation, interpreted today a statement from Eugene G. Grace, president, and Charles Schwab, chairman of Bethlehem, as an admission that Grace and Schwab believe the merger proposal is certain of defeat.

Anti-merger forces added that if stockholders continue to stand pat as they have so far, it would seem reasonable to expect that Bethlehem will offer further concessions extending to a favorable change in the terms so that they will be more nearly on the basis that independent statisticians say they should be in fairness to Sheet and Tube stockholders.

BANDITS AND COMMUNISTS ARE ACTIVE IN CHINA

SHANGHAI, March 31.—(AP)—Bandit disorders, complicated by the capture of missionaries and communist activities, were indicated by reports pouring into Shanghai today to have created a grave situation in various parts of China.

Radicals, who apparently had subsided some weeks ago when Chiang Kai-Shek demonstrated the strength of the Nanking government, were reported active again, especially in northern China where Yen Hsi-Shan, governor of Shansi provice, is heading military opposition to the nationalist government. Much of the recent lawlessness in south China was attributed to Yen's incitements as he allegedly is trying to bring about the government's down fall.

Information came from Suchow, about 50 miles from Shanghai, that police and soldiers had united and ambushed boats carrying 500 bandits. The boats were raked with rifle fire until they were filled with dead and wounded, the reports said. Police then boarded the boats and engaged in hand to hand conflict with the outlaws who were finally overcome and many of them captured. Others fled.

Evacuation of many places by foreigners was believed imminent if not already under way. One of these places is Nanchang where officers of the Standard Oil company of New York reported conditions precarious.

ACROBATS WENT THROUGH THEIR ACT IN COURT

NEW YORK, March 31—(AP)—Something new in court room procedure enlivened today's session of the trial of Mae West and 56 others, mostly actors, involved in the presentation of "Pleasure Man," Miss West's play which was closed as objectionable by the police in October, 1928.

The judge in his trailing robe climbed down off the bench, and the jurors left the jury box and crowded around as Herman Lenzen and William Selig, acrobats, showed them just what they contributed to "Pleasure Man." Their act, detectives have testified, was one of the reasons why the police closed the show.

After explaining that they had been doing this same act for three years in vaudeville, Lenzen and Selig went through it twice for the jury today.

Otherwise, today's session was dull, with minor witnesses for the defense going over their lines under direct and cross examination. The trial today entered its third week and the judge threatened to hold night sessions if it is not speeded up.

Three Power Naval Pact In Any Event

But Five Power Agreement Remains the Goal of Delegates In London.

LONDON, March 31—(AP)—Advices received in London today from Tokyo regarding the Japanese answer to the American-British proposals has convinced American, British and Japanese conference circles that a three power naval agreement will save the London negotiations from the failure which still threatens the European aspects of the parley.

But a five-power agreement tonight still remained the goal of the delegates, even through the present hours of adversity. Prime Minister MacDonald assured the house of common of this today, while Secretary Stimson and the American delegation continued persistent efforts toward that end.

Japan's reply has been drafted and should arrive in London for formal announcement at the plenary session Friday. Advices from Tokyo today said that Japan would make a reservation regarding her demand for 70 per cent of American strength in large cruisers, yielding on this point for the purpose of a five year working agreement on construction programs rather than surrendering the principle of ratio which her naval experts are convinced is necessary to insure national security.

The British official spokesman, while unable to announce any progress in the diplomatic game of hunting a formula which will satisfy Great Britain, France and Italy on the security issue, indicated that the foreign ministers and their experts would stick to their tasks.

Secretary Stimson and Ambassador Morrow visited M. Briand this afternoon, and after this talk the French said the discussions toward a five power pact were continuing strongly.

The heads of delegations met in St. James' palace for 15 minutes this morning. The meeting did not develop into an important session, but another meeting was called for Wednesday.

At the Wednesday meeting, the chief delegates will discuss the points which experts have failed to agree upon.

Prime Minister MacDonald pointed out today that the Franco-British political negotiations had not yet been concluded, nor was the Franco-Italian controversy settled.

DECISION OF COURT AGAINST COMMUNISTS

NEW YORK, March 31.—(AP)—Supreme Court Justice Alonzo G. Hinkley of Buffalo, sitting here, today ruled that the International Ladies' Garment Workers' union, affiliated with the American Federation of Labor, was justified in seizing under a sheriff's order in August, 1927, union property that had been taken away by communists who had been expelled from the union.

Justice Hinkley, after listening to testimony and arguments of counsel since last Friday, dismissed the jury and declared that the international union had in law established its right to the property, which was for a time hidden by the communists in the Bronx.

The property was seized by a sheriff on behalf of the international union in August, 1927, and held under $35,000 bond. Justice Hinkley ordered the bond released.

COMMUNISTS REPORTED ACTIVE IN PHILIPPINES

MANILA, March 31.—(AP)—Communist agitation on church lands in central Luzon province with which church authorities feel no longer able to cope, was the reason given today by the Archbishop of Manila for the church's decision to endeavor to sell the lands to the government.

The archbishop charged that due to agitation tenants are refusing to pay rent and some haven't paid a centavo since 1926.

Simultaneously it was authoritatively learned that the dignitary's claims of communist activities were supported by a confidential report by the constabulary to Governor-General Dwight Davis.

DEMOCRATS WIN COUNCIL IN DANBURY ELECTION

DANBURY, March 31.—(AP)—Democrats today gained control of the common council at the annual city election by electing two aldermen and three councilmen. The republicans elected one councilman.

The new council will have eight democrats and four republicans, while the present council has six members of each party.

The democrats carried three of the four wards, including one which is normally republican.

The vote for an off year election was unusually large almost equaling that brought out by a full city election.

APPLE SCAB THREATENING CONNECTICUT APPLE CROP

NEW HAVEN, March 31.—(AP)—The Connecticut Agricultural Experiment station reported today that the state's $2,000,000 apple industry is threatened by the apple scab five weeks ahead of time, a biological phenomenon that has no precedent.

Usually, the station reported, the scab appears late in April. Growers were urged to spray the trees sooner and to continue the treatment longer. After the blossoms fall, the greatest danger of infection is over.

The early appearance is due, it was said, to conditions of last fall when the leaves fell long before normal time.

MAY OUST WIDELY KNOWN UNITARIAN MINISTER

HARTFORD, March 31.—(AP)—Circulation of a petition to oust Dr. Albert C. Dieffenbach, nationally known Unitarian minister, as editor of the Christian Register, Unitarian publication, today met with a rebuff which split the church into two militant factions.

Twelve ministers of the Connecticut valley conference, at a meeting in Springfield, Mass., today opposed the petition as "violating the principle of freedom underlying the Unitarian fellowship."

To Reduce Spring Wheat Production

Campaign On to Divert 2,000,000 A[illegible] From Wheat to Othe[illegible]d Crops.

CHI[illegible] [illegible]arch 31—(AP)—A campaig[illegible] [illegible]raw two millions of acre[illegible] spring wheat production ar[illegible] [illegible]te other needed crops was [illegible] today at a conference be[illegible] [illegible]hairman Alexander Legge of [illegible]ral farm board and Dr. John L. [illegible]r, chief economist of the tariff [illegible]mission.

As a result of the conference Dr. Coulter and James Howard, special worker for the farm board, will meet several Minnesota and North and South Dakota farm groups at Minneapolis tomorrow on the subject.

Dr. Coulter proposed the substitution of flax, barley, rye, oats, alfalfa and sweet clover on two million acres ordinarily planted to two kinds of spring wheat in Minnesota and the Dakotas.

The economist said he and Mr. Howard would spend at least the next two weeks mobilizing substitute crops and helping farmers plan their spring planting in the northwest belt. They also were planning to assist the farmers in trading seed wheat to the farm board for seed of the other crops.

Success of Dr. Coulter's proposal is expected by its sponsors to reduce spring wheat by approximately 10 per cent, which the farm board urged as necessary to prevent a surplus.

"Most industries must shut down to control surplus," said Dr. Coulter, "this is not true of the farmer. His land need not be idle. Other crops besides wheat are needed, especially for export."

He also said planting of seed other than wheat, would benefit the soil.

CITES CONSTITUTION FOR SPELLING OF TRANQUIL(L)ITY

WASHINGTON, March 31.—(AP)—The Constitution of the United States was cited today by Representative Howard, democrat, Nebraska, to show he was "knocked out by a foul blow" Saturday night when he was eliminated from the spelling bee between members of congress and newspaper correspondents for spelling "tranquillity" with one "L".

"Thank you for your encouraging telegram. I received it as the bell rang for the first round of the national spelling fight between members of congress and the Washington newspaper correspondents.

"I was knocked out by a foul blow. I spelled the word 'tranquility' with one 'L'. The referee said I must use two.

"The highest earthly authority, the Constitution of the United States, spells the word as I spelled it. I always feel safe when my feet are on the solid rock of the Constitution of the United States."

The "referee" was Senator Fess of Ohio, a former college president.

COMMITTED SUICIDE BY LEAPING OUT OF WINDOW

NEW YORK, March 31.—(AP)—Depressed after having seen a play that dealt with the occult, Elizabeth C. Gibbs, 22, member of the promotion staff of a magazine and wife of Wolcott Gibbs, magazine writer, committed suicide today by leaping out the window of her apartment on the 17th floor of a hotel in East 42nd street, near the East river.

The Gibbs had been married only six months, and Mr. Gibbs told detectives they were happy until last week when Mrs. Gibbs saw the play. Since then, he said, she had been depressed and had several times threatened to throw herself from the window.

Leaving her husband and her sister-in-law, Miss Angelina Gibbs, in the living room of the apartment, Mrs. Gibbs walked calmly into the bedroom today, opened the window and jumped.

With the discovery of the bodies, the experts directing the work abandoned any hope that any of the victims might have saved themselves.

CLOCK TO SET POPULATION OF THE U.S. AS 122,186,893

New Scientific Device In the Office of W. M. Steuart, Director of Census, Will Register Those Figures At One Minute After Midnight Tonight—Actual Enumeration, Which Begins Tomorrow, Will Show How Close the Clock Comes to Correctness—Experts Estimate a Tentative Total Can Be Announced About July 1 of This Year.

WASHINGTON, March 31—(AP)—At one minute after midnight tonight, the first minute of April, the population of the United States will be 122,186,893 by the flashing, clicking census clock in the office of W. M. Steuart, who will direct the fifteenth decennial census to begin Wednesday.

That time, 12:01 a. m., is the moment of the census. Every count will be as of then, and the actual enumeration of population will show how close the scientific clock came to correctness.

This is the first census in which the big clock, invented at the time of the Philadelphia sesqui-centennial exposition, could be used to check with actual figures.

The returns will show whether the census clock is fast or slow.

All day long, month in, month out, the clicking of the clock has kept Director Steuart census-conscious.

He can step into his anteroom at any moment and see just what the population of the United States should tally in keeping with the numerical laws which have been found to govern its growth.

One birth every 13 seconds, one death every 23 seconds, one immigrant arrives every 1 1-2 minutes, one emigrant departs every 5 1-2 minutes.

When the light flashes the net increase of one in the country's population, an additional tally is clicked up on the numerical scoreboard at the top of the clock.

Five hundred and seventy-five supervisors of the census will make individual announcements in their districts before a grand total can be counted for the check with the census clock.

GANNETT RETURNS FROM 13,000-MILE AIR JAUNT

NEW YORK, March 31.—(AP)—Tanned and refreshed by a 13,000-mile air jaunt around South America, W. H. Gannett, 76-year-old retired Maine publisher, today was looking around for new airways to conquer. He thinks he'll see Alaska next.

One of the country's first amateur balloonists he had been traveling for some twenty-five years by air. For how many miles. He doesn't know. Say 100,000. "That's a good guess," he said.

Last January Mr. Gannett, who has flown over most of Europe's and America's air lines—he doesn't make stunt flights any more, just journeys over established airways—conceived the idea that he'd like to see South America.

He didn't want to go by boat, that makes him ill, but South America at that time was only served by American air lines down the west coast. Others were to be started in the spring.

"I'll just loaf along and take my time," he said. "Lay me out a schedule if, as and when the east coast airlines open."

Dr. Lockwood has been substituting for Dr. Bradstreet for the last month as he has on previous occasions when Dr. Bradstreet was not available.

Frank L. Maguire, one of the supervisors under fire during the recent attacks upon the school management, resigned and left the institution last Saturday, it was announced today. His parents, Mr. and Mrs. T. H. Maguire, have been connected with the school for many years. His father is supervisor of music and his mother is supervisor of the dining room.

SECOND DEFEAT FOR BRITISH LABOR GOVT.

LONDON, March 31.—(AP)—For the second time since it took office ten months ago, the MacDonald government was defeated on a minor point in the house of commons today.

The vote was close, 183 to 179, and took the ministry by surprise. The labor members were speedily rounded up, and on a conservative motion to adjourn the house immediately following, the government was victorious by 185 to 175.

The defeat came on a question of procedure, the government desiring to suspend the rule that the house adjourn at 11 p. m. It was greeted by loud cheering and cries of "resign" from the conservative benches, but after the flurry was over it was not taken very seriously.

The check is not expected to have important political consequences, and its only immediate effect is to delay discussion of the business of the session by preventing the cabinet from getting work through more rapidly.

OKLAHOMA OIL GUSHER AGAIN OUT OF CONTROL

OKLAHOMA CITY, Okla., March 31.—(AP)—Breaking loose again after it had been temporarily brought under control, the No. 1 Mary Sudik oil gusher in the South Oklahoma field today threatened to spray this city with the black fluid.

With the oil flow increasing, following a break through the casing collar of the well, oil workers feared that the column of black gold soon would be spouting over the crown block of the derrick. A strong south wind threatened to whip the spray into the city.

Housewives in the Capitol Hill section in the southern part of Oklahoma City were warned to bring in the weekly wash and close windows of their homes.

Leases within a mile of the well were shut down and word was passed along the roads northward to extinguish all fires. Only oil company employes were allowed to enter the field.

The court room was crowded, and tensely silent as the jurors filed from the jury room and awaited the time for their announcement. Dague, as silent as the rest, seemed indifferent. He made no motion when the verdict was announced. His demeanor was as calm as that of Irene Schroeder, the blonde gungirl, when the verdict of death was returned against her.

MR. AND MRS. GEO. O. BALCH CELEBRATE GOLDEN WEDDING

(Special to The Bulletin)

WILLIMANTIC, March 31.—Surrounded by a family group who assisted in receiving a number of callers, Mr. and Mrs. George O. Balch celebrated their golden wedding anniversary in quiet manner at their home on the old Murphy place in Warrenville, town of Ashford, Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. Balch were married March 30, 1880, in the historic "front" room of the ancient Old Coach Tavern, otherwise known as the General Palmer inn at Warrenville, now owned and occupied by Mr. and Mrs. Robert S. Haggett.

The old inn that savors of the pre-Revolutionary days was then owned by the late Postmaster John A. Murphy, father of the bride of half a century ago.

George O. Balch was born 75 years ago in Atwoodville, town of Mansfield, a son of Henry and Mary Small Balch. Mrs. Balch, aged 71, was born in Warrenville, a daughter of John A. and Mary Spaulding Murphy. They have one child, Robert M. Balch, postmaster, and general merchandiser at Warrenville.

Both are well and active for their years, Mrs. Balch being at present well on the road to recovery from a severe cold. Mrs. Balch is the efficient and thoughtful secretary of the Ashford town school committee, a position which she has held with honor and credit for the past 30 consecutive years. Her devotion to the cause of education in Ashford has been a most fruitful one and her efforts on the school committee have always been in accord with the progress of the town's young people.

Mr. Balch is widely known and highly esteemed throughout the town and various sections of the state as a man of integrity and wisdom. For about 20 years he served as postmaster, succeeding his late father-in-law, John A. Murphy, who himself had succeeded to his father, Ira G. Murphy, who established the first postoffice in Ashford over a century ago. The succession of Robert M. Balch to his father as postmaster in the town 12 years ago has served to keep the postmastership in the Murphy and Balch families for well over 100 years. The original postoffice, founded by Ira G. Murphy, stood on the site of Knowlton Memorial hall in Warrenville village, formerly known as "Pompey Hollow." The building was torn down to make way for the construction of the memorial hall in 1925.

Always a staunch republican, ex-Postmaster Balch has held many positions of trust and honor in the town. He served as selectman for a number of terms in years past, was judge of probate for one term, representative to the state legislature in 1895 and has been health officer of the town for the past ten years. Residing in the old house that marked the first settlement of Ira G. Murphy over a century ago, Mr. Balch now enjoys virtual retirement, although he is often to be found at the postoffice and general store conducted by his son, Robert M. Balch. Mr. and Mrs. Balch are acclaimed by all who know them as a fine old couple, spending their declining years in the blessings of a long life of good influence and unselfish service to the welfare of the community and its people.

POETRY

The Crocus's Soliloquy

Down in my solitude under the snow,
Where nothing cheering can reach me,
Here, without light to see how to grow,
I'll trust to Nature to teach me.

I will not despair, nor be idle, nor frown,
Locked in so gloomy a dwelling;
My leaves shall run up, and my roots shall run down,
While the bud in my bosom is swelling.

Soon as the frost will get out of my bed,
From this cold dungeon to free me,
Up will I peer with my bright little head,
All will be poyful to see me.

Then from my heart will young petals diverge,
As rays of the sun from their focus;
I from the darkness of earth will emerge,
A happy and beautiful Crocus.

Gayly arrayed in my yellow and green,
When to their view I have risen,
Will they not wonder how one so serene
Came from so dismal a prison?

Many, perhaps, from so simple a flower
This little lesson may borrow—
Patient, today, through its gloomiest hour,
We come out the brighter tomorrow.

—By Hannah F. Gould.

Answered

The restless seekers ask us
"When cometh your belief—
Can Spring hope then to vanquish
The Winter of your grief?"

We only know that April,
So beautiful and new,
Is tenderly unfolding
A promise always true.

We only see dead gardens
Wake at the wind's soft kiss.
What miracle is older
Or sweeter proof than this?

We only hear the murmur
Of waters running free,
That lately were imprisoned
And now may reach the sea.

Oh, who can doubt in April—
When under clear blue skies,
Triumphant, Life is smiling
Before our wistful eyes.

Happy Woman Tells How She Lost 19 Pounds of Fat In 27 Days

During October a woman in Montana wrote — "My first bottle of Kruschen Salts lasted almost 4 weeks and during that time I lost 19 pounds of fat—Kruschen is all you claim for it—I feel better than I have for years."

Here's the recipe that banishes fat and brings into blossom all the natural attractiveness that every woman possesses.

Every morning take one half teaspoonful of Kruschen Salts in a glass of hot water before breakfast.

Be sure and do this every morning for "It's the little daily dose that takes off the fat."—Don't miss a morning. The Kruschen habit means that every particle of poisonous waste matter and harmful acids and gases are expelled from the system.

At the same time the stomach, liver, kidneys and bowels are toned up and the pure, fresh blood containing Nature's six life-giving salts is carried to every organ, gland, nerve and fibre of the body and this is followed by "That Kruschen feeling" of energetic health and activity that is reflected in bright eyes, clear skin, cheerful vivacity and charming figure.

If you want to lose fat with speed get an 85c bottle of Kruschen Salts from Lee & Osgood or any live druggist anywhere in America with the distinct understanding that you must be satisfied with results or money back.

Seven convincing reasons

why you will prefer

CADILLAC and LA SALLE

to anything else

1. You have undoubtedly observed that the driver of a Cadillac or La Salle—though his car has a superabundance of speed and power—does not have to resort to speeding to make time. Simplification of control in the operation of brakes, gear-shift and steering mechanism has resulted in a decidedly new measure of quick and easy handling that spells more miles per hour with greater safety.

2. The new silent "Syncro-Mesh" transmission, with which all Cadillacs and La Salles are equipped, is the ultimate simplification of gear-shifting. This exclusive patented feature literally transforms this phase of motor car performance. "Syncro-Mesh" operates quickly, quietly and clashlessly at any speed, under any conceivable driving conditions.

3. The new Cadillac-La Salle harmonized steering—the owner of a Cadillac or La Salle will tell you—is a revelation in easy steering, in maneuvering these cars through congested traffic, in parking, and in cross-country driving.

4. Greater safety is the significance of the safety-mechanical four-wheel brakes, with which all Cadillacs and La Salles are equipped. These brakes are: Unfailing, because you cannot overheat them; effortless in operation, because of fifteen sets of roller bearings; positive, because the patent brake shoes always give full surface action. Simply and quickly adjusted.

5. There is no quibbling about the protection of non-shattering glass in Cadillac and La Salle. It is Cadillac's conscientious conviction that you are entitled to it—without extra cost. The Security-Plate Glass that is standard equipment in all Cadillac-La Salle windows, doors and windshields is not ordinary laminated glass. It is the highest quality plate glass. No distorted vision. No fear of injury through flying glass fragments.

6. There is no question about the proved advantages of the powerful Cadillac-La Salle V-type Eights. In these cars eight-cylinder power plants reach their maximum effectiveness. And now in the Cadillac V-16 (sixteen cylinders), by reason of new engine principles, performance is carried to hitherto unreached heights—an indescribable responsiveness even at low speeds—a hushed smoothness—a kind of performance in every particular that no words can suggest and only personal experience can reveal.

7. When you inspect the luxurious Fisher and Fleetwood coachwork, and compare it with other body construction and appointment, you will quickly agree that ordinary practice appears disturbingly inadequate in comparison.

You are invited to take a Cadillac or La Salle trials car and put it to the most gruelling tests for confirmation of what every Cadillac or La Salle owner knows: That Cadillac and La Salle are, of all motor cars, the safest, the easiest to handle, and the simplest to control.

Sixteen-Cylinder Trials Cars Now Available

Only by riding in or driving the new Cadillac V-16 can you appreciate how extraordinarily it performs. A telephone message will bring a sixteen-cylinder Cadillac to your door.

DANIELSON

CENSUS TAKERS WILL START OPERATIONS TOMORROW

(Special to The Bulletin)

DANIELSON, March 31—Get ready to meet the census-takers, people of the town of Killingly! They start this week, probably on Wednesday, and during the succeeding few weeks expect to enumerate every person, young and old, resident within the limits of the town.

They will have many questions to ask one, and as representatives of the federal government are entitled to as clear and complete answers as one may be able to give them.

The town has been divided into districts, that the work may be completed more rapidly. The names of the census-takers for Killingly announced up to this afternoon are Lieut. Ira A. Warren and Herbert E. Hopkins, both of Danielson, John Higgins of Elmville.

Considerable curiosity was created here this morning through an announcement in The Bulletin that Judge Otto B. Robinson of Willimantic, in charge of the census work in this part of the state, has had his attention called to a report of fake census-takers operating in Killingly. Inquiries made in official circles here today brought forth statements that no such illegal activity has come to the attention of officials. It is regarded as possible, that some persons have been asked for information, as they are from time to time, by persons representing business concerns. This, however, is done from time to time without attracting the attention that it does just now on the eve of taking the general census of the town.

It is regarded as likely that this town's census-takers will require the assistance of interpreters in gaining the information they desire from a considerable number of non-English speaking people, or people who have only a smattering of English. This condition at the taking of the last census 10 years ago. There are said to be upwards of 20 nationalities represented in the population of the town.

Grass Fire

This afternoon firemen responded to a call from Box 45 for another of those dangerous grass fires that began sweeping over territory bordering on and near the Assawaga river, just east of the curtain factory of Bardell and Alexander. The blaze had reached a shed, but finally was put out, with the use of extinguishers, before any damage of moment had been done. The firemen returned to quarters at about 3:10.

This particular fire, fire wardens pointed out late this afternoon, of the dangerous conditions that exist generally now in this territory, as to the possibility of grass and forest fires getting underway.

Took First Train Into Chicago

Deputy Sheriff Charles E. Ayer of Dayville, who in his colorful career and travels into about every nook and corner of the United States has been a locomotive fireman and engineer, has an invitation to go to Denver to be present on May 10 at the observance arranged to mark the 50th anniversary of the running of the Chicago, Burlington and Quincy railroad's first train into that now splendid city. Sheriff Ayer is the sole survivor of the crew that manned that train. If Sheriff Ayer decides to accept he may travel as luxuriously as he will please as the guest of and at the expense of the Burlington road, the development of which he had the opportunity to witness through a period of several years. The sheriff said today that he probably would decline the invitation. He doesn't like to ride on railroad trains any more after having ridden hundreds of thousands of miles in the years that have gone.

PUTNAM

GIANT ELM BEING MOVED WEIGHS ABOUT 45 TONS

(Special to The Bulletin)

PUTNAM, March 31—Hundreds are watching with interest the spectacular feat of a group of tree specialists who are engaged in the moving of a giant elm tree from Pomfret landing to the "Gwen Careg Farm" of Mrs. T. Morris Murray in Abington. The tree, which is 55 inches in diameter at its trunk and towers to a height of 94 feet, weighs 45 tons. The task of transplanting it to its new home on the Murray country home is a gigantic undertaking. Experts spent nearly a month preparing it for removal and since the project was started, the tree has been on the state road between Pomfret and Putnam for 11 days.

Because of the fact that the state highway is impassable for about three miles between Pomfret and Abington, the contractors have posted the road with flagmen at both ends to divert traffic over the back road.

The work is progressing slowly. The special apparatus with which the specialists are equipped, moves only about 800 feet in a day. The work has attracted wide attention and those who have viewed the huge tree during its journey from its place of growth in Pomfret landing to its new location on the beautiful country estate are astonished at the seemingly impossible feat.

Mayor Charles A. Richard is practically recovered from his recent illness of pneumonia which has confined him to his home for more than a month. Mr. Richard is now able to be out on short walks daily and will probably be present at the April meeting of the common council Tuesday evening. The city's chief executive's physical appearance shows clearly the effects of his long illness. However, he appears jovial and is anxious to return to his business cares and to his official duties as mayor of the city.

The city street department is engaged in the repair of Florence and George streets, two short thoroughfares on the east side of the city. The highways are being gravelled in preparation for a coating of oil later in the spring. Former Mayor Archibald Macdonald, who is a resident of George street appeared before the council at the March meeting and asked for the improvement of the two streets which have been in an extremely dangerous condition during the winter.

Members of the board of aldermen anticipate a quiet session at the April meeting of the council to be held Tuesday evening. One of the important municipal matters which is expected to occupy an important part of the monthly gathering, will be the report of the primary work on the reconstruction of the water system which is now underway. Workmen are engaged in the removal of tons of earth from the spot where the foundation of the one and a quarter million gallon steel standpipe will be erected. Very little comment on the traffic and parking problem is expected to come before the board. Since the enactment of the two hour time limit parking system, satisfactory regulations appear to have been reached.

Special Deputy Commissioner Chauncey E. Ganung of the department of domestic animals is making a careful survey of this section of the county for the presence of the dreaded rabie germ in dogs. Sections of the county south of Killingly are under quarantine. As far as could be learned today the state official had found no trace of infected dogs roaming about this territory.

NO. GROSVENORDALE

The Grosvenordale Co. baseball team formerly the Giants, will start spring practice next week. The management of the team is still under the direction of Leo Bernard. Mr. Bernard believes that this season will be as successful for his nine as it proved in the past. A league will be formed between teams of neighboring towns and cities. Some of them are: North Grosvenordale, Quinebaug, Webster, Dudley, Putnam and Danielson. Many of the local stars of last year's nine will be out for the first call for spring practice.

Tourtellotte has decided to have a baseball team this season. Last year's team was composed of seniors only, and there is no material from which Coach Colby can draw his players for the benefit of new members who are out for the nine this year. No letter will be awarded for this sport this season, for there is to be no schedule. Next year, however, Mr. Colby expects to have a team which will represent Tourtellotte favorably.

TILSON'S REMINDER

When Congressman Tilson intimates that the attacks which have been made upon the administration by the democratic leaders have been packed with misrepresentations, he voices the sentiments of plenty of observers who have recognized the political object of these attacks. They have been kept to the front in the senate during its long deliberations, they have blossomed out at times when it was believed they would have the most effective results and now they are aimed at such influence as they will have upon the campaign for next fall's election.

It is perfectly evident that the chief reason why the senate and congress have not done more is because of the obstructive tactics which have been employed by the democrats in their coalition with the insurgent republicans. In that combination has prevailed the determination to embarrass. It has been seen in the way investigations have been undertaken, the manner in which such committees have been picked and the delays which have surrounded the efforts of the administration to get action.

When Congressman Tilson calls attention to the accomplishments in spite of the handicaps and points to the reduction in taxation, the farm relief legislation, the public buildings program, the good roads bill, the permanent radio commission and the action on reapportionment, he includes some of the important administration recommendations, and it would be possible for him to have included a tariff revision and other measures of importance to the country had the right disposition been displayed in the senate. Instead of trying to see how much could be done for the good of the country, the effort seems to have been made in the senate to see how little of what the administration desires would be permitted.

Those who are disposed to cry failure at such a time, after having done their best to encourage such a result, must ever be judged by the political zeal which guides their efforts. This is, of course, fully recognized by Congressman Tilson and he makes a direct and convincing statement in setting forth the falsity of their claims. But even had there been justification for the cry of failure the part which the democrats have played would not have left a good impression with the country.

MAKE A THOROUGH JOB

The board of trustees for the Meriden School for Boys has gotten busy promptly with the recommendations which have been submitted to it by the [illegible] as the result of the report by the [illegible] commission, following [illegible] investigation of conditions in the school.

It was inevitable that the resignation of superintendent Boyd should [illegible], inasmuch as it had been offered and recommended. The poor [illegible] at the head of the institution [illegible] additional reasons for the [illegible] and it is to be expected that the trustees will henceforth take care to see that, so as far as it lies within their power, the suggested improvements will be made and the management will be kept up to a high standard [illegible] will eliminate any possible [illegible] treatment of inmates [illegible].

It was made evident in view of the [illegible] of the inquiry that there must be a housecleaning at the school. The [illegible] are apparently not convinced that the trouble at the school was due to superintendent Boyd, and it hardly seems believable that he would intentionally encourage or countenance such [illegible] as have been disclosed, but it [illegible] to have been a situation where he placed too much confidence in those [illegible] taking advantage of his leniency [illegible] though he did not sanction [illegible] perhaps didn't believe [illegible] and possibly didn't know [illegible] the fact remains that he [illegible] have been in such control of [illegible] as to know what was [illegible] and have also applied some [illegible] that are being introduced [illegible].

Now that the housecleaning has [illegible] started it is to be expected that it will be continued until a complete [illegible] satisfactory job has been accomplished. Having been disclosed that the school needs it, the state will be [illegible] with nothing less.

THE PRICE OF LAXITY

Whenever there develops a situation where a trusted employe of a banking institution embezzles a large sum of money, it is inevitable that there should be determined inquiry as to where the responsibility for such exists. The person who takes the money is of course directly at fault but there must be something the matter with the method of keeping a check upon conditions when such peculations go on over a considerable period of time. The bank at Northampton, Mass., which has been closed because the head of the savings department appropriated so much of the funds, seems to have been a conspicuous example of what ought not to be. It is pointed out by the state bank commissioner that this was an institution where methods used in conducting the business were not such as to bear the endorsement of the commissioner. Attention having been called to them by the state examiners it was the duty of the bank officials to make the most of the advice and establish the needed safeguards. It doesn't appear that it was done. The objectionable methods which made it impossible to tell whether funds were being taken by employes, were continued apparently in the belief that there was no reason to suspect anyone and that as long as there wasn't there was no need of putting in a new system.

Now that the disclosure has come and the bank stands to be a large loser it is a case of the commissioner placing much fault at the feet of the bank officials for not following his advice, but, on the other hand, there are others who feel that the state bank department, knowing that the business methods of that particular bank were bad and conducive to trouble, should have done more than simply suggest the change, and if he didn't have that authority it is high time that it was given him.

When it disclosed that one person can break down the protection that is supposed to be thrown about the funds of depositors, it is assuming much responsibility when those in command fail to meet requirements. There cannot be too much care placed about the savings of the public and when any weakness in banking methods can be pointed out there should be an eagerness to make the detection of any irregularities as easy as possible.

GETTING UNIFORMITY

In connection with the effort to control the sale of firearms, it was believed that the situation had been effectively met in New York city by the enactment of the Sullivan law, which prohibited the possession of pistols without permits. That was all right so far as New York was concerned but those who needed guns in their business of crime found it quite as easy to go outside of the state and acquire all the weapons they needed. The law was thus looked upon as restricting the individual in the protection he could give to his home but causing little or no embarrassment to the criminal.

The idea was then hit upon of denying the use of the mails to those who desired to send firearms from one point to another. Whether cities and states adopted regulations restricting the sale it was found that persons could get around the law by purchasing their guns by mail. No one knew they had them and they were not obliged to get a permit or to give their name and address to the one from whom they purchased the pistol. The exclusion of small arms from the mails was a step in the way of federal control, but no sooner was it put into operation than it was realized that the very same thing could be done through the express companies.

Recognizing the situation, there were many mail order houses which went out of the business of selling small arms, but it was apparent that in the endeavor to bring about control of such sales much difficulty was encountered and many more than the criminals were not disposed to lend their cooperation.

At its session at Chicago, the commissioners on uniform laws in national conference advanced the idea of having all states adopt a uniform law requiring permits for the possession of guns and registration of all purchases of such weapons. The idea is a good one if it can be carried out, but when we stop to think of the difficulties ahead of any such uniform action it is not an encouraging outlook. Getting all states, which may or may not look at the problem in the same light, to agree upon such a law is one way of avoiding federal legislation, but that doesn't necessarily grease the ways.

KEEPING DOWN ACCIDENTS

We are again approaching the season of the year when Monday morning papers can be expected to contain many accounts of week-end accidents. New Haven produced a list of 12 for the last week end. No fatalities were recorded in that group but four of the cases were regarded as serious.

This is not only the season of more motor vehicles in the highway, but, with the annual increase in the number of cars, it can be expected that there will be more autos than there were last spring. This means, if it means anything, that there must be a greater degree of care exercised by the auto drivers than a year ago. It is necessary to give closer attention to the highway conditions, to watch the traffic closely, to detect the signals or inclinations of the driver ahead, and to so keep within the regulations and speed as to be able to meet emergency conditions, although they may be the fault of the other fellow.

It has been repeatedly demonstrated that it is impossible to guide a car safely unless attention is given to the task. It isn't possible to be looking out of the back window, to be dreaming or going along with one's eyes shut and expect that nothing will happen. Accidents can be avoided just as easily as they occur. It calls for alertness on the part of the person at the wheel. The automobile is not like a horse than can be left to its own guidance. It is necessary to measure up to the responsibilities, necessary to respect the rules and regulations, to give the other fellow a chance and to liberally practice the Golden Rule.

Reckless driving figures prominently in the week-end accidents. That in itself explains the reasons for so many deaths, so many injuries, so many accidents. With more cars in the highways the only way to keep down the accidents is to use more care.

WASHINGTON AFFAIRS

(Special to The Bulletin)

WASHINGTON, March 31—Probably nothing could show the high regard and warm personal affection President Hoover holds for Representative John Q. Tilson as effectively as the insistance that the colonel shall spend the next few weeks as a white house guest, while recovering from the serious illness that took him off his feet just as the tariff bill was acted on by the senate.

As is well known, Tilson had a sudden chill, followed by a severe attack of grippe. He was ordered to the Naval hospital by the white house physician whom the president hurriedly sent to Tilson's aid, in the absence of Mrs. Tilson, who sailed for France a few days before. Mrs. Tilson goes to bring home their young daughter who is at school in France.

Now the President and Mrs. Hoover have taken Colonel Tilson under their wing, and will see to it that he has "every comfort of home," during convalescence, as their guest at the white house. Tilson will be on his feet again very soon, ready to take the lead in the tariff fight that will come as soon as the bill gets out of the hands of the conferees.

Senators Bingham and Walcott were guests at the luncheon given this week by Dr. Gilbert Grosvenor in compliment to Dr. Hugo Eckener, who came to this country in order to receive the gold medal of the National Geographic society, which was presented to him the same evening.

The luncheon was informal, as the 30 days' mourning for Mr. Taft have not yet expired. The long list of luncheon guests included the names of some of the most distinguished scientists and educators of the entire country.

When Mr. Hoover was secretary of commerce he began to work out a plan by which the boy of today, who has a "mechanical mind," can get ideas, material and opportunity to exercise it in school, and elsewhere, through the help of Uncle Sam.

These boys call themselves junior mechanics, and there are classes held at the department of commerce to give the start in the right direction, and even supply them with material, for cast-off boxes and scraps and small pieces of wood are made available for their use. President Hoover believes that the modern boy—or girl—should have every possible opportunity for education and advancement along the line of their best efforts. Instead of burning old boxes and other wooden containers, the president advocates, and is having carried out, the policy of saving them, of collecting them and giving them free storage in the basement of the great Commerce building, and he also advocates that a similar plan be adopted in cities and towns, and schools of various grades. The president believes the average boy wants a hammer, a saw and a plane, and that he ought to have them in order to make a workman of himself along useful lines.

The basement of the department of commerce has a full-fledged workshop where the boys can work and plan work. Dry goods boxes, smaller boxes, dog houses, fireless cookers, trellises, garden fixings and a thousand and one mechanical things that are useful are made down there, to the delight of the boys.

Boys' clubs are taking it up, and cooperating with the department in both collecting wood, and taking advantage of opportunity and instruction. Fireless cookers have been the prime favorites, for here mother, father and all the family can be made to take interest.

The president has said in his recent addresses that the youth of a nation should be given every opportunity for education and self-help, and the department of commerce is doing all it can to carry out those ideas.

"No, Mrs. McCormick is not here. She is home in Illinois, campaigning at the rate of ten or more speeches a day to defeat Senator Deneen for nomination at the April primaries. She is ambitious to be the first woman elected to the senate and also to get even with Deneen, who defeated her late husband from reelection to that body." I explained this to a friend from the north who wanted me to point out to her the eight "women congressmen" as they are called.

I go on, "Mrs. McCormick is using every known political tool to till the soil for election to the senate." "Well," said my friend, "if I can't see her, tell me about her and what she looks like." Then she settled comfortably back in her seat in the front row of the house gallery.

I began by saying, "Mrs. McCormick is tall, has black hair, a long face and dresses in black with much white." "Yes?" replied the lady inquiringly, and waited for more. Then I added she has the habit of leaning on the desk, or table, when speaking, with her fingers spread wide apart, while she sways back and forth a bit as if on tip-toe. Sometimes she tells mostly stories, then breaks into an old-fashioned spread eagle campaign speech after the fashion of her distinguished father, Mark Hanna.

"Where is Ruth Bryan Owen?" asked the lady at my side. "She, too, is out of town. Mrs. Owen is making a series of speeches, much after the fashion of her distinguished father, William Jennings Bryan, whom she resembles in many ways. She has his oratorical mouth and his political ambitions, coupled with dramatic manners. She has been 'doing Florida' with the idea of being a senatorial candidate in 1932."

Had Mrs. Owen been in her seat I should have pointed out a tall, stockily-built lady whose skirts are still of the short variety, whose iron gray hair is bobbed, yet who carries herself with considerable poise and assurance. She, like Mrs. McCormick, is thoroughly trained in politics.

"Can you see a woman pacing up and down that private lobby back of the house chamber?" was my next question. "Well, that is Mrs. Pratt of New York. She is quiet in manner but rather modern in type. When she turns this way you will see that the cigarette she is smoking is in a very long holder of either amber or ivory. She loves political life, has held office in the New York city government, has so many millions of dollars it would need an adding machine to count them. She knows politics to the 'steenth degree, has dark bobbed hair, wears clothes of the latest cut and was born in Massachusetts."

Glancing over to the democratic side of the house we saw Mrs. Norton of New Jersey, waiting to answer her name when the next vote was taken. We don't know what the measure was but feel sure Mrs. Norton would vote in strict party regularity. She has a level head, is wringing wet on the prohibition question, has had much political experience in her home state, and follows the democratic party leaders to the finish.

"Who is that woman in black, wearing a beautiful white flower on her shoulder, her hair done in a soft coil, and who, though busy signing letters while waiting to vote, takes time to give a cordial word of greeting and a warm smile to everyone who stops to chat on their way up the aisle," asked the lady from the north.

"Oh, that is Mrs. Rogers from Massachusetts, a tireless worker for New England and who of large means and extremely well dressed, lives up to her slogan, 'patronize New England industries,' and refuses to wear goods made elsewhere that can be obtained in her own locality. Mrs. Rogers, like Mrs. Kahn of California, who is sitting beside her, is of the 'smokeless and bobless variety.' They both do their congressional work 'man-fashion' but have not lost one bit of the feminine touch. They are up to date but not extremists."

Just then a small woman dressed in black, but with gay touches of bright color, entered the chamber. "That is Mrs. Langley of Kentucky," I explain as I call attention to her remarkable black hair. "And way back near that gallery almost opposite us you can see Mrs. Oldfield of Arkansas, who is filling out the term her late husband would have served. She refuses to run for reelection. She says she is glad she came, but will be still more glad to get back to her home in Arkansas.

"Of the eight congresswomen we find all but Mrs. Oldfield desire to remain in political active life. Mrs. McCormick will run for the senate and the other six women are announced candidates for reelection in their respective states."

"Fine," remarked the lady from the north. "I hope they all win." "Now we will listen to the debate," said I. "Now we will go to lunch," said she with a strong emphasis on the word "now."

And we did.

A CHANCE ACQUAINTANCE

Alberta Mandell accepted her mother's plans for the day with a sigh. If only she could think of a way to evade this luncheon.

"I hope you'll mention that your mother's father had more than a passing interest in archaeology and that at one time he accompanied an expedition into the heart of the Andes," cautioned Mrs. Mandell.

Alberta promised wearily to remember and thought what a beautiful fall day it was to waste on meeting a professor even though the invitation had come from the impeccable Mrs. Cartmell, who maintained an all-year-around country home.

"And, above all, a professor whose hobby is archaeology," she said to herself. "No doubt he'll look like a mushroom and wear a vest, a bow tie and horn-rimmed glasses."

As she climbed into her automobile her mother again reminded her: "Don't forget to mention that your mother's father—"

"No, darling, I shan't forget."

In preference to taking the paved state highway to reach the Cartmell estate, Alberta chose a winding gravel road which followed a winding course through stretches of field and woodland. "It's strange how eager mother is for me to meet uninteresting men, but let a heavenly dancer or a divine looking fellow like Billy Nevins appear on the horizon and her disposition becomes absolutely heathenish." For a moment memories of Billy lightened Alberta's dismal anticipations for the forthcoming luncheon, then suddenly, but all too late, she encountered a smattering of broken glass just ahead of her car.

The roadster plowed through the thick of it, and a moment later two tires went "whang." Alberta stopped the car and viewed the damage.

"I must find a telephone," she decided and looked back over the stretch of road. There was no house in sight. She looked ahead. There was no house in sight in that direction either, but in the distance the highway harbored a splotch of motion.

"A man, walking this way." Alberta's first sensation was relief, her second dread. What if he chanced to be a dangerous character! She waited, shivered and thought that she would be glad for any company, even the professor's just then.

As the hiker approached she perceived that he was hatless, that he wore knickers, that his face was young and handsome, and that his figure suggested the powerful strength of one accustomed to the great outdoors.

"Having trouble?" he called. And suddenly Alberta was confident that one possessing a voice as deep and courteous as his was not a character to fear.

"I guess you'd call it trouble," she replied, "with one spare and two flat tires. A telephone seems to be the only solution, but to find one is a problem."

"I'll be glad to go back for you," offered the stranger, "but it's deucedly lonely here. Perhaps you'll walk along with me. I can at least offer you the protection of company."

"How did you ever happen along?" she asked as they swung over the road together.

"I was taking a hike to brace me against an ordeal," he laughed. "This afternoon I have to face a party with a pedigree."

"Oh," cried Alberta, "we've something in common then. I'm facing a luncheon engagement myself with an old professor who hunts fossils for a pastime." They rounded a bend in the road and came in sight of a house. A sharp cry fell from Alberta's lips.

"That's Mrs. Cartmell's, where I'm going for lunch." But in the wake of her surprise crept a tinge of regret. Too soon she was reaching the parting of the ways with this interesting stranger. By the entrance gate she paused.

"It was so kind of you to come with me. Thank you and good-by."

"You're welcome, but I hope it's not good-by," grinned the chance acquaintance. "You see, I'm the professor, and I am also going to Mrs. Cartmell's for lunch. I'll do my best to make you forget my hobby."

In stupefied amazement Alberta regarded her companion, then laughingly replied: "And I'll do my best to make you forget my ancestors."—Exchange.

A Washington Bystander

By KIRKE L. SIMPSON
Associated Press Staff Writer

WASHINGTON, March 31—Afloat again with rejuvenated hull after three years in dock, "Old Ironsides," hero ship of the revolutionary war, narrowly escaped the inglorious role of a mere naval museum, moored in Boston navy yard.

By virtue of congressional action it now seems she will again take the seas carrying her own historic story to many American ports.

That was what former Naval Secretary Curtis Wilbur and the late Admiral Eberle planned years ago. As class mates at Annapolis, both men had a love for past glories of the sea. They had raced over the tops of old frigates together, tallied on to braces to wear ship when the lift and swing of "Away Rio" or "Whiskey for my Johnnie" or many another old sea chanty was a vital part of sailoring.

Eberle had hoped to see the day when the old Constitution again put to sea under her own towering canvas. He was almost the last of Uncle Sam's seadogs who knew and loved the thrill of wind driven square-riggers. He had hoped even to walk the quarter deck of the old fighting ship as his last sea command.

A Lost Art

So far in the past has the art of sailing ship building and rigging gone that it was difficult to gather together enough shipwrights and sailmakers to put "Old Ironsides" back as she was in her heroic days. Every beach town of New England was combed to muster at Boston a group of gnarled old shellbacks to do the job. And when the hull had been rebuilt, money to complete the task of refitting for sea was not in sight. The sources of popular subscription seemed dried up.

It came to a point where the odd crew of old men at Boston would have had to be demobilized.

"Most of them were recruited from the old shipbuilders of Maine and Massachusetts," Representative French told a senate committee in appealing for emergency funds.

"And if you put it off another year, or six months, or three months, the men competent to rig her will return to their homes," Representative Underhill added. "It will be hard to reassemble them."

Strenuous efforts to enlist men of wealth in the project failed, Underhill said. French thought the slowness with which money came in was perhaps due to Secretary Wilbur's declarations in urging the original bill that congress was willing to provide any money not voluntarily contributed.

But the senate committee did come to the rescue and "Old Ironsides" will some day fly again the commission pennant she hauled down more than a century ago

"Using Difficulty"

SCRIPTURE: Memory Verse: "I take pleasure in weakness" (II Corinthians 12:10).

Read: II Corinthians 12:1-10.

MEDITATION: St. Paul saw in his affliction an opportunity for finding joy. Sorrow and joy are inseparable. Lack of difficulty is not as desirable as we sometimes thoughtlessly assume. A clever story is told of a comfort-loving man who died and was borne to the other world, where he awoke to find every wish gratified. He had a mansion suited to his taste, an unlimited wardrobe, a laden table, boundless entertainment. There was no effort, no struggle, no pain. He became bored beyond relief and exclaimed to his private attendant, "I can't stand this everlasting bliss. I want to want things I can't have. I want to go to hell." To which the attendant with a shrug of his shoulders replied: "And wherever do you think you are, sir?" To throw hardship out of life is to throw out likewise its zest and relish.

PRAYER: O Lord, help us to be master-builders with Thyself. Let all the events of the day become material for our valiant spirits. Give us a robust faith that by Thine aid we may convert all things to good and make all things work together for good. Amen.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Happy Birthday To Twenty-Five Million.

Mr. Editor: One of the many things that should call for rejoicing in the hearts of all true American people today is the fact that 25,000,000 boys and girls have been born in this country since the 18th amendment became effective in January, 1920. The children of this decade now compose nearly a quarter of the entire population of the country. They are the first of this generation to whom the once common sights of the depravity and misery caused by the drink traffic will not be an ordinary accepted incident. It is for these that the 18th amendment makes it possible never to know the wreck of alcohol in themselves or families or friends. They will never see the number of drunkards in this country that their parents' generation saw.

Before prohibition, this country was spending three times as much money for drink as it spent on running the entire government including the army and navy. Our drink bill was $2,000,000,000 a year, which poured into American throats a stream of intoxicating liquor that would have filled a ditch three feet deep, six feet wide, and longer than the distance from New York to Seattle. It caused drunkenness, poverty, misery and crime, while hand in hand with the drink business went an unspeakable organization for commercialized vice. In this last decade many of the effects of the saloon era have disappeared due to prohibition. Our children are growing up in a country enriched by the fact that the liquor traffic is an illegal business, and is meeting the fate of all outlaws. The results of prohibition, even imperfectly enforced, have been marked. The saloons disappeared, there is less drunkenness, less vice, more wages, less poverty, happier homes, more homes, better children, better health, a happier country. Each of these statements is made from census statistics, or as a result of scientific research, by recognized authorities. Most of the $2,000,000,000 spent for liquor is now diverted to home owning, home furnishings, automobiles and savings. New homes have increased faster than new families. We have the world's highest standards of living, we have several times more automobiles than all the rest of the world combined—almost an automobile per family.

It is not only in material welfare that followed prohibition in this first decade. There are moral and spiritual values. Prohibition is a child welfare measure. Cases of cruelty are disappearing. Neglect of children, measured by court and charity cases have been cut in half. Prohibition has increased our health, the general death rate is low, while the enormous expansion in education is well known.

All around the world people are looking enviously at America, free from the curse of the saloon. The world knows we are the wealthiest nation; much of our wealth is due to the fact that money once spent in saloons is mainly spent toward home betterments or invested in valuable property. We work better, produce more and get more out of our work, our churches are gaining in members and in spirit, and while other nations are devising ways and means of meeting untold burdens, we alone have had a surplus in our national treasury. We have eliminated practically all war taxes and have made heavy reductions in our federal income taxes. The people of this country are happier, wealthier and healthier than any other people on earth. Think this over fellow-citizens, just picture our own city a decade ago, the new homes now being built, schools being built, three within the last six years and now the great demand for more. The answer to this is so plain that no one should have to be told that more and more our children are attending school where in the past decades they went to work, while father spent his money in the saloon. Just notice the furniture stores and radio stores and the numberless shoe stores where now the little bare feet of the children are protected from the cold with the money that went into the saloon-keepers till, but remember also that the saloon-keeper's children had clothes, education, even college, while the poor drinking man's children and wives were often hungry. When you sit down with your family and enjoy the comforts of this year, 1930, just breathe a prayer of gratitude to God and the men of that day in Jan. 16, 1920 who by their vote gave our children of this decade a freedom such as our country had never known before and may we be loyal, 100 per cent Americans and help enforce the law of prohibition, which has enriched our lives, our homes and our country.

YOUR HEALTH

A Personal Message to Each Reader
By Franklin Martin, M. D., Chicago,
Chairman of the Board of Directors,
Gorgas Memorial Institute.

(From Gorgas Memorial Institute)

One of the great satisfactions that comes to the staff of the Gorgas Memorial Institute is when we hear from readers who thank us for what we are doing. We gather health information from eminent physicians, dentists, nurses and other leaders in the field of health; we distribute it through newspapers which are thoughtful about the health of their communities; thus we reach readers who care enough about their personal and family health to try to learn something about preventing disability. But we often wish there were ways in which we could get in closer touch with you who read these health articles; could have your suggestions of special topics you would like discussed.

Of course the Gorgas Memorial Institute cannot prescribe for anyone or give advice as to particular types of treatment. We are not clinic, but are organized to persuade people who are apparently healthy that it is wise for them to prevent illness by getting regular health audits.

At the same time, we can ask the busy men and women who take valuable time to write articles, for which they receive only our thanks, to write about particular subjects that interest you, and we shall gladly do this if you will suggest the subjects you want to read about.

If you met me or someone else from the Gorgas Memorial Institute I hope that you would say: "I like your articles." But since we can meet very few, I suggest that you each send us a postal card with a message something like this: "I read your articles in the (name of the paper) and enjoy them. I hope that you will include one soon on (mention the topic or topics you want discussed)." If you have any other messages for us we shall be glad to receive them. Then write your name and address and mail the card to the Gorgas Memorial Institute, 1331 G street, N. W., Washington, D. C.

These articles are for your information and better understanding of your personal health. We want them to be as useful to you as we can make them. And you can help us do that.

Stories That Recall Others

Nervous

A car was hitting a merry clip down the street. The driver, a middle-aged man, was of a very nervous temperament. Suddenly the car ahead of him pulled to the curb, the driver opening the door on the left hand side in order to alight.

Without stopping to think the man with a nervous temperament shouted: "That's right, that's right, stick your head out there and get your door knocked off!"

Grief

The two downy chicks that had started out as charming playthings had grown into two not so cute but more appetizing frie , so the family decided that before going on their vacation the chickens should grace the skillet.

Mary's mother was almost afraid to tell her of the intended fate of the fowls and she was distressed to find the little girl in tears after the execution.

"Honey, don't cry. We really couldn't keep the chickens in town any longer," she comforted.

Observation cars with greater capacity than in former years will be operated by the New Haven railroad during the Yale-Harvard varsity race on the Thames in June.

Thirty-five flat cars, each 40 feet long and with steel underframe, are being fitted at Readville, Mass., for observation duty. Each car will have a capacity of 106 persons, 18 more than the capacity of each car in service at the race last year. The 35 cars to be used for the varsity race will have a total capacity of 3,710 persons.

The observation cars will be used for the Derby regatta on the Housatonic river and the Poughkeepsie regatta on the Hudson river. Following the racing season the observation fittings will be removed and the cars will be used in freight service.

FINED $200 WITH HALF OF THE FINE REMITTED

In the city court Monday morning, Leon Buzenski, 36, of the Greeneville section, was fined $200 and costs on a charge of driving while under the influence of liquor. Half of the fine was remitted because of the ract that Buzenski has five small children to support and no visible means of raising a $200 fine. He was arrested on West Thames street Saturday afternoon by State Police Officer Arthur Whitmarsh.

Last week Buzenski appeared in the city court as complainant against a neighbor, who it was alleged, gave him a severe beating. At the time the case was called both complainant and accused were so much under the influence of liquor that the trial was postponed until a later date.

BANK MAN TELLS CONTACT CLUB ABOUT FIELD SAVINGS BANKS FILL

Arthur E. Story, assistant secretary and assistant treasurer of the Chelsea Savings bank, was the speaker Monday at the luncheon and meeting of the Contact club at the Wauregan hotel, giving a very informing talk upon "The Established Mutual Savings Bank and Some of Its Phases." The subject was one of special interest to the club members as Norwich has three savings banks which annually show an increase in deposits and the importance of the service they render to the community.

Mr. Story was given a rising vote of thanks for his splendid talk. President E. O. Rodier presided at the meeting, Frederick Geer was at the piano and Charles W. Pearson was the song leader.

Address by Bank Officer

I npart Mr. Story spoke as follows:

To delve into the pioneer days of the savings bank movement would consume much time, but brief reference might be pertinent.

England and Germany each claims the honor of originating the idea, about the year 1765; but the first organized savings bank of which we have a truly authentic record was established in England in 1804.

The records of the first savings banks, of England and Europe, show the plan was a success. The banks met a popular need and served their purposes armirably. Invariably these banks were organized, and in general, controlled by the clergy. Without doubt the object of this was, first, to install habits of thrift and industry among the people, and second, as a result of the thrift, to take from the church the burden which poverty placed upon the finances and support. It was in a philanthropic spirit, but the success of the movement was due largely to the desire on the part of the thrifty, to save, to lay by, to prepare a reserve for the future, for while philanthropy may establish, thrift must sustain.

Over Eight Billions In Savings

As our young republic took on expansion, the savings bank motive came across the Atlantic and the early history of our country shows the confidence with which it was received. The first to be chartered in America was started in Philadelphia in 1816, the second in Boston in 1817 and the third in New York in 1819. The incentive to organize these types of banks spread throughout the United States and the growth, in number of banks and in size, made rapid progress. The mutual savings bank, the oldest and best known of the savings bank thought, came into its own and, regardless of whatever may have been the primary purposes of the founders, these mutual savings banks today take their proud place in the first ranks of the monetary powers of this country. On Jan. 1, 1929, the last figures which I find available, deposits in mutual savings banks in the United States had reached $8,796,409,761 and depositors numbered 11,791,653. These resources are larger than our whole national wealth of 100 years ago. In this development, they have retained the beneficent features which characterized their first years, so, that today, may be found in them the savings of the humblest toiler with his hard earned, carefully saved pennies, as well as the funds of those of many times his means. The growth of these institutions has shown that no more important element in the economic life of the country exists, than in the resourcefulness and undivided independence, represented by the billions of dollars on deposit in the savings banks of the United States and by savings banks, so stated, I mean the mutual savings banks, the type of any one of the three savings banks of this city; banks which are owned absolutely and solely by the depositors. The small depositor, as well as the large one, should realize this fact for, by this mutual membership, they are, each and every one, a stockholder, as it were, in proportion to their savings or deposit account.

There are no other stockholders and no other forms of stock ownership for sale or barter. It is the money of these depositors, grouped together, that furnishes the sinking funds as a form of capital for these banks. There are no other outside funds. With their deposits they enter into a contest, so to speak, with the banks to accept the terms of the by-laws governing the same. The banks in return accept the same and hold the funds deposited as a sacred trust for investment and return on demand.

Savings Account Handy Asset

Its adaptability to the various requirements of the people and the convenience with which it can be opened and maintained, make a savings account in a mutual savings bank the most ideal plan for saving in use today. With the first deposit a passbook is issued, with the by-laws of the bank noted therein. In this book are entered all deposits and withdrawals and the balance shows the amount on hand. A small account, as well as one many times its size, is always welcomed and the same courtesy extended to all. By law, no savings bank in Connecticut shall secure for deposit from any depositor, in any period of three years, any sum or sums, which, exclusive of withdrawals and interest credited, shall exceed $10,000. This sum of $10,000 can be taken in one deposit, or made at various times, to make up this amount. Two persons wishing to hold their money in common may open a joint account "Payable to either or to the survivor." Either may make withdrawals and, in case of death of one, the money on deposit at once becomes the absolute property of the survivor and, in that formality, without probate court jurisdiction or inheritance tax payment. Accounts may be opened in names of estates, trust funds, guardianships, societies, corporations and business firms, payments being made to authorized officers only. All state of Connecticut taxes on savings bank accounts are paid by the banks. Deposits may be made by cash, check, or money order either in person or by messenger or mail. Depositing by mail is a most convenient form for those living at distant points or temporarily away from home. All money received by banks in this locality, deposited on or before the fifth business day of the month, will draw interest from the first day of that month.

Identification and Protection

At the time the account is opened an identification card is customarily executed by the depositors, giving thereon a specimen of their signature and a record of certain personal information. In case depositors are unable to write, many banks employ fingerprint systems to obtain definite fingerprints on signature cards in place of signatures. At the time of payments, signatures on orders are compared with those on signature cards and if unable to write the depositor makes "his mark" in presence of witness who can write, and fingerprint impression, if that system is used, is taken to be compared with original fingerprint on file, and this is a very positive means of identification. At the time of withdrawals passbook must always be presented that withdrawal entries can be made on same and balance verified.

If pass book is lost the bank should be immediately notified so that payment on same can be stopped. Provided the pass book cannot be found in reasonable time a new book is issued according to law, which in substance, is, that upon the bank having received notice to the effect that book has been lost or stolen, shall see to it that said fact is published once each week for three successively alternate weeks in a newspaper published in the town in which the bank is located. If such book shall not be presented to the bank within two months after date of first advertisement, as aforesaid, the bank can then issue a duplicate book. The advertising is usually done by the bank and cost of same paid by the depositor.

Under State Supervision

The savings banks of Connecticut are under the supervision of the state bank commissioner who is appointed by the governor. He is a man highly trained for his office which, with his able staff of assistants and examiners, he conducts in a most efficient manner. The direct management of these banks is under a board of directors or trustees, composed of the most influential and successful business men of the community, who meet once a week to discuss and act upon affairs of the banks. These directors or trustees and the officers of the bank are elected by the incorporators, who meet in annual meeting once a year and are the direct representatives of the depositors. Of course the great responsibility falls on him who is the active head of the respective institution, be he the president or treasurer. The custody of the funds and affairs are in his care and his administration duties are many. The summary of his activities is regularly acquainted to the directors or trustees for their actions thereon. The president is chairman of the board, if he is not the active head of the bank, is in close touch with the administration matters before being brought to the meetings of his board, and gives freely of his time and talent for the interests of the bank. It is at these meetings that applications for loans and other bank investments, are carefully gone over and action taken for benefit of the institution, community and applicant. The speaker well knows the unity of interest and helpful understanding that exists among these members.

The affairs of the banks are gone over of recent years, twice a year, by examiners from the office of the state bank commissioner, who count and examine all securities, moneys and books of the bank. This department also takes off a trial balance of the depositor's ledgers once each five years and frequently calls for reports of the bank's conditions, which are carefully analyzed. The state law requires an examination Oct. 1 of each year by two auditors who are not directors, managers or trustees of the bank. Also examinations are made by representatives of the incorporators firm to payments of each dividend by trial balances of ledgers taken off at each dividend period, or more often. So you will see that a most careful check is made of the bank's officers and with this, the most modern results, with protection systems, house the securities and funds, and every conceivable guard taken against loss by fraud or other means. Officers and clerks are heavily bonded, insurances carried against fire, theft, hold-ups, check raising and losses by mail, the fullest protection being maintained for those entrusting their money.

Dividends From Profits

The profits of these mutual savings banks, owned solely by its depositors, are for them only. Each six months, or quarterly, as the case may be, and as of stated dividend periods of the respective banks, a dividend is declared out of the previous six months or three months earnings, after operating expenses have been paid and sufficient amount set aside for reserve fund, to meet any contingencies that might arise. Dividends not withdrawn are added to principal of deposit and draw regular rate of interest thereafter. The highest rate possible is declared, consistent with safety. Fortunate, indeed, have been the returns made to depositors in our local savings banks. For many years they have received rates of interest, as dividends, favorable to any section and above most of them. The prevailing local rate of 5 per cent is a splendid return of one's money and the added strength of the large surplus or reserve accounts, carried by these banks the greatest source of comfort and security to them.

As to Investments

The statutes of this state regulate how the entrusted funds, the deposits, of our mutual savings banks shall be invested and guarded. In these laws great protection and safety is afforded but there are many fields of development of desired policies and of conduct of services that could be rendered to patrons which are denied the mutual savings bank by the laws of Connecticut and it is hoped that further grants may be made that will meet some of these desires. Investments are allowed in first mortgage loans, secured by unencumbered real estate, loans to Connecticut cities, towns, counties and state, loans on stocks and bonds of corporations which have paid dividends of 4 per cent or more for two years preceding the making of loan, in bonds of United States government, United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, Republic of France, Dominion of Canada and its provinces, certain state bonds, bonds of all Connecticut cities and towns, bonds of other cities and towns which meet certain specified requirements, stocks of Connecticut banks and certain stipulated banks out of Connecticut and bankers' acceptances. Twice each year the state bank commissioner sends to the savings banks certificates, listing bonds which are legal investments for savings banks of Connecticut. Each one of you know the respect this term "Legal Investment for Savings Banks" holds, whether buying for yourself or investing for your friends. It means safety. Nice investments are diversified as to character and in many instances savings banks are, by law, limited as to the percentage of their deposits and surplus which can be invested in them. For instance they may invest not exceeding ten per cent of their deposits and surplus in obligations of Great Britain and Ireland, Government of France and the Government of Canada and its finances, not exceeding two (2) per cent of the deposits and surplus in bonds of telephone companies in Connecticut, in New York and New England states, outside of Conn., etc., etc., in other fields. The limit of investment in first mortgages on unencumbered real estate is to an amount not in excess of 75 per cent of its deposits and surplus. Safety of principal, with a return consistent with that safety has always held the strongest appeal, with diversification, as another strong guard. Investments in these bonds well selected as to their character and marketability are usually so diversified as to maturities as to keep the bank in condition to meet sudden needs and to pay depositors on demand when they are asked to do so. As a secondary defense with the cash reserve carried, bankers' acceptances and short time maturities are fairly liquid. In no investments can a savings bank of this state, receive a return greater than 6 per cent; that is the law.

Mortgages on Real Estate

There is a predominancy in mortgage loans on real estate among the mutual savings banks. It must be acknowledged that every building erected with such a loan benefits the entire community. It helps to erect new buildings of all kinds, to modernize structures, be they for factories, stores or offices, in making changes for appearance and for more and better working spaces. If it is for a home, it benefits the community in a double sense. While the law limits the amount that can be loaned to 60 per cent of appraiser value, yet the grant encourages and makes possible building and improvements which in many instances could hardly be otherwise entertained. Think of the thousands of homes and buildings so built. These loans are made conservatively by the savings banks and most careful appraisal made by representatives well versed in land and structural values, with favors to none, save those whose funds they are investing. In carrying out the real estate loans, which must have the approval of the board of directors or trustees, careful search of the title of property is made by the bank's attorney, who, by the way is the bank referee in all legal matters. He must make sure of the title of property for no taxes, attachments, liens, assessments, judgments, or other encumbrances can be allowed to be due or to exist when mortgage papers are taken over. The cost of the search is small and many errors in title are often found and corrected. With the mortgage loan made it becomes a trust between borrower and lender to see that insurance policies covering the property are kept in force, taxes paid, interest promptly cared for and the title kept clear of all encumbrances. The form of mortgage is a first mortgage, of course, and conservatively placed is a high grade form of investment. It is customary to amortize these loans, that is to call for payments on principal of a small amount each six months in proportion to loan made in order to encourage the borrower to reduce the debt and also to give new funds for other loans. These payments also increase depreciation and shrinking values. Call is always exercises to see that the property is kept up and that land values are not lessening, for this is a condition that may occur and must be closely watched. If, for any reasons, values. Call is always exercised to see the duty of the bank to see that the mortgage is not jeopardized and that the margin of equity above the mortgage shall afford at all times ample means for the protection granted the bank by law.

Loans On Securities

In making loans to customers on securities, the laws of the state define what kind of bonds and stocks may be offered as collateral. These securities must be of a class readily marketable and loans can not be made on them in excess of 80 per cent of a market value, most carefully placed. Constant watch is kept to see that the equity of 20 per cent is at all times maintained. Perhaps one of the simplest forms of security for a loan is the pass book of the savings bank. Savings banks, as a rule, loan up to the face value of their own books, for they most certainly know that the book when verified as to amount of principal due and if free from attachment, is worth every nickle represented in the balance column. Then, too, the customer is able to save the dividend, or interest, which has accrued on his deposit account, on the desired amount to be loaned and he borrows at a very small rate of interest above the dividend rate of the bank. For instance, while payment of 6 per cent is made for the loan of a specified sum, this same amount, in deposit work, earns the regular bank dividend, say of 5 per cent, which makes an actual cost of but 1 per cent for the loan and leaves the bank balance of book undisturbed. Loans made on collateral, such as pass books of savings banks, are in varying amounts and are frequently made as low as $10.00 It must be borne in mind that all loans of whatever nature are subject to approval of the board of directors or trustees. They are made on notes of the demand form, but, if collateral, are secured by signed orders, powers of attorney, on proper forms of conveyance, which accompany the collateral accepted. No officer, director, trustee or incorporator can borrow or be financially interested in any loans made.

In whatever form the investments or loans of a mutual savings bank are made it is bound to bring enjoyment to the depositors of the bank who, in a measure, be it small or large as the deposit may be, can but realize what expansion this money is making, what joy it is giving to the home, to property owners, and to enterprises in general. How, when they ride on the railways or enjoy the greatest comforts of lighting, electricity, better schools, state and municipal conditions, must they have the feeling of satisfaction that comes to those who are assisting in improving and bettering affairs. How the glow of happiness must come to them, when they can but know that they are the owners, b, their savings deposits, of here a little and there a little, in all of these things that make for the comfort and security of our home, state and country. And with that, to appreciate that their funds on deposit, which have helped make these things possible, have been earning for them for their further personal gain, dividends proportionate to their deposits.

Other Activities

I have in a general way and I hope with some interest, covered the main purposes and functions of the mutual savings bank. I will but touch on other activities. Possibly the safe deposit department, so long associated with savings banks, is worthy of special comment, for here is a most convenient way of holding in safe keeping valuable papers, policies, jewelry and other valuables and at a cost as low as $3.00 a year. The best protection possible is offered and little red tape is exercised. The renter, or his duly authorized agent, retain the keys and are the only ones who can in any way have access to rented box. Separate booths permit the utmost security and those in attendance are well versed in their duties and always willing to lend assistance, if needed. I will steal away for, but a moment, to make, perhaps, the first direct reference to the institution with which I am connected. Here is conducted a foreign exchange department, where money can be sent to any part of the world, by foreign draft, foreign money order, cable or radio. Travelers checks and letters of credit are issued, at small cost, which make a very desirable way of carrying money and are cashed without the slighted difficulty in any country here or abroad. The Christmas club of this bank is well known, being the oldest and the largest in this city. Last year, practically $100,000 was distributed to some 2,500 members. Think what this money meant at Christmas time, to members and merchants. $100,000 systematically saved and liberated at a time when it was most needed. Your merchants must have had a good word to say for us. Also vacation clubs, industrial thrift clubs and school clubs are operated. They each have their points of merit and bring out the great lessons taught by thrift, systematic savings. Industrial workers and parents of school children have voiced their appreciation time and time again. A travel department is maintained, whereby trips can be arranged to any port. The client makes known his desires, whether for a domestic or a foreign trip, and the necessary schedule covering the itinerary is prepared, tickets and hotel reservations secured, with no extra cost above those advertised or listed.

Mechanical Aids

You will hardly expect me to go into the details of the mechanical part of these institutions, for it would take unwarranted time to cover the same. But may I say that the savings banks are ever abreast of the times and have quite standardized their methods. Adding machines, calculating machines and other up-to-date devices have taken away many hard and arduous hours for the clerical forces and have caused records to be more quickly and efficiently handled. It is really marvelous the way thousands of transactions are carried out, particularly at dividend periods, and with the accuracy shown. It displays great ability on the part of those taking their parts and in the methods of equipment.

Service to the Community

The service a mutual savings bank renders its community does not depend entirely upon laws and rules which govern it, nor upon the lines of its regular duties, but largely upon the way it administers to the comfort, happiness and security of its citizens. Gentlemen, we invite the poor who have not had the advantages to learn certain lessons in the economies of life and we invite the rich to come to us, for the advice which may be rendered will be sound and kindly given at every one of these visitations. Whatever the subject, you will find the officials of these banks lending a willing hand and giving a wise, considerate counsel for a fee which can only be paid for by a worded expression of thanks. Countless references could be made to where many thousands of dollars have been saved our citizens through the wise advice of your savings banks officials. Could I but impress this check-up, for the temptations are many to reap a greater return for one's money and are often presented in the most fascinating forms. The vast sums which have been collected by the "get rich quick" schemes and by the efforts of shrewd advertising and glib manners of salesmen of bogus securities are most appalling. Your savings banks can help to stall from these pitfalls. It is their duty and they stand ever ready to help every man, woman and child, no matter what the color, class or creed. You will find in these institutions a uniform courtesy from the head officers down through the clerks. It should be expected and I assure you it exists. Not alone on financial affairs, can your savings banks help; they are willing to give advice freely on all matters of public welfare. Often advice is given on budget formation, property values, taxation and returns, insurance

DECLARES MAN'S CHOICES GOVERN WHAT HE IS

An especially interesting address on the topic, "Can We Change Human Nature?", was delivered by Rev. Dr. Charles N. Arbuckle, of Newton Center, Mass., Monday evening at the Central Baptist church. Rev. Dr. Arbuckle is giving a series of addresses at the Central church every evening this week under the auspices of the Young Men's Christian association in cooperation with the churches. Rev. Percy Kilmister, Rev. Charles H. Ricketts, Rev. Gurdon F. Bailey and Rev. H. H. Tompkins of Colchester participated in the service, which had a large attendance.

There is a great difference in opinion on the question, can we change human nature? said Rev. Dr. Arbuckle. A great many people have the idea that we can not, claiming that everything about us is pre-determined, i. e., your stature, your disposition, your sanity. You are what you are, you can not change yourself, they claim.

Jesus was interested in human nature, as is, the speaker said. He was interested in seeing what could be done, as we are, and believed there could be improvements. There is always a better way for every man and woman, Jesus believed.

Those who believe human nature cannot be changed, Rev. Dr. Arbuckle pointed out, have among their numbers, militarists, greedy employes, social snobs, racial aristocrats, political aristocrats, while the other group have a few Christians, Jesus, great peace lovers, poets, song writers, reformers, college professors and old philosophers.

You are what you are by virtue of the choices you make, he stated. You could have been a better man or woman if you wanted to be. You can be different if you want to be. You don't have to go through life in ignorance, if you don't want to. You can change this, if you will. But don't think you can be everything you want to be from what I say. You are limited!

This human nature, how rich it is. You are not born in sin or in good. You are born with the disposition to sin and to be good. You are born in neutral. You can go fast or slow. There is a good man in every boy and a bad man in every boy. Men are inclined to do good things more than they are inclined to do bad things.

The Truth About Fat

Science has found that excess fat is largely due to a weakened gland. Now physicians the world over, in treating obesity, combat that major cause. Starvation is not advised.

The chief factors they use are embodied in Marmola prescription tablets. People have used them for 22 years—millions of boxes of them. In late years, excess fat has been fast disappearing, as everybody knows.

The method and formula are explained in every box of Marmola. As you gain new slenderness, beauty and vim, you know why. Go try the method which has done so much. Watch the amazing results. All druggists supply Marmola at $1 a box.

GAGNON SPRINGS SURPRISE AND WINS ON TECHNICAL KAYO OVER GRIFFITHS

PHILADELPHIA, March 31—(AP)—Jack Gagnon, French Canadian battler of Boston, scored a technical knockout over Tuffy Griffiths, Sioux City, Iowa, in the sixth round of the 10 round main event at the Arena tonight. Each weighed 187 1-2 pounds.

It was the second knockout Griffiths has received in a rather spectacular ring career and a surprise to fight fans, most of whom regarded Gagnon as just another opponent for the mid-western battler in his quest for Tunney's discarded crown.

Tuffy, a two-fisted fighter, became aware almost from the beginning that the French-Canadian battled along the same lines. In addition to a jolting left hook, Gagnon uncovered a crushing right that shook Griffiths whether it landed on head, jaw or body.

With Griffiths having the better of the first two rounds, Gagnon staggered Tuffy in the third with a jolting right to the head and a few seconds later dropped the Iowa slugger with a right to the chin. Tuffy took a count of six. Gagnon showered him with rights and lefts and Tuffy went down again, but was up without a count.

Griffiths came out fast in the fourth and whipped both hands to Gagnon's head. Tuffy was wary of Gagnon's steaming right and shot two lefts to the head and a right to the jaw.

Both fighters sailed in with gloves flying in the fifth and each landed staggering right hand punches to the head. They fought head to head in this round and both were tired at the bell.

They waded into a clinch in the sixth, after landing jarring rights to the body. Griffiths jabbed with two lefts, then Gagnon shot three rights to Tuffy's head. The last blow sent him to the floor. The referee started counting, but before reaching ten he stopped and awarded the decision to Gagnon on a technical knockout, despite Griffiths' protest that he wasn't knocked out and wanted to continue.

Walter Cobb, Baltimore, 222, won the decision over Bill Hartwell, Kansas City, 215, in the six-round semi windup.

El Kadir, Washington, D. C., 157, was awarded a technical knockout over Richardo Alis, Spain, 156, in the fourth round of a six rounder.

Other six round bouts resulted as follows:

Abe Callahan Lipschutz, New York, 191, knocked out Cowboy Willis, Newark, N. J., 174, in the third round.

MANDELL AND SINGER SIGNED FOR TITLE BOUT

NEW YORK, March 31—(AP)—Prospects for a bull market among the cauliflowers rose sharply today with every indication that business at the same old turnstiles will be brisker than ever this summer.

As an addition to the program including the heavyweight title fight June 12 at the Yankee Stadium between Jack Sharkey and Max Schmeling, Madison Square Garden paired Sammy Mandell, lightweight champion from Rockford, Ill., for a fifteen round title test against Al Singer, sensational Bronx youngster, in the same ball yard July 17.

Singer signed the papers today and agreed to take 12 1-2 per cent of the receipts as his wages. Mandell, who trounced Jimmy McLarnin in his last championship battle here, accepted the match some time ago. He will receive the champion's 37 1-2 per cent.

In signing today Singer registered his confidence in his ability to beat Ignacio Fernandez, Filipino winger, in the Garden Friday night. The last time Singer tangled with the brown skinned veteran, Fernandez mocked the cauliflowers by knocking out Young Al in three rounds. Since then Singer has come back in sparkling fashion with a steady string of knockouts.

The Garden outdoor schedule also calls for a welterweight tussle between Jackie Fields, the 147-pound king from Los Angeles, and Jimmy McLarnin, Celtic clouter who whipped young Jack Thompson here last Friday night. This match will be saved for August.

Somewhere in the early summer, the Garden plans a flyweight title test between Midget Wolgast, recognized here as the 112 pound ruler, and Frankie Genaro.

Kid Chocolate will be matched either with "Bat" Battalino, the featherweight titleholder, in a 126-pound title scrimmage or with some crack lightweight. A light heavyweight or a middleweight championship bout may be reserved for September when Victorio Campolo may get a chance to test the heavyweight greatness of Primo Carnera, the home run hitter of the distant spaces.

CANADIENS ARRIVE AT BOSTON FULL OF CONFIDENCE

BOSTON, March 31—(AP)—Successful in vanquishing the New York Rangers and confident of duplicating their efforts at the expense of the Boston Bruins, the Canadiens of Montreal arrived here tonight prepared to engage the world's champions in the Stanley cup series, which will establish either one team or the other in hockey supremacy.

The series for the trophy which is emblematic of the world's professional championship is two out of three. The first game will be played here tomorrow night, the second in Montreal Thursday night and the third, if one is necessary, here on Saturday night.

It was understood here that the "Flying Frenchmen" made an effort to have the series start on Wednesday in order that they might have an extra chance to rest up after the strenuous series with the Chicago Blackhawks and the Rangers. There can be no games in the Boston Garden after Saturday night however so the Montreal outfit must go into immediate action.

The Bruins are being regarded as favorites for several reasons. The local outfit beat the Montreal Maroons three out of four; their series ended last Thursday so that the team has had a chance to recuperate, and most of all, the Bruins have been successful in turning back the Canadiens. In the post season series a year ago, the Bruins beat the Frenchmen three straight, while during the past regular season, during which they ran away from the rest of the league, they administered four straight setbacks to the Montrealers.

YALE SWIMMERS WIN EASILY OVER MICHIGAN

NEW HAVEN, March 31—(AP)—Yale's swimming team, winner of the Eastern Intercollegiate Swimming association title, closed its season tonight by decisively beating the undefeated University of Michigan team, 41 to 21.

Undefeated in six consecutive seasons of intercollegiate swimming competition, Yale won five first places tonight to defeat the western swimmers. Captain Ault, of Michigan won the 440 yard swim and his teammate, Boldt, took first place in the 150 yard backstroke event.

The Michigan relay team which recently equalled the national intercollegiate record, lost to Yale by about a yard.

GAMMAS AND TRINITY WIN CHURCH LEAGUE BATTLES

In the Church league games at the Y. M. C. A. court last night the Trinity Methodist Five and the Gammas were returned victors. The Methodists won an easy victory over the Stronghearts of Jewett City 27 to 11. The Stronghearts showed considerable improvement over their previous games. The Gammas were hard pressed by the Centrals in the other game but won out by their consistent playing and good teamwork. The score was 21 to 13.

The third game scheduled for the evening between the Phi Delta Nu five and the Baltic Five failed to materialize when the Baltic boys did not put in an appearance. The Deltas claimed the game by a forfeit.

ACADEMY STARTS INTENSIVE PRACTICE AT CAMPUS

Today will start the new two-practices-a-day system at the Academy as Coach Brigham takes his squad into the final stretch for the opening game Saturday with the Richmond Radiators. Weather permitting, the Wildcats will drill morning and afternoon with plenty of hitting and fielding and maybe a practice game sandwiched in somewhere. With warmer weather promised, much progress should be made.

The team is weakened by the illness of Herbert (Pop) Richards, who has pneumonia at his home in Versailles. Richards has all the natural ability, and was being looked upon as one of the boys to form the backbone of the 1930 nine. He was out for pitcher but can also play the infield and outfield. With Richards inactivev this would seem to leave the main burden of hurling the Red and White into a state title this year up to Butsy Weisgraber and Boots Greene, although everybody is hoping to see Pop back on the squad before many games have passed.

PAULINO NEVER TRUSTED AMERICAN SAVINGS BANKS

NEW YORK, March 31—(AP)—The only portion of American banks Paulino Uzcudun, Spanish heavyweight, trusted with his $200,000 ring earnings, were the safety deposit vaults, a former trainer, Arthur Soulies, declared today in an affidavit filed in state supreme court. The Basque woodchopper, along with Bertys Perry and Alfred Mayer, former managers, is sued by the Porto Rico boxing commission for the return of $3,000 advance guarantee for a bout in Porto Rico.

After each fight here, Soulies said, Paulino put his money in safe deposit boxes and as soon afterwards as possible, sent it to Spain for the purchase of real estate.

Attorneys said Paulino's permit as an alien to remain in the United States expires April 10.

CARDS BLANKED BY THE ROCHESTER CLUB

Bradenton, Fla., March 31—(AP)—The St. Louis Cardinals could not solve the curves of Ira Smith and Edwin Chapman this afternoon and lost an exhibition game to the Rochester club of the International league, 3 to 0. The Cardinals obtained only three hits, all of them singles.

Ernie Orsatti, Cardinal outfielder, sprained an ankle sliding into third base in the seventh inning, and had to be assisted from the field. Score:

DON MAKES 186 M. P. H. OVER ROUGH COURSE

OCEAN SPEEDWAY, Daytona, Fla., March 31—(AP)—Motor trouble and a rough beach combined today to thwart the attempt of Kaye Don, veteran British race car driver, to shatter the world's automobile speed record of 231 miles an hour over the Ocean speedway here.

Despite advice from officials that the course was not in condition for a record-breaking attempt, Don sent his giant 24 cylinder Silver Bullet racer roaring over the beach six times, but the highest speed he was able to attain was 186 miles an hour.

GIANTS POUND OUT EASY WIN OVER SHREVEPORT

SHREVEPORT, La., Mar. 31—(AP)—Sixteen hits rang off the bats of the New York Giants today to give the National leaguers a 11 to 7 victory over Shreveport of the Texas league.

Five of the Giants' safeties were home runs made by Johnny Mostil, the White Sox castoff, Freddie Linstrom, Frank Hogan, Travis Jackson and Bill Terry. Andy Andrus of the Shreveport club also joined the home run parade. Score:

BEWARE—TODAY IS APRIL 1ST

This is the day when it is wise to overlook pocketbooks lying on the sidewalks, refuse candy from your friends and pay little attention to youngsters who say "Look behind you."

But what's the use of warning you folks, you'll all get fooled during the day without doubt. And besides what's the fun if you don't get fooled now and then.

But when you do get fooled take it with a smile and laugh even if the joke is on you. If you do that you'll get as much fun as the one who does the fooling and maybe more.

Of course there are lots of people who think they are so wise they won't get fooled but they are the ones that fall the hardest and get sore the quickest. Those are the kind of people one likes to fool the best.

DO YOU REMEMBER THIS ONE?

By request from "An Interested Fan," we have this morning a classic of the 1915 season, a 15-inning 1 to 0 game played at the Carpet grounds, Moosup, Saturday afternoon, Sept. 4, before 4,500 fans. Moosup won out when with men on second and third, Gagnon, Putnam third baseman, made a wild heave over first base into the crowd and the thriller was over.

Pitching for Moosup under the name of Sylvester, was one of the hurling stars of the New England league who opposed Redding of the New York Lincoln Stars. "Sylvester" allowed but three hits during the entire 15 innings and fanned eight, while Redding was touched for nine hits but struck out 12. Score:

BURLAP-KNIGHT BOUT TOPS DANIELSON CARD ON 8TH

(Special to The Bulletin)

DANIELSON, March 31—There'll be another set-to of the glove slingers at the town hall here Tuesday night of next week, April 8. The card that Promoter Louis Peloquin has prepared looks very good. It lists boys who like to mix it and who are willing to take one if they can put over one. Here they are: Big Boy Burlap of Westerly, 215 pounds, going against Rocky Knight, a 200-pounder of Boston, in the star bout of 6 rounds. This will be the first heavyweight match seen here in a long time.

Ero Peterson, that valiant Worcester battler, who beat Al Koziol of Norwich in the last show here, will be the semi-finalist with Wild Man Firpo of Providence looking him over from the other corner before the bell rings. They fight at 136 pounds.

Alex Touraine of New Haven takes on that sterling battler, Al Koziol of Norwich, for six rounds at 138 pounds in another bout that looks good and probably will be.

Rene Peloquin, hard hitting, courageous Danielson boy, is on the card to have it out for six rounds with Julius Lurkey of Worcester. This bout is in the 122 pound class.

Benny Novak, New London, comes back again to have a go with Cowboy Mickey Flynn, now of Norwich and formerly of Arizona and other wide open spaces here and abroad. They are going in there for six rounds at 138 pounds. The prelim will be a 4-round affair with Al Brouillard of Danielson taking on Mush Morriarty of Norwich. Morriarty is said to be training hard for this bout.

LATE RALLY GIVES TIGERS WIN OVER MONTREAL

Dr. Haymann Has Title Bout

NEW YORK, Mar. 31—(AP)—While M. Schmeling is bound for the United States to fight Jack Sharkey for the world's heavyweight championship recognition, another German heavyweight, Dr. Ludwig Haymann, will return to defend the "championship" of the fatherland. Dr. Haymann today received notice from the German boxing rulers to be home for a "title bout" in May.

Cubs Have Short Practice

LOS ANGELES, March 31—(AP)—Finding themselves without an exhibition game, the Cubs went through a short workout today. The rookie pitchers, who have been worrying Manager Joe McCarthy by their off and on again type of hurling, were given a good drill.

Okun Beats Wine

ROCHESTER, N. Y., March 31—(AP)—Yale Okun, New York light heavyweight, won the judges' decision over Frankie Wine, of Montana, here tonight after ten rounds of milling. Okun weighed 172 and Wine 182 3-4. In a slashing semi-final, Freddie Mueller of Buffalo, outpointed Frankie Petrolle, of Syracuse, in six rounds.

JONES SHOOTS PAR GOLF TO LEAD FIELD IN SOUTHEASTERN OPEN

AUGUSTA, Ga., March 31.—(AP)—Showing perfect figures for the first two rounds of the $5,000 Southeastern open golf tournament here, Bobby Jones tonight led the field of nearly 100 golfers with his 144 and showed a four-stroke lead over his rival, Horton Smith.

It was the second meeting of the year for Jones and Smith. A gallery of 2,000 followed them through two rounds over the difficult par 72 hill course at the Country club.

Smith, playing the course for the first time, was three over par on the morning round, but shot steadily for a 73 in the afternoon round.

Johnny Farrell, former National open champion, from Mamaroneck, and Tom Kerrigan, Siwanoy, N. Y., pro., who led the first round with a 70, were tied for second place at the end of the day, three strokes behind Jones.

Except for a bad eight on the 15th hole of the second round, Farrell might have tied Jones for the lead.

Smith was alone in fourth place with 148 for his efforts, while Joe Turnesa, young Elmsford, N. Y., pro., was two strokes further away with 150.

Three veteran professionals, Ed Dudley of Wilmington, Del., Whiffy Cox of Brooklyn and Tony Manero of Elmsford, N. Y., had cards of 152.

Billy Burke of Greenwich, Conn., and Frank Walsh of Chicago posted 153.

Gene Sarazen, who shot a great par round this morning, took 82 strokes during the afternoon and found himself far to the rear with 154.

Several of the nation's outstanding shot-makers fell victims of the hazards of the course and recorded high scores.

Paul Runyan of Bloomfield, N. J., who won the North and South open at Pinehurst last week, had 161 for his work.

MISS ORCUTT LEADS FIELD IN NORTH AND SOUTH PLAY

PINEHURST, N. C., March 31.—(AP)—Maureen Orcutt, Haworth, N. J., stroked her way over a Pinehurst Country club course today, leading 112 other women in the qualifying round of the North and South women's amateur golf tournament.

Her nearest competitor, Helen Hicks, of Hewlett, L. I., picked up an 81 over the same route.

Glenna Collett, national champion and last year's winner of the North and South title, found the second nine difficult and after making a 38 going out was forced to take 44 strokes en route home. Her 82 was good for third position.

Others were bunched closely behind and it was necessary to stage a play-off to decide which of four scoring 90 should be admitted in the select championship division.

Honor Bright, Niagara Falls, N. Y., and Helen Waring of New York were beaten in the play-off by Mrs. John Arends of Chicago and Mrs. J. M. Haines.

Here's the record of the first division entries:

Mrs. John Arends, Chicago, 45-45—90.

Mrs. J. M. Haines, Washington, 44-46—90.

Pairings for tomorrow's match play are:

BABE RUTH LEADS YANKS TO VICTORY OVER TEXANS

SAN ANTONIO, Tex., March 31—(AP)—With Babe Ruth again showing the way, the New York Yankees pounded out a 14 to 4 victory over San Antonio of the Texas league today.

The Babe contributed a home run, a double and a single to the Yankees 18 safeties off a trio of Texas league hurlers. The circuit drive was the Babe's fourth of the season and his second in three days. A pair of walks and a sacrifice fly on his three other trips to the plate gave the home run king a perfect day at the plate.

Wells worked well for five innings for the major leaguers, the only damage being a home run by McCullough in the first round. Henry Johnson, however, who succeeded him, was pounded freely in the last four innings. Score:

San Antonio	100 000 030— 4	10	8

THINKS BARRE-KOZIOL BOUT WOULD BE A DRAWING CARD

Harold J. Laurence of Fall River, manager of Joe Barre, the boy who outpointed Johnny Kop at Taftville last week says that he thinks a Barre-Koziol match would be a big drawing card for this part of the state. In speaking of last Friday night's bout Barre's manager says that Kop is a willing fighter and that with more experience he will make a good boy. He says that losing to Barre is no disgrace, because Barre is a boy with some sixty professional engagements to his credit. He goes on to say that Barre fought Koziol in Fall River and won the decision and it proved to be one of the best fights that he has ever seen. He says that if Koziol will fight a return bout nothing would please him and Barre any better.

Sports Editor:

An article in Monday's Bulletin, was merely a sudden outburst of feeling from a new, enthused baseball fan. It just goes to show that excitement is in the air, and even our insurance man, Mr. Aleck Poreda, who heretofore has been dormant as far as a baseball game was concerned, has been so aroused that he too is putting forth a lion's share of energy towards bringing his favorite team to the top. There is a great possibility of seeing some fast ball during the next season, providing interest remains where it is at the present time. On reading the article it seems as if the writer had an envious feeling which simply had to be released. However, it's a good idea to express one's self, because every knock is a boost. As for the name of the new team, I think the members are more or less capable of choosing an appropriate name for themselves, without having to resort to the history of old Poland for aid. It happens that at the time they chose their title, they thought more of playing clean, fast ball, than they did of Poland. And if the name they selected provokes Mr. Poreda or any other person to such a great mirth, why then I advise them to laugh. It's good for their digestion. With this recreative competition in view, I am sure there is much in store for the Norwich people who are interested in baseball.

LEFTY DUGAS LANDS BERTH WITH WICHITA

Reports from the training camp at McAllen, Texas, carry the information that Lefty Dugas, product of the local sandlots, has landed a permanent outfield berth with the Wichita club of the Western league. The Wichita team is at present leading the Grapefruit league of the Rio Grande valley. The other day in a game with Des Moines, the Wichita team won 12 to 4 to take the lead in the league. In this game Dugas hit safely three times and scored three runs. His record for the afternoon included three hits in four times at bat, three runs, five putouts and one assist. Lefty is playing a rightfield position. Manager Artie Griggs is highly pleased with the showing of the local boy and has assigned him to a regular position.

JERRY CONWAY SIGNED BY SPRINGFIELD INDIANS

SPRINGFIELD, Mass., March 31—(AP)—Jerry Conway, of Holyoke, who had a trial with the Washington Senators a few years ago, was signed today by the Springfield Eastern league baseball club. He will play first base for the present. Outfielder "Mandy" Brooks, former Chicago Cubs outfielder, bought by the locals from Little Rock, will report next Tuesday at Newark, where Springfield will play an exhibition with the Newark Bears. Tommy Sewell, regular shortstop last season, reported today.

Conway has been playing basketball for the Plainfield Pros this past season.

DALLAS GETS EARLY LEAD TO BEAT WHITE SOX

DALLAS, Texas, March 31.—(AP)—Four hits and three runs in the first inning off Cecil Pat Caraway today started the Dallas club of the Texas league on the way to a 4 to 2 victory over the Chicago White Sox.

The Sox found the Dallas pitching more difficult than the New York Giant brand and obtained but six hits off Mitchell and Bray, while Caraway and Welland gave up ten.

Chicago (AL)	010 001 000—2	6	3

WHITE SULPHUR SPRINGS, W. Va., March 31—(AP)—Harrison R. (Jimmy) Johnston, national amateur golf champion, heralded his return to diligent training for the Walker cup matches in England by covering the number three course here today in 69, but two strokes over the course record.

Johnson said he expected to be in tip top form when the American players sail for Europe.

Pirates Rally in Eighth.

TUCSON, Ariz., March 31.—(AP)—A big eighth inning carried the Pittsburgh Pirates to victory 5 to 3 in an exhibition game here today with Tucson. Dick Bartell, Pirate shortstop, wrenched an ankle during the game and had to be carried from the field. Score:

Perlick Twins Lose Decision

BOSTON, March 31—(AP)—The Perlick twins, lightweights from Kalamazoo, Mich., were bot hon the short ends of close decisions here tonight, in the 10 round feature bouts. Herman, who gave the most convincing Perlick performance, bowed to the veteran Bruce Flowers, of New Rochelle, N. Y., while Henry was shaded by Hy Diamond, Boston southpaw.

SOMEBODY'S GOING TO BE TAKEN "FOR A RIDE

Alec Arico, the Academy's veteran first baseman, is going to hit .400 this year. At least that's what he said the other day.

Chet Berghinzo, another very good first baseman, but who will probably be one of the regular outfields on the Wildcat squad, heard him and there was a difference of opinion immediately.

The affair was finally settled with the proposal that Arico would wheel Berghinzo from the Academy campus to Franklin square if he did not make .400, and that Chet must do the same thing for Alec if the Greeneville lad does make the ultra-charmed circle. The fun will take place on or shortly after the date of the closing game of the season, Saturday, June 14.

Goslin Ready to Talk Terms

CHATTANOOGA, Tenn., March 31—(AP)—Goose Goslin, holdout of the Washington Senators, wired President Clark Griffith tonight that he would come here tomorrow to talk terms. Goslin's wire said that he could not resist the call of the diamond and that he was ready to start work.

President Griffith wired Goslin to come to Chattanooga at the club's expense.

McMahon Wins Over Bryant

NEW YORK, March 31—(AP)—Jimmy McMahon, New York lightweight, won a decisive victory over Al Bryant of Newark, N. J., in a ten round bout on the St. Nicholas arena card tonight. McMahon had his opponent down twice in the third round for counts of seven and nine. The winner weighed 136 3-4 pounds, Bryant 137 1-2.

Stasiak Wins

PITTSFIELD, Mass., March 31.—(AP)—Stanley Stasiak defeated Jack Maloney, Irish Canadian, in two straight falls in the main wrestling bout here tonight. In the 45-minute semi-final Stanley Pinto of Manchester, N. H., and Harry Mamas of Springfield wrestled to a draw.

BURGESS BEDTIME STORY

Paddy the Beaver Gets Pricked

In passing judgment have a care
To be in every way quite fair.
—Prickly Porky.

Paddy the Beaver had given a little sigh of relief that Prickly Porky had started on his way again. Paddy had somehow felt uneasy with Prickly Porky on the roof of his house. He didn't know why he had felt uneasy; he just had. Perhaps it was because he couldn't get away from the feeling that Prickly Porky with his thousand little spears would be a most uncomfortable neighbor to have about; and therefore he didn't even want Prickly Porky on the roof of his house.

As soon as Prickly Porky was well on his way toward the shore, Paddy and Mrs. Paddy swam to their house and climbed up on the roof. It was partly in order to watch Prickly Porky and it was partly in order to see that he had done no damage while resting on the roof.

"Just look at that fellow!" said Paddy. "He certainly isn't much of a swimmer; I could swim circles around him. But he keeps right up at it and he gets there after a while. He is one of our neighbors in the Green Forest with whom I never feel acquainted."

"I don't believe anybody else does either," replied Mrs. Paddy. "Certainly, he doesn't seem to have any friends."

"Perhaps that is because he doesn't want any," said Paddy. "He certainly hasn't a friendly disposition. I really cannot imagine any one being friendly with him."

Mrs. Paddy chuckled. "I shouldn't want to have what you would call a friendship with him," said she.

Paddy grinned. "He has been about as close as I should care to have him," said he. "Ouch!"

Mrs. Paddy looked up quickly. "What is the matter with you?" she demanded.

"I pricked one paw on something sharp," replied Paddy, and held up his right paw. There was something hanging on it.

"What is it?" asked Mrs. Paddy.

Paddy took it in his teeth and started to pull it out, but he let go and cried "Ouch!" again. That thing hadn't pulled out as easily as he thought it would. Mrs. Paddy moved over for a better look. "Humph!" she exclaimed. "You are making a closer acquaintance with Prickly Porky than you thought for."

"What do you mean?" asked Paddy.

"Just what I said," replied Mrs. Paddy. "Don't you know what that thing is sticking in your paw? It is one of Prickly Porky's little spears. He must have shaken it out of his coat when he was on the roof here."

Paddy looked more closely and saw that Mrs. Paddy was right. It was one of Prickly Porky's quills and it was most uncomfortable. In fact, the thing made his paw ache. Once more Paddy seized it in his teeth and gave a sharp, hard, quick pull. Then he cried "Ouch!" again. However, that quill was out. His paw was very sore, but the quill was out and he knew that that was a good thing.

Then he and Mrs. Paddy began a careful search all over that roof. They found three or four other quills and carefully removed them. You see, they didn't want to step on another.

"I think," said Paddy crossly, "that the least Prickly Porky can do is to keep his little spears. We let him use our roof to rest on and this is the way he repays us."

This, of course, wasn't quite fair, for Prickly Porky hadn't intentionally left his little spears behind.

"THE DUCHESS OF CHICHESTER'S GOAT CART!"
BAWLED BERTRAM the BOUNCER
"My man," reproved the Duchess, "it is seldom that I speak directly to a menial, but those rasping, grinding tones were more fitting for peddling fish than announcing my coach-and-four."
"A thousand pardons, Milady," replied Bertram humbly, "but what am I to do?"
"Smoke OLD GOLDS, fellow! The honey-smooth heart-leaf tobacco will change your growls of a grizzly to the amorous cooings of a pretty pigeon. Throat-ease follows this smoother and better cigarette as hounds follow the scent. Away with you, and OLD GOLD yourself! There's not a bark in a billion."

TRADING CONTINUED IN VOLUME WITH CLOSING PRICES IRREGULARLY HIGHER

NEW YORK, March 31—(AP)—The bull movement in stocks was impeded by heavy profit taking today, but operators for the rise pressed forward their favorites with increasing vigor, and closing prices were irregularly higher. Trading continued to gain in volume, total sales aggregating 5,161,320 shares, a new record for the year, and the third 5,000,000-share day in the past week.

Many traders were inclined to feel that a moderate reaction was due, in view of the rapidity of last week's advance, as contrasted to the slow recovery of business. The attitude of those committed to the rise, however, as summed up by Matthew C. Brush, president of the American International Corp., is that the market discounts the business situation from two to six months in advance, and "while we are probably several months away from a definite prosperous period x x x nevertheless there are definite evidences of a change in trend giving every indication that in certain lines at least business has commenced to turn for the better."

Sears Roebuck's sales report for its third month was at first glance decidedly unfavorable, showing a decline of nearly 11 per cent from the like period a year ago. Close comparison, however, is not possible, as the pre-Easter trade last year came in March, while it is deferred until April this year by the late date of Easter Sunday. The unfavorable aspects of Radio Corp. of America's 1929 earnings report, showing net of less than $1.60 a share, appeared to have been already discounted by the market action of the stock, and Wall street was favorably impressed by the successful reduction of inventories. California Crude Oil production figures for last week were again favorable, showing a reduction of about 20,000 barrels daily.

More than 50 issues were boosted into new high ground for the movement in the first hour of trading. The market fell into a decided slump around midday, but later was turned upward again by heavy buying of U. S. Steel and several of the utilities. U. S. Steel sold up 1 1-2 points to 195, a new high for the year, but lost all but a fraction of its gain. Bethlehem rose nearly 2 points to a new peak for the year at 108 1-2.

In the utility issues, several of the recent laggards such as International Telephone, American and Foreign Power and Southern California Edison were bid up smartly, the first named gaining nearly 6 points. In the Morgan-Bonbright group, Commonwealth and Southern, United Corp. and United Gas Improvement, rose moderately to new high ground. American Telephone rose a couple of points to a new peak at 76, then lost most of its gain. One block of 31,000 shares of Commonwealth and Southern changed hands. A few of the oils were again turned upward. Sinclair and Continental were strong spots, reaching new high ground in active trading.

Motors were highly irregular. Auburn jumped 13 points to a new high for the year, and among the low-priced issues, Hupp and Graham-Paige sold up a point or two to new peaks. Chrysler and Packard, however, lost about a point. General Motors closed fractionally lower, and Checker Cab dropped 4.

Radio was an active feature, rising 2 points to 55 5-8, a new high for the recovery and closing at 54 1-2. Goodyear Rubber sold up more than 2 points to the best levels of the year on announcement of election of several Otis-Eaton representatives to the board. U. S. Rubber mounted 3 points to a new peak. In the tobacco shares, the Liggett & Myers issues were heavily bought.

Worthington Pump reacted more than 10 points. Westinghouse Electric about 5, and Du Pont, Air Reduction, American Can, Eastman Kodak, Electric Auto Lite, Atchison, Chesapeake and Ohio, United Carbon and Underwood Elliott, lost 2 points or more.

Commodities were irregular. Cotton mounted 90 cents to $1.75 in trade buying and short covering. Corn gained about a cent and more on bullish weather forecasts, but wheat lost about 1 1-2 to 2 cents on bearish Kansas crop reports.

Leading foreign exchanges generally sagged, sterling cables ruling at $4.86 15-32, off 5-32. The Canadian dollar, however, again mounted to parity.

The Crex Carpet Co., of St. Paul, Minn., is planning an expansion program, which, according to W. H. Edmond, president, will involve the consolidation of the Crex company with a Massachusetts company, described as one of the largest manufacturers of carpets and rugs in the east, and the absorption of a nationally known chain of retail stores, specializing in the sale of carpets and rugs.

The American Iron and Steel institute has appointed James A. Farrell, president of the U. S. Steel corporation, as chairman; Eugene Grace, president of the Bethlehem Steel corporation, and L. N. Block, chairman of the Inland Steel corporation, of Chicago, as a special committee to confer with a committee of the Institute of Scrap Iron and Steel on problems relative to the steel and scrap iron industries.

The Conde Nast Publications, Inc., reports net earnings for 1929 of $1,346,653, equal to $4.20 a share on the common stock, compared with $1,426,076, or $4.45 a share for 1928.

Treasury Balance.

WASHINGTON, March 31—(AP)—Treasury receipts for March 29 were $7,706,786.68; expenditures $8,002,682.59; balance $363,965,402.22.

A ship's stewart wanted for obtaining food and lodgings by false pretenses was arrested at Southend, England, when he sought accommodations at the house of a detective who was looking for him.

THE CURB MARKET

NEW YORK, March 31—(AP)—The New York Curb exchange closed the first quarter of the year today with bullish forces still in control of the price movement. Final quotations disclosed a rather long sprinkling of soft spots but most of the leaders closed higher, and several of them registered new 1930 highs in a record-breaking turnover for the year of 1,768,600 shares.

Electric Bond & Share, which sold as low as 50 in the break last fall and 80 1-2 this year, was marked up 9 1-2 points above Saturday's close to a new peak at 112 1-2, closing at the top. Columbia Gas & Electric (new), which will replace the old stock in the "big board" tomorrow, ran up more than 4 points to 83 3-8, closing at 83 1-8. American Superpower improved fractionally to another new high at 35 3-4. Brazilian Light & Traction, Central States issues, Cities Service, Consolidated Gas of Baltimore, Long Island Lighting and United Light & Power convertible preferred, also reached new high ground for the year.

Reawakening of speculative interest was noted in the oil group although the gains, as a rule, were small. Standard Oil of Indiana moved up 1 3-8 to duplicate the high of 57 1-2 established early last week, Gulf advanced 1 1-2 points to within a fraction of the year's high and Ohio Oil and Penn Mex Fuel moved into new high ground. Indian Territory Illuminating, which announced valuable subscription rights over the week end, crossed 63 to a new high but lost part of its gain.

Among the many specialties to attain new peak prices for the year were Ainsworth Manufacturing, Aviation Corporation of The Americas, Bulova Watch preferred, Cord Corporation, De Forest Radio, Fokker Aircraft, Ford of France, Helena Rubinstein, Libby McNeill, Republic Steel (new), Rich Inc., Ruberoid, Stromberg Carlson, U. S. Gypsum, Universal Insurance and Western Maryland second preferred.

CHICAGO GRAIN MARKET

CHICAGO GRAIN MARKET

CHICAGO, March 31—(AP)—Tumbling in price today, wheat finished virtually at the bottom. Promised drought relief southwest was largely responsible, indications pointing to rain or snow before morning. Besides, railroad reports from Kansas, the leading wheat state, were construed as extremely bearish and an official summary regarding all states indicated that abandonment of domestic winter wheat acreage this season would be small.

Closing quotations on wheat were unsettled, 1 to 1-8c a bushel lower than Saturday's finish. Corn closed 5-8 at 1c up, oats unchanged to 7-8c advanced, and provisions unchanged to 10c down.

Setbacks in wheat prices today were despite announcement that the United States wheat visible supply had decreased 1,867,000 bushels in the last week. On the other hand, the Liverpool market showed an unexpected downturn, ascribed largely to increased Russian selling. Furthermore, world shipments of wheat this week totaled 2,040,000 bushels in excess of the week previous.

Provisions declined responsive to downturns in hog values.

BOND MARKET

BOND MARKET

NEW YORK, March 31—(AP)—Listed bonds without share conversion features failed to shake off their dullness today, and traded irregularly in a quiet market.

Convertibles and their kin, however, displayed considerable vigor. This was especially true of the two telephone 4 1-2s, for the American company's debenture soared to 185 3-4, closing 1 1-2 below the top for a net gain of 1 1-4. International Telephone 4 1-2s, comparatively dormant during the past fortnight, came to life with the advance in the stock and rose 3 1-2 points to 122 1-2, the best price of the current movement.

American I. G. Chemical 5 1-2s, up 1 1-4; Chicago & North Western 4 3-4s, up 3-4; Warner Brothers Pictures 6s, with warrants, unchanged on the day; and Baltimore & Ohio 4 1-2s, also unchanged, were other active issues. Atchison 4 1-2s went to the new high of 141 1-2, but closed a point lower for a small net loss. General Theatres 6s touched a new peak at 132.

United States governments softened in the late dealings when the Treasury 3 3-4s were offered in some bulk, resulting in a decline of 11-32. The Treasury 4s lost 6-32. Foreign bonds eased, with losses of more than a point in numerous South Americans.

Turnovers in representative domestic rails, utilities and industrials were small and price changes generally unimportant, which gave the market a firmer appearance. New issues had a relatively small part in the day's dealings, while the volume of new financing was negligible. In recent weeks the market has demonstrated excellent resistance to competition from that source and there is little fear of a repetition of the recessions that accompanied the enormous flotation of securities in January.

Among the firmer listed issues were American Telephone 5s, Bethlehem Steel refunding 5s, Chile Copper 5s, New York Central 5s, Pennsylvania 6 1-2s, Postal Telegraph 5s, Wilson Co. first 6s, Illinois Bell Telephone 5s, Rock Island 4s and Santa Fe general 4s.

Money rates were virtually unchanged from last Friday. The rate on 60 to 90 day time loans was advanced a quarter of one per cent, but other quotations, including the 4 per cent call money rate, showed no variation.

FIRST QUARTER OF YEAR SHOWS SLIGHT BUILDING DECREASE FROM LAST YEAR

Building operations in Norwich during the first quarter of 1930 showed a slight decrease from the same quarter in 1929. This year there were 47 permits granted for a total expenditure of $54,795 as compared with 51 permits for and expenditure of $81,768 in 1929. February was an exceptionally small month there being only eight permits granted for a valuation of approximately $3,000.

The past month showed a marked betterment of building activities as compared to February. During March there were 24 permits granted by Fire Marshal Henry R. Taft for a valuation of $30,410. Fire Marshal Taft's report for the quarter is as follows:

	J.	F.	M.
New frame houses	4	0	6
New frame garages	4	3	4
New frame henhouse	0	1	0
New brick tunnel	0	0	1
Alt. to fr. buildings	4	4	8

During the past week there were six building permits granted at the office of Fire Marshal Taft, three of the permits being for new dwelling houses in the city. The others were for garages and alterations.

The permits follow:

REAL ESTATE SALES AND MORTGAGE LOANS

In Norwich during the past week there were nine sales of real estate as compared to 12 sales for the corresponding week in 1929. The mortgage loans for the respective week were $21,480 and $46,750.

There were five sales of real estate last week in New London, exactly half the number of sales for the same week a year ago. The mortgage loans for the respective weeks were $21,800 and $40,130.

NEW LONDON

A general increase in building activities is anticipated next month and contractors are looking forward with optimism to more work now that spring is here.

Despite the somewhat unsettled business conditions prevailing during the past few months it is generally felt that building operations will pick up with better building weather and that next month will see the usual spring building boom under way.

Plans have been completed for an addition to the fire engine house in Jordan Village of the Waterford Fire Engine company No. 1. The enlargement will be two stories in height and will have a concrete floor on the street level. The second floor will be arranged for sleeping quarters. Two large doors will be installed in the front of the present building also.

Work has been completed on the construction of a steel and sheet metal storehouse on the lighthouse department's wharf in the rear of the customs house in Bank street. The frame work of the shed is of steel construction and exterior is covered with sheet metal. The shed will be used by the lighthouse department for the storage of oil, paint and other material used by the lighthouse tender Hawthorne which operates from the wharf. A former shed was demolished when work was started on the reconstruction of the wharf.

Plans have been prepared for an addition to the Post Road Service Station at Bank street and Jefferson avenue. The proposed structure is to be 20x20 feet of reinforced concrete and brick construction, with a frame roof. The enlargement is to house a car-washing and polishing expansion of the service station. Bids are now being received for the work.

EXTERIOR TRIM IS VERY IMPORTANT ITEM

Just as is the case with a suit or coat, a house of very charming mass and good lines may be ruined by a poor choice of the detail intended to embellish it. For, while the first appreciation of a house is aroused by good proportion, this interest may be killed by carelessness in the intimate treatment of trim around doors and windows at entrances and other parts which may properly be enriched.

For this detail we must depend upon exterior millwork or trim. The early Colonial houses were plainly built with a minimum of trim around openings. Later Colonial work was greatly enriched with many moldings and rich carving.

It is the custom today on small house work to utilize stock trim as much as possible. It is readily understandable why this is less expensive than trim, which is specially run to an architect's detail, where only a small amount required by one particular house is ordered.

As an incentive to the use of stock trim the large manufacturers are striving continually to improve the architectural beauty of their products. As a result, many small houses boast inviting entrance porches and doorways, charming exterior porches and pergolas, bay windows, dormer windows and sash which are correct from the rigid standards of the architect.

ROOM IN BASEMENT IS IN MUCH DEMAND

Full use of basement for recreation or service activities of the family is an accepted fact, and the foresighted home builder keeps them in mind as he selects materials for this lower portion of the house. Among the many which he may consider for the floor, walls and ceiling of such a room, is a hollow building tile which serves a double purpose.

Primarily, it is designed to form foundation walls, although it can also be used for all the walls of the house. Secondly, it faces are glazed. Thus, when the foundation is finished, the interior wall surface problem has been solved. The outside faces of the tile also are glazed. It is aimed that the glazing is impervious to moisture and that it never needs paint.

The wall need not be dull, for there is a choice of color in these tiles. The shades are light, medium and dark brown, various buffs, and a gray. If brown and buff are combined, the pattern will be interestingly contrasted. The glazing presents a smooth, dry and easy-to-clean surface.

For various wall thicknesses, these units my be had in four, eight and twelve inch widths. The glazed faces are five by twelve inches. Special units, cut to fit, and supplied to fit around box windows frames, door frames, cellar windows, and other openings. Compared to frame house construction, the manufacturer asserts that the cost will be the same or two per cent. less.

HOME OWNERS GAINING, SAYS A. E. DICKINSON

"Home life is holding its own against hotel and apartment life. Converting the monthly rent check into a permanent equity is one reason why home owners are gaining over renters by more than three per cent. each year," says A. E. Dickinson, president of the Indiana Limestone company.

"A greater appreciation of beauty and individuality is another reason," he continues. "It is only recently that the man of moderate means could build a home with all the character and permanence of the mansion."

Rising population in big cities and their environs enhances the values of properties according to Mr. Dickinson, a 28 per cent. yearly increase in all real estate values through the country having been shown in the years from 1920 to 1929. This increase includes commercial and industrial as well as residence properties.

HOME-MADE SCREENS ARE A POSSIBILITY

Now that ornamental screens are coming back a chance presents itself for men and women who love to tinker to keep themselves continuously supplied with new and interesting screens. Any man who dabbles with woodwork can make and adjust the triple-panel screen frames, while the average woman with a knack for the decorative can do the rest. Pictured wallpaper is ideal for screens of this sort. The cost of the paper is not great, even when expensive paper is used.

Occasionally one may tire of a certain design, but with screens of this sort the problem of removing one pattern and replacing it with another is quite simple. The old paper can be torn off and new submitted with in a short time and the process can be repeated indefinitely until one tires of screens or changing styles decree something different.

Some women elect to use print fabrics to cover screen frames, and here again the cost involved is not great. The fabric, of course, will prove much more stable than paper. In this connection it might be said that anyone skilled in stenciling can get considerable enjoyment out of working out their own designs. It calls for care, likewise skill and no little patience. To compensate for these is the satisfaction one experiences in achieving so difficult a task.

HOME-MADE HAT TREES

Something new and novel, to say nothing of inexpensive, can be made in the way of hat trees that will preserve your spring model in a most conscientious fashion. Just take an old cereal box, the round kind, a round coffee tin or cookie container that is fairly tall, and lacquer it in an attractive color. Then to make it smarter, paste a print or a cut-out of a flowered cretonne around it, coating this decoration with shellac to insure permanent adhesion and to prevent the edges from curling. Such surfaces can be washed without damage.

CASEMENT WINDOWS ARE MUCH IN FAVOR

Casement windows invite fresh air and sunlight. They open out and turn many a wandering breeze into hot rooms on bright and sultry summer days. In the modern home, they will invariably be made of steel, for the present day home owner has learned to demand materials in his house which experience have proven will stand up, not only under the wear and tear of daily service, but also against depreciation caused by weather.

The tensile strength of steel can be utilized to good effect in the steel casement window. The frame surrounding the glass is very narrow without hazarding the strength or rigidity of the window, and the muntins which divide the window into its many lights of glass are also slender. Therefore in this window arrangement the maximum amount of the opening is utilized for glass, allowing sunlight a better chance to penetrate into the gloomy rooms on a late winter day.

Increased sunlight is not the only advantage to the progressive home builder. Windows of the type under discussion can be built into masonry walls without any additional frame being required. The mason bricks the window into place and it is held solidly, without chance to bend or twist after construction has proceeded to another part of the building. The only additional workmanship required to complete the installation of such a window is the placing of the glass, and building in of a stool on the inside. Plasterers can finish against the steel frame, the joint where the two meet preferably covered with a small wooden molding since it is impossible to get plaster to bond to steel. The economy of this method of steel window installation is attested by its wide use by speculative builders.

OLD HOME OFFERS MANY POSSIBILITIES

A spare clothes closet, a hall-end, and alcove or little tucked-in-out-of-the-way closets are full of possibilities to the practical renovator. Such spaces are being utilized now for an extra bath, a shower, water closet or lavatory. Instead of waste spaces they are being turned into useful adjuncts to the family's comfort.

STUCCO ON FRAME MAKES VERY ATTRACTIVE WALL

The home builder who does not particularly lean toward the wood, stone, or brick house, and who cannot afford the cost of true masonry construction, may attain his object by the use of stucco on frame construction.

From the standpoint of beauty, its qualities are very good. From the practical angle, it affords fire protection, insulation against cold and heat, and fairly low upkeep when properly mixed and applied.

COLORED SLATING FOR PORCH OR TERRACE

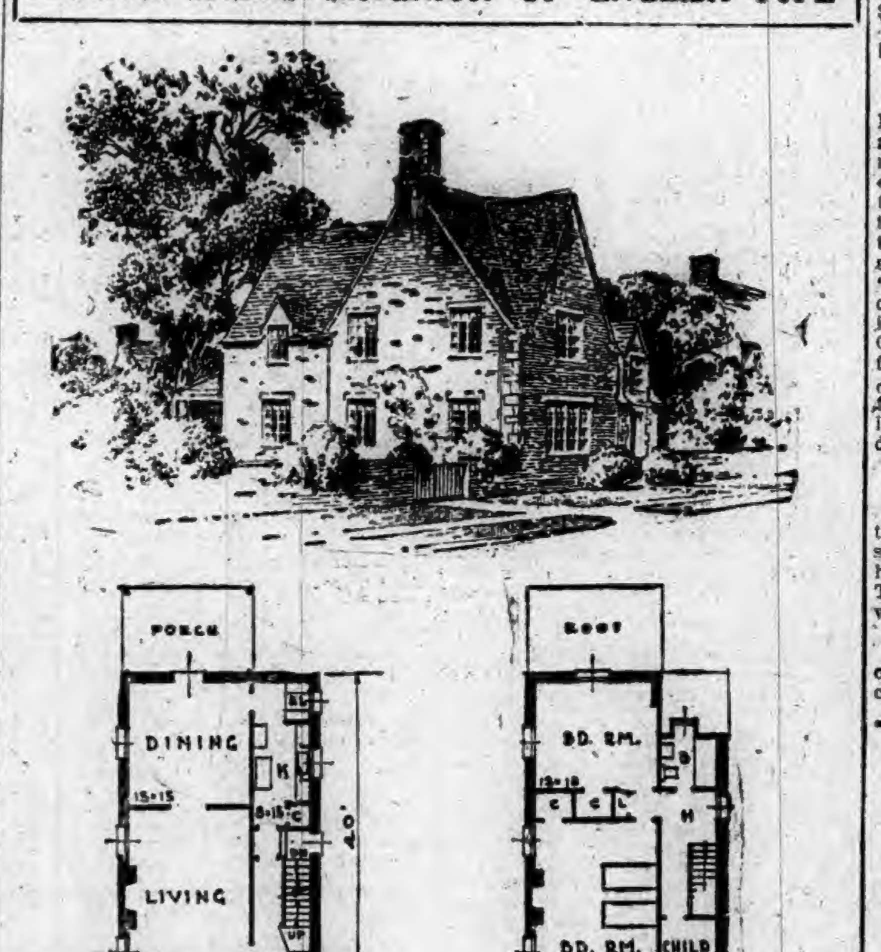
Use of slate for terrace and porch flooring in random rectangular shapes in mixed colorings is coming more and more into use in America. In Europe, it has been used for centuries, as a reference to illustrations of the flooring and walks of these old structures will testify.

It has the advantage over other materials in that it can be used with either a rough cleft surface in any degree of roughness desired, or with a rubbed finish similar to a marble tile. The range of colors obtainable is extensive.

N. E. BUILDING OPERATIONS

Contracts for building and engineering projects in New England during the week ended March 25 amounted to $10,067,400, it was reported by the F. W. Dodge corporation. The average value of contracts awarded during the previous weeks this year is $4,727,100, and the amount during the corresponding week of 1929 was $7,156,100. For the last twenty-nine years contracts awarded during only three correspond weeks totaled more than last week's amount. Those three weeks were in 1926, 1927 and 1928, when the contracts totaled approximately $11,800,000, $11,100,000 and $13,100,000, respectively.

COLOR LIVENS EXTERIOR OF ENGLISH TYPE



The charm of the English cottage type of home is evident in this house, whose distinctiveness of design brings that "something different" sought by many builders.

The house itself it only 25 feet across, and therefore may be built on a lot about 50 feet wide, although a frontage up to 75 feet naturally gives more opportunity for landscape development.

Its exterior is of red brick, with stone quoins at the corners. With a roof of slate in variegated colors, the house thus presents an appearance that is anything but monotonous.

A small yet convenient kitchen allows for a good-sized living and dining room. A child's playroom is a feature of the second floor plan. Bedrooms are unusually large for a house of this size.

This type of house is comparatively economical to build, and is so designed as to be more comfortable in winter than many of similar size.

Estimates of cost vary between $8,000 and $10,000. In smaller communities the lower figures probably would be more nearly accurate.

"ROCKCLYFFE", THE NEW HOME OF MR. AND MRS. CHAS. W. BURTON

The above picture is of the new home of Mr. and Mrs. Charles W. Burton at 736 North Main street and is one of the most attractive houses in that section of the city. Erected on the high ledge that borders North Main street at this point, Mr. Burton has very appropriately named his home "Rockclyffe". The house is of the bungalow type and presents a very attractive appearance.

The house is built on a rock foundation on a solid ledge of rock. The superstructure is of frame construction. The exterior finish is in wide white clapboards with red composition shingle roof. The entrance to the house is in solid oak in a vestibule type. A dormer window breaks up the roof and in the gable of the dormer is the initial "B". The chimney is large and of the old English type with its chimney pots.

The exterior of the house is very attractively arranged and is handsomely finished. The living room is very spacious and is finely finished. The walls are done in stucco tint and the trim is in old cherry. There is a large fireplace with hand-carved cherry mantel. The floors are of oak. There are four large windows in the living room, all of plate glass with stained glass window lights over them. French doors open onto a large sunporch that ends along the south-east side of the house. A sliding door opens to the dining room which is done in stucco tint and oak panelling. The dining room is large and has a long window seat extending along one side, the radiator being concealed underneath with hand carved oak grill work. The stained glass and leaded window lights over the large plate glass windows are very appropriate with representations of fruit in them.

A wide staircase leads to the second floor and the staircase is in oak panelling. On the second floor is the guest room, a den, sewing room and bath. The den is large and has a tapestry brick fireplace. It has tinted walls and oak floor. The guest room is rose and gold and has a large fireplace with a handcarved mantel. The mantel is decorated in harmony with the room, gold-leaf being used in the mantel finish. The sewing room is in cream tint and old ivory finish. The bath is tiled and has white porcelain fixtures and built-in cabinets.

The master bedroom, maid's room, the kitchen and another bath are on the first floor. The master bedroom is very attractive in blue stucco tint and cherry trim. The trim is of the concave design something rarely seen except in old houses. There is panelling under each of the windows. The clothes press is built of cedar. The maid's room is done in old rose.

The kitchen and breakfast nook is in green. There are many convenient built-in features and the breakfast nook is especially attractive.

The electrical fixturs in the dining room and living room are of crystal while in the other rooms they follow out the general color scheme of the room.

In the basement there is the heating plant, cold storage cellar and laundry, all conveniently arranged.

This house is the tenth, besides the gas station, that has been built by Mr. Burton in this section of the city known as Burton court. There is a three car garage that goes with the house.

HOME OWNERSHIP LIKE FIRST WATCH IN AROUSING EGO

The new home is not unlike the first watch possessed by a small boy. The watch is probably of the one dollar variety, bought by some thoughtful uncle or father with the thought that it would probably crash on the sidewalk within a few days. But the mental effect of that watch upon the boy is not in ratio with its intrinsic value. Now he can tell people what time it is—now he is an important person—he has become somebody.

How much more does home ownership mean to the average grown up boy! He is somebody in his community from the moment he moves into this home of his own. He is consulted about the new street paving and begins to take an interest in other civic matters. The new home his aroused his ego. It has made him a better citizen in the community in which he lives. It is a mark of thrift.

HARDWARE IMPORTANT IN HOME BUILDING

That time worn axiom which goes "It's the little things that count" can hardly be more clearly illustrated than by the hardware in our homes. Hardware will, if chosen with care and fore-thought, give to the home an air of distinction and individuality.

It must be remembered when selecting hardware that three main points are to be considered. First, of course, comes its utilitarian aspect. And last, but not least, one must consider the material of which it is made. The first two points are usually pretty well covered but the last is not always given the consideration it deserves.

Hardware should be of solid brass or bronze. Brass or bronze plating is not enough for it will wear off and the unprotected base metal will become rust-pitted and unsightly. There are few details that will contribute more to the rundown appearance of a house than rusted hardware. Even moisture on the hands will soon ruin corrodible metal. Good hardware of solid brass or bronze is permanent and will prove an excellent investment in the long run.

WROUGHT IRON ADDS CHARM TO HOME

A complete line of drapery hardware, wrought iron finished in antique gold, that includes curtain poles, cornices, motifs, brackets, ends and tie backs, is offered to owners who desire to accentuate their interiors in this interesting way. In many types of these houses and against walls finished in almost any way, this decorative hardware is highly effective.

All items, says the maker, can be had unfinished, and special finishes can be secured if desired. Ends come with spring clips which slip into the poles and hold them securely in place. Cornices are of ornamental iron banding with perforated metal. Pole brackets and ends as well as center motifs come in floral and spear patterns in wide variety.

Poles are furnished in square tubing, hexagon, lockseam twisted, rope and braided tubing up to 16 foot lengths. Forged nails are also offered. Heads are of various sizes and shapes. They are used not only for fastening hardware, but also for studding doors and as applied ornament on all manner of iron work; they are also used with wide board floors. They may be had in black, rusty iron, with semi-polish or without finish.

HEATING AND VENTILATING WILL TOTAL HUGE SUM

Approximately $634,788,690 will be spent in the United States in 1930 for heating and ventilating equipment for new buildings, according to a survey made by Heating and Ventilating, a trade paper.

It is estimated that $138,000,000 will be spent for the construction of houses costing up to $20,000 each and that the heating equipment in these houses will cost $13,958,448.

For dwellings costing from $20,000 to $50,000, the estimated total expenditure will be $135,000,000, of which $16,288,232 will be for heating and $2,713,872 for ventilating.

KITCHEN CABINETS USED IN BOY'S ROOM

Certain types of kitchen cabinets have been found to be used in other rooms beside the kitchen. In a boy's room, for example, they have proved extremely adaptable, especially when the boy occupies the room is one of those normal youngsters with a multitude of small toys to be put away and a similar multitude of assorted "junk" which has a disconcerting way of getting underfoot unless some definite place is provided to store it. Chests of drawers, capable of being finished in any color scheme, shelf cabinets and other types, have been found to be as much at home here as in the kitchen, for which they were designed originally.

ENAMEL HOOKS

Nails and hooks on which damp towels and kitchen cloths are hung should be enameled in a color that will harmonize with the furnishings. Treating hooks and nails in this way will keep them from rusting.

Owing to the structure and placing of a porcupine's mouth, this animal can not drink out of a deep receptacle.

PLUMBING ITEM IS MOST IMPORTANT

If you expect to take advantage of the present low building costs (the lowest in the last ten years) and build a home this spring, here are some of the points with reference to the selection, planning, and installation of your plumbing equipment which it will be worth while for you to know.

In the first place, you will find it the best policy to deal with a plumbing contractor who has been in business long enough to have won a reputation for good work. In dealing with a man who has built up a good reputation over a period of years, you need have n fear about the quality of the workmanship. A very important part of plumbing is hidden in the walls and under the floors of the building. If this part of your plumbing should fail to stand up under the rigors of daily use, you would be subjected to considerable expense and inconvenience in having it replaced. If properly installed, it will last the life of the house.

Suppose several plumbing contractors are bidding on the plumbing for your house and one man is considerably lower than the others. It would be inadvisable for either you or the general contractor to close with the low bidder without first determining if he proposed to install the same grade of fixtures that the other man figured on. Nine times out of ten, such an inquiry will reveal that the low man is low because he intends, in some way, to substitute inferior materials to the detriment of the best interests of the home builder.

Not only should this contractor be questioned closely but inquiry should should be made among home-owners for whom he has done work. It would not be unreasonable to ask him to submit a list of homes and clients for whom he has installed fixtures.

Consult a plumbing contractor before you have the plans drawn for your house. Get his advice on the location of your fixtures and on the quality of fixtures that should be specified. A good plumbing contractor knows plumbing as no one else does. He is in touch with the newest things in the industry and in these days when plumbing fixtures are being constantly improved it is to the interest of every home-owner to protect the resale value of his property by having fixtures that are satisfactory with respect to beauty and utility.

Virtually every plumbing contractor will be glad to give advice on plumbing without any obligation on the part of a prospective home builder.

There was a time not so long ago when little attention was given to the precise location of the bathroom in the average home. Its location was not planned with reference to its function as a room. Too often it was located in any space that didn't happen to be used for something else.

With the entry of colored fixtures into the home, the public attitude toward the bathroom has changed. With colored fixtures, the bathroom takes on a new beauty and the family has a new pride in a room which hitherto had a purely utilitarian appeal.

CHECKING PAINT SPLASHES

When painting a window or picture frame, rub soap around the glass near the edge. Then if the paint splashes on the glass, it can be easily removed.

Little paint spots on door knobs, hardware, and window panes are easily avoided. If vaseline is applied to the door knobs and hardware before the painting is started, any spots can very easily be removed. The same is true of the sills of your windows when they are being painted.

Fined In City Court

At the Monday morning session of the city court, Gustaf H. Lindberg of this city was presented on a charge of violation of the motor vehicle laws and was fined $5 and costs. He was arrested Sunday night on Main street, near Shannon corner, by Officer Peter Driscoll.

The arrest followed a collision between a machine driven by Lindberg and an automobile driven by Arthur Roland of No. 338 West Main street.

A HISTORY OF CONNECTICUT INDUSTRY

Released by Manufacturers Association of Connecticut

Hartford Machine Screw Company, Hartford.

This company was organized in 1876, the first in the screw machine products business. At its inception the late Christopher M. Spencer, inventor of the automatic screw machine—one of the organizers of the Billings & Spencer company and then a workman at the Colt armory—became its superintendent. The company built and operated the first automatic screw machine in the world.

In March 1905 this company was purchased by the Standard Screw company, of which the late W. B. Pearson—one who also spent considerable time and means in the development of screw machinery—was president. Simultaneously P. B. Gale—now president of the Standard Screw company and all its subsidiaries—was elected vice president of the Hartford company and appointed its general manager.

During the following decade the business of the company enjoyed a material growth; considerable automatic machinery for the production of screws, nuts, etc., was developed and built. Today, in addition to the most modern equipment for manufacturing standard screws and nuts, it is also equipped for quantity production of aeronautical and automotive parts to a degree of accuracy not considered possible a decade ago.

The present officers are: P. B. Gale, president and treasurer; P. M. Boyer, vice president and general manager; C. A. Post, secretary; A. R. Crane, assistant treasurer.

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Broadway Theatre

By drawing two "aces" for tomorrow's midweek opening at the Broadway, Manager Fitz is assured of a "full house" for the three-day engagement. "Only The Brave" starts off the program with a bang, starring Gary Cooper, the lanky and beloved star of "The Virginian," as a trusted Union officer in the Civil war, who essays a dangerous mission behind the Confederate lines. Fast, gripping action plus a romance engendered by the winsome Mary Brian as a southern belle, make for a thrilling story of the hectic days when Grant and Lee were swapping explosive compliments over the shell-torn Southland. Hand to hand fighting, with the ominous rumble of the artillery in a sinister crescendo, form a thrilling background for the budding romance, which is nearly doomed when the rebel firing squad lines up to execute the northerner. The surrender of Lee to Grant is an interesting and authentic highlight of the picture. In the cast are Phillip Holmes, Morgan Farley, John Elliott, E. H. Calvert and a host of other favorites. Lovers of the glorious music of Gounod, lovers of mystery and thrills, and lovers of tense drama and beautiful scenic effects will have complete satisfaction in the companion picture, the talking revival of the famous mystery drama, "The Phantom of the Opera," which a few years ago was considered the most sensational production attempted. It remained for the tremendous resources of Universal to remake this great production with sound, dialogue, music and technicolor into a startling masterpiece of filmcraft. The original cast, including Norman Kerry, Mary Philbin, the famous Lon Chaney as the uncanny "Phantom," and the other characters was called upon for this new edition of the old favorite. The majestic music of Gounod's "Faust" is played by a symphonic orchestra of 150 pieces, the choruses by over 200 voices, and the marvelous dramatic sequences and ballets of the opera by a trained operatic cast. Tremendous scenic investiture, including the great Paris Opera House, the dank underground tunnels, the exotic apartment of the "Phantom," and some of the gay resorts of the Paris of the eighties, are lavishly reproduced, and many of the more brilliant scenes are in dazzling technicolor. Fox Movietone news completes the program.

Greta Garbo's alluring voice will be heard for the last times tonight in her first talking picture, "Anna Christie" —her first and her last talking picture —for the exotic Swedish girl is to be lost to the talking screen for two long years, in accordance with the plans of her managers, which, while startling in their scope, are held secret for the present.

National Coffee Week.

NEW YORK, March 31—The five cent cup of coffee is just around the corner. This was one of a number of facts that developed following the recent dinner in New York of twelve consuls general of Central and South American nations. That dinner was unique in several ways even for supposedly blase New York. It brought together formally for the first time twelve chief consular and commercial representatives of Latin America and it centered attention on the interesting part that coffee beans play in international relations between the United States and each of the twelve southern nations represented at the dinner. It was also a fitting prelude to the coming celebration of "National Coffee Week," by 15,000 food stores of the largest chain store system in the world, during the period beginning March 31.

This coffee week celebration was started several years ago and it is to be made an annual event from now on for the purpose of educating the people of the United States in the selection and use of their favorite table beverage. The consuls' general dinner was held primarily to inaugurate a "four o'clock coffee hour in the United States and Canada."

Few people realize that the United States consumes one-half of all the coffee produced in the world, and that Brazil, the world's greatest coffee producing country, furnishes 65 per cent of the amount consumed in the United States. Furthermore, one organization, the Great Atlantic and Pacific Tea Company, with 30 resident buyers in South America, purchases 15 per cent of all coffee imported into the United States from Brazil and a great portion of the coffee produced in the other countries of Latin America.

These figures form an interesting sidelight on what coffee means to the United States as a staple food commodity. Last year the people of this country used 1,233,272,741 pounds of roasted coffee. Carrying these figures into cups of coffee—30 cups to the pound being a fair estimate for properly made coffee—that amount was sufficient to make approximately 37 billion cups or 310 cups a year for every person in the United States.

During the past four months there was a big drop of about 33 per cent in coffee prices to the prewar level. The first drop came in December. And since this big drop in price one of the biggest food chain stores has noted a 20 per cent increase in the sales of its coffee.

Wearing two pairs of trousers, C. H. Schumucker, a banker of Friedens, Pa., saved himself the loss of a large sum of money when held up by two bandits. The highwaymen searched the pockets of the outer pair, but found nothing, the money remaining safe in the under cover trousers.

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Palace Theatre.

"Murder Will Out," a startling mystery romance starring Jack Mulhall, Lila Lee and Noah Beery, and "They Learned About Women," Joe Schenk, Gus Van, Bessie Love and others, are the two big hits which make up the double feature program which starts at the Palace tomorrow for a three-days' run.

And what a run it will be! Here is another powerful program. Imagine, if you can, the plot of "Murder Will Out," which starts in a bachelor apartment, moves on to an exclusive club, then to a deserted highway, a Chinese pagoda on an elaborate country estate, a police detective bureau, a doctor's office, a cemetery at midnight, a United states weather bureau, a morgue, New York harbor and the interior of a submarine. Mix all those places up, give the film a snappy plot and such actors as Lila Lee and Jack Mulhall, and it is easy to see that one will have a hair-raising feature That is exactly what we have.

VAN and SCHENCK in "THEY LEARNED ABOUT WOMEN"

Setting off "Murder Will Out" is the other picture, "They Learned About Women" in which Van and Schenck do their stuff against a smashing background of ten popular song hits.

The plot of this picture concerns Jack and Jerry, big league baseball players, who fill in winter seasons playing vaudeville. Both of them love Mary (Bessie Love) but she is engaged to Jack, who is subsequently vamped by a chorus girl (Mary Doran). One situation piles on top of another and the whole affair is a wonderfully romantic and melodious scramble that will keep you alternately laughing and wondering how it's going to turn out.

Today for the last times the Palace presents Eddie Dowling and Betty Compson in the ringing war and theatre play, "Blaze o' Glory." Here is the last opportunity to see this fine drama here.

UNCASVILLE METHODIST PASTOR IS RETIRING

Rev. Charles Smith, pastor of the Uncasville Methodist church, has announced his intention of retiring at the annual conference, to be held in New London, beginning April 2. Mr. Smith came to Uncasville as pastor 1 1922 and is finishing a pastorate of eight years, (the longest in the history of the church.)

On coming to this church he found both parsonage and church in need of much repair. At once he began planning for general improvement of the property. During his second year, the parsonage was repaired. About two years later the church was painted inside and out, new roofing added, hard wood floor laid, new furniture provided, all at the cost of several thousand dollars. Later on, a garage was built.

About two years after the improvements on the church it was struck by lightning and totally destroyed by fire. An unusually heavy task fell to the pastor and people to build a new church home. Mr. Smith at once began the undertaking and saw his hopes realized when on October 13, 1929, the new church was dedicated. Among the larger gifts was the beautiful window in the front of the auditorium, the splendid pipe organ, the bell, and the ground on which the church is built. The window, the bell, and the lot were given by Mrs. Grace Palmer Melcer. The new church and lot cost between $55,000 and $60,000.

During Mr. Smith's pastorate many have united with the church in membership, some 26 of these during 1929. For more than two years he supplied the Montville Center Congregational church, in addition to his work in Uncasville. He expects to spend the spring and summer months at his summer home at South Harwich, Cape Cod. He may resume some ministerial work in the fall.

A great sorrow came to Mr. Smith and family in the sudden death of Mrs. Smith, March 4, 1930.

BANK MAN TELLS ABOUT SAVINGS BANKS FIELD

and countless other items dealing with human problems. I am sure it is well rendered and let me say, if that advice is on lines upon which every one of you here are interested that it is not given to co-operate with any one dealer, store, company, or group or agency, to the exclusion of others, nor to favor one over another. Each of you conducts your affairs on merit and should be afforded corresponding treatment.

A Measure of Thrift

In one regard we think of the mutual savings banks, in their relations to the common welfare, as a measure of thrift, for by their deposits they show the growth or deterioration of the savings habit among the people and this growth or deterioration reflects whether the people are thrifty or thriftless. These savings banks are striving and always have been, in every way, to assist, not only their depositors, but everyone in their respective communities to practice thrift. Some time ago I cut out an article for my scrap book which reflects the differences between thrift and thriftlessness and what happens when one is substituted for the other. The article was taken from the novel, David Copperfield, by Charles Dickens and is the story of the character, Wilkins Macomber who, in offering counsel to the young Copperfield, said, with his customary eloquence, "Annual income 20 pounds, annual expenditure 19-6, results happiness. Annual income 20 pounds, annual expenditure 20-6, result misery. The blossom is blighted, the leaf is faded and the God of day sets upon the horrid and dismal scene and you are floored forever, as I am." It would not be easy to improve upon this picture of what happens when thriftlessness is substituted for thrift. The sermons are long and many that have been preached by the mutual savings banks on thrift, but not in a selfish way. Thrift means not only to save money, but to save time and energy, to save from waste. The last great war taught our people the virtues that lie in this habit when well cultivated. Thrift helped in a most preponderous manner to win the war. That war brought about conservatism, carefulness and saving in all forms. It left in the hands of thousands, yes, millions, of our people, government-owned bonds which would have been acquired in no other way but from the systematic plan of saving to meet the installment payments until the same were fully paid. So, while your savings banker has been ever anxious to encourage thrift and to inculcate the spirit of saving for that time when its needs can be most fully realized, he has helped mould the habit not only to save money, for thrift means also, personal efficiency, precept, prudence and self-control. The same thrift that has convinced over 40,000,000 people who carry life insurance policies and the army of millions of depositors in the mutual savings banks, of that great confidence which comes to those who take thought of tomorrow, to save for that time when a thousand and one happenings of an unfortunate kind may come in this life; for that time when the returns from the insurance policy or the funds in the savings bank may bridge over the trials and needs of a dependent family, or a member; for the day of illness, expense and possible dependence. That is thrift. The thrift that each one of you believes in, the thrift that while preparing for the future carries with it the contentment and happiness of today. The kind that must awaken us to the realization that thrift and responsibility go hand in hand. That is the kind of thrift you and your mutual savings banks foster and [illegible] for the good of all.

Thrift Leads to Success

In the life of the successful individual you will find it predicated upon the practice of thrift, hard work and a savings bank account. They go hand in hand and will afford a preparedness to meet opportunity. The savings bank account means no great sacrifice or self-denial. It is but to put away systematically a small amount of one's earnings or income. Not to save at the expense of health or comfort but to make oneself comfortable on a level somewhat below that which would be followed if he used up all of his resources. To plan and think. There is a pleasure in the feeling of security, in the assurance that a savings bank account will fortify, with a reserve, against adversity. The determination to save is a cornerstone in one's character and the possession of a savings bank account in a mutual savings bank a true manifestation of it.

I only hope that you realize the cheer and certainty which come from an account in a mutual savings bank, where your money continuously earns for you and is safely protected, where there is no change in style, and where is held on sacred trust, your deposit, the growth of which forms one of the strongest lines of defense in any situation, be it one of opportunity or emergency.

The city of Norwich is indeed blessed with its three mutual savings banks, each of which has shown continued growth in deposits and creation of handsome surplus accounts, for the further protection of its depositors' funds, bespeaking great credit for the directors or trustees and the officers of these institutions (officials both past and present). You should be proud of these individuals, for by their able management and progressive ideas they have placed Norwich on savings bank terms favorable to any city in this state and have held true to the trust of their thousands of depositors.

That the resources of these mutual savings banks shall always continue to play their economic part, in a full measure, to this community is a duty felt by those in charge.

A WET DEMONSTRATION IN GALLERIES OF THE SENATE

Senator Tydings Was Applauded As He Replied to Threat of Political Retirement By Senator Brookhart—Brookhart Had Warned Tydings That His Former Colleague, Senator Bruce, Had Been Retired to Private Life After Making Wet Speeches—Members On the Floor of the Senate Were Startled By the Demonstration—Tydings Had Displayed a Series of Charts Bearing Statistics to Drive What He Termed "The Bunk" Out of Prohibition.

WASHINGTON, April 1—(AP)—Warned of defeat for his attacks on the dry law, Senator Tydings, democrat, Maryland, was applauded enthusiastically from the galleries in the senate today as he shouted he would continue to fight a "cause which is simply dragging the United States and all its traditions and philosophy down into the mire of crime and corruption and hypocrisy."

The Maryland wet was replying to Senator Brookhart, republican, Iowa, a dry, who had warned Tydings that his former colleague, Senator Bruce, democrat, Maryland, had been retired to private life at the last election after making wet speeches.

"If I can pay that price to render some slight service to my country," Tydings declared, "at least I will not be running with the crowd just to get [illegible]."

The Maryland wet and the Iowa dry had been exchanging pointed remarks for more than an hour in the first prohibition debate in the senate in [illegible] after Tydings undertook—with [illegible] of a series of charts bearing [illegible] of statistics—to drive what he [illegible] "the bunk" out of prohibition.

The demonstration from the galleries startled the meagre membership in the floor, ended the heckling by Brookhart and brought a warning from the presiding officer that any other such outbreak would result in the clearing of the galleries.

Challenging the Tydings figures on the effect of the prohibition law, Senator Brookhart contended that statistics showing increases in drunkenness were faulty because they included figures for [illegible] which were dry before national prohibition went into effect. He said the many tables of data merely indicated a "failure to enforce the dry law."

Setting up an easel to hold his various charts in the front of the chamber, Senator Tydings was surrounded by a [illegible] of drys as he spoke. Two of them were on their feet often at the same time to question him.

The galleries were filled. Ambassador and Mrs. Wilhelm Von Prittwitz, of Germany, were in the diplomatic gallery during much of the debate.

The Tydings tables cited the figures on arrests for drunkenness, deaths from alcoholism, grape production and [illegible] estimated amounts of consumption of beverage spirits.

He contended the government was losing $[illegible] annually in taxes [illegible] of prohibition and he added [illegible] the $[illegible] spent annually [illegible] enforcement of the dry law. As he [illegible] with a chart, the Marylander [illegible] it hung from the wall of the senate chamber and he turned then with pointer in hand to the next chart. Concluding his argument, Tydings [illegible]:

"Judged from the standpoint of drunkenness among adults or among drivers of automobiles the facts are against the merits of prohibition.

"From the standpoint of deaths from alcoholism based on the figures of the United States department of commerce and the Metropolitan Insurance Life [illegible] company, the figures are against the success of prohibition.

"Based upon the consumption of alcoholic beverages as evidenced by the increase in the grape crop, in the corn sugar crop and other things from which beverages are made the consumption of liquor today is at least as great if not greater than before prohibition.

"Based upon the amount of money which we spend for it today as compared with the amount of money we spent for liquor before prohibition, we are spending more for our liquor today than we spent for it in the days before national prohibition was adopted.

"We are losing $365,000,000 a year [illegible] to [illegible] for other purposes. That is one-tenth of all the money that comes into the federal treasury each year.

"Judged from the standpoint of savings bank accounts, the increase in savings per year was greater before prohibition than it has been since prohibition.

"Judged from the standpoint of crime and corruption, there is no period in the history of the nation where the [illegible] record and the graft record and [illegible] record ever reached the point where it now thrives and exists in this country.

"Judged from the standpoint of human life, in the killing of men for a mere misdemeanor, which should shock the sensibilities of any man who claims to have even a vestige of real civilization, if we sit here permitting this to go on without having more summary action on the part of our United States district attorneys and on the part of the enforcement officers and on the part of ourselves, than we have had in [illegible], then we, too, have gone over to the multitude and sold our birthright for a mess of very poorly prepared [illegible]."

In [illegible] senate speech, Senator Tydings asserted that wine consumption had increased about two and a half times since the dry law became effective, although beer drinking had dropped to one-third of its pre-prohibition [illegible].

He based his estimate on wine drinking on the increased amount of grape production above normal needs, but Senator Brookhart argued that this increased production was going into grape juice.

When Tydings read a table of statistics on increased drunkenness based on reports from twenty states, Senator Brookhart said that three-fourths of these states were dry before national prohibition went into effect.

The Marylander rejoined that this was a "wild, extravagant statement" and he read over the 20 states and said that two-thirds of them were wet when national prohibition became effective.

"The trouble with the senator is he can't see a dry spot."

"I am looking at the senator from Iowa," replied Tydings, "and can see him very well."

The drys also had their say today and announced their representatives for the final hearing tomorrow before the house judiciary committee on the measures for repeal of the eighteenth amendment.

Those who will go before the committee will be Dr. Edwin C. Dinwiddie, secretary of the Association of National Organizations Supporting the Eighteenth Amendment; F. Scott McBride, general superintendent of the Anti-Saloon league; Deets Pickett, secretary of the Methodist Board of Temperance, Prohibition and Public Morals; Dr. Eugene Crawford, secretary of the committee on temperance and social service of the Methodist Episcopal church South; and J. Weston Allen, former attorney general of Massachusetts.

An adjournment of two weeks will be taken by the house committee before hearing the wet rebuttal witnesses, who will include Pierre S. Du Pont, Wilmington, Del., industrialist. Meanwhile, the committee will consider legislation recommended by the Hoover law enforcement committee to relieve congested federal courts.

DUCHESS OF LEINSTER HALF-SUFFOCATD BY GAS

LONDON, April 1—(AP)—Her grace the Duchess of Leinster, one of the brightest stars in the Piccadilly theatrical firmament before the war, tonight lay dangerously ill in Lambeth hospital after having been found partly conscious early this morning in a gas filled room of her small flat in the drab district of Brixton.

All visitors, including her aged mother, were refused admittance to the bed she occupied in the observation ward.

The duchess was discovered in circumstances that still are obscure in the unpretentious apartment she occupied, half-suffocated by gas fumes.

Her landlady asserted she had been aroused by a violent knocking and found an ambulance waiting in the street in front of the house.

"I was told that it had come to take the Duchess of Leinster to a hospital. I understand she was found in a semi-conscious condition and that there was gas in the room," she said.

The duchess, before her romantic marriage in 1913 to the Duke of Leinster, was famous among London playgoers as May Etheridge of musical comedy fame. But to her recent neighbors in shabby Brixton she was known simply as "Mrs. Williams".

When the duke was still Lord Edward Fitzgerald, May Etheridge was appearing in "The Princess's Caprice", and dashing Lord Edward carried her off to the register's office in a whirlwind courtship.

Quitting the lights of Piccadilly, they spent their honeymoon in a shack beside Lake Ontario.

In 1922 Lord Edward succeeded to the title of "Duke of Leinster" becoming the premier duke, marquess, and early in the Irish peerage. During the World war he served with distinction and was five times wounded.

In September, 1923, the duchess was living in a small flat in Bournemouth, channel seaside resort not far from Southampton. She said then that she was living on allowance of £3 12s 4d per week (about $47.00) and was looking for work.

Three Power Naval Treaty Is Assured

Japan Will Join the United States and Great Britain In Five-year Limitation Program

[illegible]N, April 1.—(AP)—Japan has [illegible] the American-British consor[illegible] for naval disarmament, thereby [illegible]ing the basic success of the London conference with at least a three-power treaty.

A five-power agreement, including France and Italy, still hangs in the balance. Both Foreign Minister Briand, of France, and Prime Minister MacDonald, of Great Britain, said tonight that the gulf was rapidly narrowing on the security issues. But even that chasm bridged, an old terror — Franco-Italian parity — still threatens difficulties.

The Japanese government's favorable reply to participation in a five-year limitation program proposed by the United States and Great Britain was received by the Japanese delegation early this afternoon.

Stimson and MacDonald are highly pleased because the long weeks of delicate negotiations with Tokyo finally are ready to be crowned with success. And in their elation they redoubled their efforts to extend the three-power understanding to an all embracing five power agreement.

Tonight, Mr. Stimson and the American delegation were busy preparing the American pronouncement for Friday's plenary session, which will be the most important session held.

The British spokesman today reported progress in the hunt for an European security formula. Arthur Henderson, the British foreign secretary, continued negotiating with M. Briand. A new development was the enlisting of Dino Grandi, in this work.

Mr. Henderson, Mr. MacDonald, M. Briand and Signor Grandi will continue these security discussions tomorrow.

TO PRESS THE ENACTMENT OF UNEMPLOYMENT LEGISLATION

Three Measures Will Be Submitted to Senate Commerce Committee For a Vote Thursday—Senator Wagner to Press For Early Enactment—Statement Made After President Green of the A. F. of L. Had Asserted That 3,700,000 Wage Earners Were Out of Work In February and Lost Over $400,000,000 In Pay.

WASHINGTON, April 1.— (AP) —Moves for early enactment of pending unemployment legislation followed testimony before a senate committee today by President William Green, of the American Federation of Labor, that 3,700,000 wage earners were out of work in February and lost over $400,000,000 in pay.

Senator Johnson, republican, California, chairman of the sub-committee of the commerce committee that heard Green, said he would submit three bills by Senator Wagner, democrat, New York, in executive session tomorrow. If the sub-committee is willing, he said, he will submit the measures to the full commerce committee for a vote on Thursday, and they may be reported at that time.

Senator Wagner said he would press for early enactment. His plan, encompassed in three measures, would create a commission to plan public construction over long periods, with a $150,000,000 appropriation. It would expand government machinery for collection of unemployment information, and create a federal unemployment agency.

Johnson will ask the sub-committee if it desires further testimony on the bills, but both he and Wagner expected that no other witnesses would be called. Wagner pointed out that as yet no opposition to the bills has been expressed by witnesses or in any other quarters.

Senator McNary, republican, Oregon, assistant republican leader, said that if the bills were reported favorably by the committee, Wagner might move consideration of them at any time.

Green painted a dark picture of present unemployment conditions asserting that during the first three months of the year "those out of work lost well nigh $1,000,000,000." This estimate, he explained, was on the theory that the idle men might have created more than this amount of wealth.

After Green testified the hearings was converted into a round-table discussion, the senators joining with comments. They also heard Miss Helen Hall, Philadelphia social worker, tell scores of stories of distress and suffering in families she studied first-hand in a nation-wide survey of the effect of joblessness in the community neighborhood.

In a matter-of-fact manner, Green told the committee that the government must make provision for unemployed workers "or have a revolution on its hands." The country, he said, "can't stand these shocks."

MAKER OF HOME BREW HAD HIMSELF "PINCHED"

GREENEVILLE, Mich., April 1—(AP)—Greenville has one less bootlegger today because, Chief of Police Hugh Yaner says, the gentleman in question sampled his own wares and found them good enough to justify consumption of a dozen bottles or so.

Yaner received a call yesterday from Clifford Hill, 34, who said, "Please come and pinch me for bootlegging." It wasn't Ajril Fool day yet, so the chief responded. Hill met him at the door with hands extended.

"Handcuffs, please," he said.

The chief was inquisitive. "Who is making a charge?" he wanted to know. "I am" said Hill, who explained that business had been slack and he had spent a good part of the day drinking up his stock in trade of home brew.

At headquarters Hill repeated his statements in affidavit form. Tonight he is in the state reformatory at Ionia starting a sentence of one to four years.

FEUD RESULTED IN SHOOTING AND SUICIDE

YAZOO CITY, Miss., April 1.—(AP)—A feud between a mayor and an editor resulted today in the shooting of F. R. Birdsall, editor of the Yazoo Sentinel, and the suicide of Mayor J. O. Stricklin.

Witnesses said Dr. Hawkins and Mayor Stricklin were standing on Main street talking when Editor Birdsall turned the corner. As the editor approached, the mayor said:

"Well, I might as well have it out with you fellows now."

With that he pulled his revolver and pointed it at the dentist but he darted up a stairway and caught the bullet in his coat.

The mayor then fired twice at the editor. The editor collapsed. Witnesses said the mayor fired a third shot after the editor had fallen.

OKLAHOMA CITY, April 1.—(AP)—While the men who summoned its tremendous power from the depths of the earth made new preparations to harness it, the great No. 1 Mary Sudik gusher continued to belch a geyser of oil and gas into the air in the south Oklahoma City field tonight.

New connections were being made with which it was hoped to shut in the well. The gusher burst forth anew yesterday after it virtually had been conquered, when sand in the gas and oil content blasted its way through a leak and ate away the metal master-gate in the same manner the sea enlarges a crevasse in a dike.

Any Old Rags, Any Bottles To Sell?

We have no way of knowing how many PRINTZESS coats and suits we have sold to the ladies of Willimantic and vicinity.

But we do know that all of them which are available, are still in good condition.

We know that the cloth, the lining and the trimmings are still as good as new, even if the style has slipped a bit.

We would like to borrow some of these old PRINTZESS garments for a few days, and will pay one dollar each for the loan of all those over ten years old; and five dollars for the oldest one, in the best condition.

So look up your old PRINTZESS garments, brush 'em up a bit, loan them to us for a dollar each, and we promise to return them to you in a few days.

DANIELSON

TO ASK TOWN TO BUY ITS OWN ROAD TRUCKS

(Special to The Bulletin)

DANIELSON, April 1.—It developed today that a petition is being circulated in the vicinity of Dayville that is addressed to the selectmen and which requests the calling of a special town meeting to see if the voters will authorize the purchase of one or two trucks to be used in carrying on road repair work in town and for such other town purposes as may be needed.

Proponents of the proposition contend that by owning and operating its own trucks instead of hiring them the town can save a very considerable sum of money on its road repair work each year. One suggestion heard relative to the plan today was that the purchase price of one or two trucks be taken from the money appropriated for the upkeep of highways, but others contend that this cannot legally be done. The town at present owns one old truck that is kept at the town farm in Dayville. It was regarded as probable today that the petition will be in the hands of the selectmen during the course of the present week.

Census Work Begins Today

The first of Danielson's residents will be checked in the census in Danielson Wednesday morning. L. S. Barstow of East Killingly, who has the borough census-taking assignment, said this afternoon that he expects to begin his work in Broad street. The home of Postmaster and Mrs. E. H. Keach is the first scheduled to be visited. Mr. Barstow will be busy for the next several days in the eastern section of the borough.

Per Capita Fire Loss Is 78 Cents

Another fiscal year of the borough having closed with Monday, Chief A. P. Woodward of the fire department said this morning that fire losses for the borough during the last twelve months amounted to only $2580, or 78 cents per capita, another remarkable showing. There were 38 alarms during the year, or seven less than during the preceding year. There were 3 chimney fires, 5 grass fires, two fires caused by smoking, one fire caused by lightning, one from fireworks and others caused by an overheated stovepipe, by a kettle of fat, by a leaking gas pipe, by a steam-cooker and by an automobile, among other causes. Of the alarms, 23 were box calls, 12 were "33" calls and 3 telephone calls. There were three false alarms during the year.

While the showing this year, as to the small amount of losses is an exceptionally fine one, it is not so good as last year, when the losses totaled only $590, a per capita of 19 cents.

Louis S. Barstow, of East Killingly, is the official census-taker for the borough of Danielson, and is expected to begin his work Wednesday morning. Ira A. Warren will do the northwestern section of the town, Herbert E. Hopkins, the northeastern section, and John Higgins, of Elmville, the southeastern section.

Caught 5 Lbs. Trout

Joseph B. Stetson, one of the best known residents of Brooklyn, in all probability can lay claim to being the only living person who has caught in this territory a brook trout weighing in excess of five pounds. Now in his 82d year, Mr. Stetson talked of trout and other things while in Danielson for a time this morning. In that territory near the famous Pine Tree hole on Snake Meadow brook, when he was a boy of about 12, he caught such a trout as every fishermen hopes to some day. The man who had taken him fishing evidently assigned him to a good location. Out of Mr. Stetson's basket came a little field mouse that day he having picked it up on the way to the pool. Many fishermen allow these make great bait for the big speckled beauties, and in this case it worked out that way. Mr. Stetson had not been fishing long when there was a commotion in the pool that might have been created by a person coming up after swimming under water, the bait was seized and the battle on. Declining aid from his adult companion he fought it out with the fish and landed it—a beauty that weighed 5 pounds and 2 ounces. Such trout are not caught in waters hereabouts nowadays, nor were they plentiful 70 years ago.

Stolen Car Found

The car owned by Leonard P. Morrison that was stolen from the rear of the Keystone block the past week end has been recovered in Hartford, parked in what is known as the 50-cent parking space, where it had been left by the thieves who took it. A strange angle of the case is that the thieves, after having wrecked, at Mechanicsville, a car they had stolen a few hours before in West Warwick, R. I. last Friday evening, were given a ride to Danielson in another of Mr. Morrison's cars that was coming down from Webster. Naturally, the driver of this latter car did not know that the wrecked machine was a stolen one, nor that he was giving a lift to thieves willing and anxious to steal another machine.

PUTNAM

ELKS DEFEAT MASONS IN ANNUAL TOURNAMENT

(Special to The Bulletin)

PUTNAM, April 1—An enthusiastic group of indoor athletes of the green covered table went out from the Elks home on Main street Monday evening, journeyed over to the Masonic club on Main street where they met a battalion of the Masonic order, engaged in the final battle of the season, and three hours later departed with a seasonal victory over their friendly enemies in the winter tournament, after turning back the Masons in the last round by a score of 9 to 5.

While the Elks were victorious for the third consecutive year, the Masonic brothers were left with one consolation, that being the fact that the defeat inflicted upon them by the Brother Bills was in no way overwhelming. A sixteen point margin was all that stood between the Masonic forces and victory, the seasonal standing being Elks 128—Masons 112.

The Elk returned with the spoils of victory safely lodged between its antlers—in a Masonic promise that the defeated hosts will entertain the conquering and seemingly invincible Bills, at a turkey supper to be served in the Masonic club on Monday evening, April 14.

"Old Slippery" the giant 45-ton elm tree owned by Mrs. T. Morris Murray of Abington reached "Gwen Careg Farm" this morning after a hectic journey of 12 days. The tree made the jaunt from a farm land in the village of Pomfret Landing over the country road and lastly over the stretch of state highway between Pomfret station and the Murray estate in Abington. The special carrying apparatus employed by the tree specialists reached the gate at the farm early this morning, with its monstrous passenger laying horizontally on the cassion-like dray. The tree is 55 inches in diameter at the trunk and is 94 feet over all. The state highway between Pomfret and Abington four corners was re-opened to travel this morning as soon as the road was cleared of the massive obstruction.

The street signs of the city are sadly in need of re-vamping. The name plates on the thoroughfares which have been in use for some years are a sore sight to travellers and should be replaced this season with signs of a more sturdy and element-resisting metal. The matter of decorating the street intersections with new indicators has been called to the attention of the common council, through the chamber of commerce. The signs now in use are of a steel plate mounted on a wooden back-board, with the letters enameled on the plate. The paint has faded and in a number of instances boy marksmen using the street signs for targets have been successful in disfiguring them.

The highway committee of the council has been contemplating the purchase of an all metal type sign to replace the battered veterans now in use. The outfitting of all streets in the city with new signs constitutes an expensive undertaking and in view of this fact it is believed that the matter will be thoroughly gone into before any definite action is taken by the city government.

Former Judge Frank F. Russell of Grove street, who has recently returned from a winter sojourn in Florida, speaks in terms of high praise of the territory south of the Mason-Dixon line, which he characterizes as being a most beautiful and enchanting country. Mr. Russell, with Mrs. Russell, left this city on December 13 of last year and returned about three weeks ago. He described his annual winter tour of the south, most of which was spent in Florida as an expedition, rather than a visit to any certain city in the "land of perpetual summer." Mr. Russell and his party visited all of the important cities of the peninsula state and made tours into the most southern and remote sections. Mr. Russell said that the joy and comfort of his winter journey this year was enhanced by the exceptionally fine weather and climatic conditions in Florida.

Word was received in this city today of the death of Frederick Donovan, last night in West Brookfield, Mass. Mr. Donovan was a former resident of this city.

TO ASK CITY TO BUILD SEWER IN SO. MEADOW ST.

(Special to The Bulletin)

PUTNAM, April 1.—Dangerous and unsanitary conditions existing on South Meadow street, one of the unsewered sections of the city, were described by City Engineer George W. Perry in a report to the common council at its April session tonight. As the result of Mr. Perry's presentation of facts a bill was passed recommending that a special city meeting be called to ask the voters to appropriate the sums of $4,500 to be expended in the installation of 700 feet of 24-inch sewer pipe on South Meadow street to convey sewage to the Quinebaug river.

The cost of this project was estimated at $2,100. The bill passed also called for the installation of a lift-pump to cost $2,400.

The pump is necessary to lift the sewage from a pit into the main sewer flow, since South Meadow street is so low that a gravity flow is impossible.

An extensive sidewalk building campaign in various parts of the city will be underway within a few months, the recommendations of the highway committee indicated tonight. The council approved the recommendations of the committee for the installation of curbings and gutters on a number of streets now in a poor condition. If the citizens approve the recommendation to appropriate the necessary funds needed to install curbings and gutters sidewalks will be constructed on all of the streets to be improved.

South Main street, beginning at the intersection of Center street and continuing in an easterly direction to the city line is to be improved at an expenditure of $300. The street will also be conditioned for oiling at some future date.

With the report of Alderman Mignesult of the highway committee, on the street improvement programme, the total amount of money to be asked for at the special meeting will be about $9,400, most of which will be used in the street and sidewalk improvement programme.

TENNIS TROUSERS MAY INVADE COURTS

PARIS, March 16—(AP)—Wimbledon's tennis rules committee, which insisted on women wearing stockings in last year's tournament, may have to deal with the trouser problem this season.

The common version is ankle length cotton pique trousers worn with a sleeveless, and sometimes backless, jersey or vest.

LONG DRESSES FOR CHURCH SPANISH MONARCH'S IDEA

PARIS, March 16—(AP)—King Alfonso of Spain first had the idea that short skirts and religious worship do not go together and something ought to be done about it.

In 1927, recounts Madame Alice Bellier, one of several Paris dressmakers who make clothes for the Queen of Spain and the Spanish Infantas, King Alfonso complained to his Life that silk stockings and knees were too outstanding in church.

The result was the Spanish court's church dresses with their long skirts and sleeves and lace veils.

She specializes in the black long skirted and high necked dresses women must wear for audiences with the Pope.

POETRY

A Lifelong Task

One thing God gives us here to create
In our earthly span of years,
If may cost in toil and sacrifice
Much sorrow and many tears;
And we must high courage come to know,
Perseverance—patience—too,
To make this thing a lifelong task,
But it's yours and mine to do.

And we are creating day by day,
By our thoughts and by our deeds;
By the way we meet temptation's hour,
By our help for others' needs,
The thing we call "one-s-self"—and here
Lies motive for inward strife—
For as we conquer we shall prepare
For a better, fuller life.

Let us shape this soul with high resolve,
To make it shine like a star,
So will it grow in beauty and strength,
Be free from defacing scar;
And building well with thought and with care,
So that it may stand through time,
Setting firm faith as a pillar there,
Holding to pattern sublime,
Then this thing God gave each man to make—Himself—at the last may be Fitted by striving and grace of God
To grow on eternally.

A Friend

Of all the gifts that time and earth bestow,
Of all the blessings that from heaven descend,
There is none half so precious that I know
As one true Friend.

What are a host of enemies to me,
If there is one on whom I may depend?
All hell's battalions instant turn and flee
Before a Friend!

Straight from the Father's kindly heart you came,
The citadel of my spirit to defend;
One faithful word, one utterance of my name—
Thank you, my Friend!

HUGE DIRIGIBLE'S FRAME STARTS TO TAKE SHAPE

Children Need the Extra Help In FATHER JOHN'S MEDICINE

Gives Strength To Throw Off More Serious Illness

Colds, coughs, and other serious illness fasten on undernourished children—and hang on and on, as long as the child does not get the kind of food that is needed for strength.

But—when Father John's Medicine is given to pale, weak, rundown children, they gain weight, color, and the strength to throw off the weakening, dangerous coughs.

Father John's Medicine is such a dependable body builder because its basis is the purest cod liver oil so blendid with other valuable ingredients that its food elements are readily taken up even by those who are weak and run down.

Mrs. E. O. Deery, Jr., 1347 East 36th St., Flatbush, Brooklyn, N. Y., writes: "Father John's Medicine has been a help and safeguard against colds and sickness in our family for three generations. The first time your medicine was used was about 1875 by my mother's mother in Ware, Mass. We have two children, ages six and four, and they have never been sick, which we attribute to the building properties of Father John's Medicine."

HELP THE CENSUS

This is the day when the census taker begins his work. He is acting in accord with federal law. He has certain duties to perform. They are not determined by him, but are the result of studied thought on the part of those who are directing this stupendous job and endeavoring to obtain information that will be of advantage to the country at large.

It is thus important that you should give the enumerator a proper reception, be prepared so far as possible to give him the information he seeks in the shortest possible time and permit him to secure an answer to all his questions on his first visit.

There may be some questions which you do not like, but do not blame the enumerator for them. He is not at fault. He is but one of many thousands who are asking the same questions, which have been arranged in the existing form after considering them from all angles and striving to get the most comprehensive answers to certain conditions. It is likewise well to remember that if you don't like the census, the questions, or the motive back of them, it does no good to try to take it out on the census taker. Don't start out to give him a piece of your mind for something about which he is in no way responsible. It isn't asked for and it isn't expected. Inasmuch as he has a duty to perform, do all you can to get it over with as rapidly as possible.

The visit of the enumerator should not be a long one, but the length may depend to a large extent upon the individual giving the information. With full cooperation on the part of the public the blanks can be filled out in short order, and it is to be realized that the enumerator has reason to expect that cooperation.

Those who endeavor to dodge the census taker, those who try to mislead him or handicap his work, should realize that they are simply inviting trouble for themselves which may easily be of a character far more disturbing than furnishing the information sought. The census is taken only once in ten years and it should be accurate to amount to anything. Thus there is an obligation resting upon each one questioned to facilitate a correct count and the gathering of the additional facts desired. If you treat the census taker just the same as if you were in the same line of business there can be no criticism.

THE CROSSING DANGER

How the grade crossing danger looms up before the motoring public is disclosed by the figures given out by the interstate commerce commission to the effect that there are over 210,000 such danger spots in this country. That means that there is an average of more than 4,300 in each state and it is declared that there is an unprotected grade crossing to each 14 miles of highway of all kinds. Though the number will vary with the different states, because of their size and because of the difference in the railroad mileage therein, it is apparent that they constitute a sufficient menace to call for proper respect.

When it is shown that there were more than 8,300 persons killed at such crossings in 1928, it is convincing evidence that there is not only danger at crossings but that too many fail to properly appraise it, but when it is also disclosed that the grade crossings are on the gain from year to year instead of decline, despite the work of elimination, it demonstrates more clearly than ever the care that the users must exercise.

It is estimated that it would require $10,000,000,000 to get rid of grade crossings. That is a tidy sum to come from state, city or railroad treasuries, but with the construction of new roads the crossings grow in number, averaging over 1,300 more each year for the three years prior to 1929. Thus, while certain things are being accomplished through elimination, it is perfectly evident that the greatest measure of protection that can be expected must come from the steps taken by crossing users to protect themselves.

There is as much reason for taking the little precaution that is needed at such points as there is in driving carefully elsewhere on the highway. There is no call for the recklessness that is displayed. Most of those thousands who were killed at such places lost their lives needlessly. A little caution would have prevented the slaughter. Thus, while crossings are increasing in number in spite of the removals that are being made from year to year, it is time for all motorists to recognize the necessity of doing something for themselves and preventing their own destruction at a grade crossing.

REGULATING BUSSES

From the early days when busses began taking the place of railroads for the transportation of passengers and establishing routes across state lines, there has been a demand for some means of regulation. It has been apparent that they were not being subjected to the same regulatory measures that govern the railroads. They have been free to do about as they pleased, while transportation lines with which they competed were subjected to certain restrictions.

Whether the situation should be met by a joint commission representing adjoining states or by the interstate commerce commission has long been a question. It has been considered that the joint board might understand the respective situations much better than a federal body, and it has been contended that the interstate commerce commission has enough work looking after the railroads without being obliged to shoulder the job of regulating bus lines. And yet, from another angle, it is maintained that it is the kind of service with which the federal body deals and out of fairness the various lines should come under the same regulatory body, especially since the railroads are more and more going into the business of operating bus lines in the place of railroads or as feeders to the steam lines.

Bus transportation entirely within a state rests with the public utilities commissions of the respective states. It is only when lines cross state borders that they engage in interstate commerce for which no regulation is provided. To meet this situation there is now before congress a bill conferring the necessary authority upon the interstate commerce commission to regulate such transportation and to facilitate its work by having the matter dealt with first by joint state boards with the right of appeal to the federal commission.

It is such a bill that has received favorable action in the house and which now awaits such treatment as may be accorded in the senate. The matter is headed toward a solution for which the country has long waited. Whether it is going to be satisfactory can be told through a test. The important thing is to make a start.

MUSCLE SHOALS

Once again that old question of doing something with Muscle Shoals is before congress. There is no question but what something ought to be done with the big investment the government has made in that war-time enterprise. As it is now, there is nothing being accomplished, but there has been set forth no convincing reason that it should be operated as a government proposition.

Enough has been seen from government activities of this character to confirm the opinion that in dealing with Muscle Shoals it should be turned over to private capital. There is no more reason why the government should operate that development than it should continue in the shipping business.

It is time that congress did something that would overcome the present situation. The bill that is under consideration is one that calls for government operation, the idea advanced being that it will be used for turning out cheap fertilizer for agricultural purposes and selling such surplus of electrical power as there may be on long-term contracts. It was this proposition that received the pocket veto of President Coolidge. This wasn't because he opposed doing something with Muscle Shoals but because he didn't consider government operation a sensible thing. He was heartily in sympathy with agriculture, but he had little faith in government operation. It isn't believed that President Hoover is any more favorably disposed to such a plan, although he would welcome the day when it could be put to use by private capital under a contract with the government. Experience with government ownership has been sufficient to warn against any further experiments. If it is desired that Muscle Shoals operation be successful, it is well to keep the government and politics out of it.

FIRST QUARTER'S COLLECTIONS

Special interest has been manifested in the returns shown by the collections of internal revenue for the first quarter of this year. This is because of the reduction that has been made in taxation and the possibility that changing conditions during the latter part of last year might have such effect upon the revenue as to make a deficit possible.

Thus far, final figures for the collections have not been obtained, but, according to the last tabulations at Washington, it has been shown that the revenue will reach if not exceed the estimate that was made. That will mean that even though congress, at the suggestion of the president, puts into effect at the close of the year a reduction of 1 per cent in the income tax rates, effective on last year's incomes and totaling probably $160,000,000, it has not upset the calculations and the indications are that the decline in revenue will be no greater than was anticipated.

While it was expected that there would be a decline, it is shown that there was such excellent business in many lines for the most of 1929 that the incomes were still high, despite the situation that was created by the crash in stocks during the last part of the year.

There is always much concern in government circles over the avoidance of a deficit and keeping the budget balanced. It is quite evident that the situation is one which does not warrant unwise and extravagant outlays, even though complete returns may place the quarter's figures at a higher level than anticipated. Satisfaction must necessarily prevail over the showing that has been made. It confirms the belief that the tax reduction was recommended on sound lines and shows on what excellent foundation has the business of the country been established.

A STITCH IN TIME

"Why doesn't some clever man invent a button which won't come off and a seam that won't rip?"

Ben Strebling held a light gray coat in his hands while he glared helplessly at a big hole in the lining and the hanging thread of two missing buttons.

With an impatient hand he tossed a pair of golf knickers to the floor.

"Home was never like this! Buttons all off, socks full of holes, my only pair of decent knickers with a three-cornered hole. Every game of golf I play seems to wreck at least one garment. I can't wait, either. I must have these things tomorrow night when I go home with the big boss for the week-end. Didn't I see a sign somewhere lately on a little shop around the corner?"

With his thoughtful blue eyes fixed on the coat, Ben frowned. Living in an apartment with two cosy rooms to himself was fine. He liked the brisk walk along the lake front to the office twice a day, liked everything about the city and his work in the great wholesale house. But how he missed the quick eyes and constant needle of his mother! If he only knew someone who would keep track of his clothes, his troubles would be over.

"Aha, I have it! Right next to the hotel, in the window of the tailor shop I remember seeing something about mending and stitching. I'll stop there as I go to the office."

A half hour later he entered the shop, several garments over his arm, a look of expectancy on his sun-browned face. He smiled cheerfully at the slim girl in the lavender smock who stood behind the table.

"I noticed your sign on the window: 'A stitch in time.' I'm in a big hurry for these things. Could you have them fixed up by tonight?"

The girl smiled back. How pretty she was!

"Yes, indeed, that's just what we're here for. I'll have these sent to you by 5 o'clock." There was a trace of amusement in her smile now." "Can we call for your mending each week? This is a special service in connection with my uncle's tailor shop."

"Fine! Just what I've been looking for! But I'll stop with the things. I pass here every day, anyway." Ben heard himself saying this in surprise. Now, why should he stop, when she could just as well send a boy for the clothes? He left the shop slowly and he found himself thinking of the girl many times that day.

In the next month Ben enjoyed the certainty of all buttons in place and torn places made whole again. Few days passed when he did not have to stop at the tailor shop. He grew to hope for rips or broken seams. When a week passed without a possible chance to go to the shop he found that he was very restless.

On a certain Monday Ben eyed his clothes sharply for missing buttons or rips. No luck. Everything seemed to be in hopelessly good condition.

Suddenly he grinned widely, his blue eyes twinkled. With one deft twist he pulled off two buttons. Proud of his ingenuity, he next ripped a coat lining loose for several inches. Then he dressed for his office and away he went to the tailor shop. Three days later he again jerked off some buttons.

But there came a day when Ruth eyed him in surprise. She flushed a bit as she dropped her lashes before his steady, admiring attention.

"Why, this coat looks exactly as though some one had cut off the buttons!" she said. "Isn't this the same one you brought in last week? It's ripped in the very same place." Ben looked straight back at the confused girl, his eyes dancing. Then he spoke softly.

"I confess. But I had to have some excuse to see you oftener. I wish your seamstress wouldn't sew those buttons on so tight!"

Ruth considered him for a long moment. Then she started to laugh softly. And Ben, joining in her mirth, grew bold. He leaned over the table and said coaxingly: "After all, it's rather hard on my clothes, ripping them up like that. If you'd promise to have dinner with me some night I wouldn't have to rip things up for an excuse to see you."

And as Ruth smiled her consent Ben remarked gleefully: "I always thought that old saying 'a stitch in time' was over-rated. But I've completely changed my mind."—Chicago News.

A Washington Bystander

By KIRKE L. SIMPSON
Associated Press Staff Writer

WASHINGTON, April 1—Among the 76 names of men appointed to the supreme court since its organization in 1789, John Marshall, fourth chief justice, stands pre-eminent.

For him alone of all these noted men of the law has a special place been made. His statue graces the very center of the towering west front of the capitol building.

Behind it curve away the arms of the ivy mantled niche between double stairways that sweep upward to the higher terraces. Above looms the great building and over all rises the majesty of the dome.

None other of Washington's crowding statues of great man gone has so wonderful a setting. That seated figure dominates the whole aspect of the capitol that greets a visitor coming from the city proper to its halls.

Mr. Holmes

And when you read down the long list of high judges, living and dead, you are forced to the conclusion that of all the men who preceded or followed Marshall on the bench none vied with him for public attention as has Mr. Justice Holmes, now in his 90th year.

But for fate that brought death both to Mr. Justice Holmes, now in his 90th year.

But for fate that brought death both to Mr. Justice Sanford and to former Chief Justice Taft on the 89th anniversary of the birth of the veteran, much more would have been said of him on that day.

Yet even as it was, there was space aplenty in the crowded news columns to note that another year of service had been marked for "this grand old humanitarian."

"Ordinarily the services of a judge, however eminent, go unnoticed by the masses of the people," said Representative McSwain of South Carolina in voicing an unusual tribute to the aged jurist.

"Ordinarily the judge may live only in history and traditions of bench and bar. A conspicuous exception is Mr. Justice Holmes. Attention of our people is increasingly centered upon this great judge, who grows in their affections and seems to grow broader in his sympathies as he grows older in years and riper in service.

Human

"What is the explanation? It is more than that his mind has kept the vigor of his youth, his clarity of mind and his sprightliness of spirit.

"It must be the fact that in spite of hereditary influences and his educational and local traditions, in spite of the isolated life of a judge, he is manifestly and exceptionally human and natural in both his manner of life and official labors."

There was much more than that to McSwain's speech. It was echoed also by senate colleagues during the debate on the Hughes nomination as chief justice.

And if ever any other judge has been so extolled in life or after his death in the nation's history as has been the lot of this "great dissenter," record of the fact is lost.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Just A Thought.

Mr. Editor: Do you know I usually believe walking has become a lost art, for today if we want to go even a block we wait until a bus comes in sight, and then we hand up a dime. This represents the interest on a two dollar bill for one year at 5 per cent. Don't think I am chiding you for doing this, for I do it myself, and why do we do this? We never used to do it for if we wanted to go down to the "Landing" we would walk. But it seems to me safer to ride than walk for in crossing the street at a busy hour you many jump in front of one car while you dodge another.

I just want to tell you a story to make this assertion plain. A man is trying to cross the street, he steps off the curb, a bicycle dashes around the corner, he escapes, he tries again when, honk, honk, an auto dashes by. Timidly he tries the third time when he sees a trolley bearing down on him. He dodges this. Hearing a purring noise he sees an airplane just above him. There is an open man hole just before him. He stumbles into this and is run over by a subway train. I tell you in this age there does not seem to be any sure way to escape. This is merely told to show you the many hazards that confront the people. The moral to all this is, stay on the sidewalk and fall down a coal shute.

Say, old timers, remember when you used to drive up to your best girls' door with a nice horse and buggy, with a fancy whip in the socket and with a fancy pink ribbon tied in a big bow knot around it? I suppose the reason you had that certain color was because it was her favorite color. Do you remember how the neighbors would be peeking out behind the curtains when you drove up to the door, to see who it was, and even the horse knew just at which door or house to stop. When you arrived there I really believe the horse knew what was expected, for he would look around and it seemed as though he winked at you and seemed to say, "This is the place and boy go get her."

You did, and what a craning of necks to see you help her in. You so kindly tucked the lap robe around her. Oh, yes, that was perfectly all right. And after this was all attended to, her cheeks were the color of the ribbons on the whip. That's all right, you [illegible] to feel in your own mind that she was perfectly comfortable. Then she would just settle back on the seat, and boy, you wouldn't swap places for a million dollars. The horse knew his business, for if he was a livery horse he had been there before, for when you had gotten out in some rather secluded section his cue was to walk. Yes, sir, that animal knew his lesson and he is entitled to credit! Didn't your girl love to drive, for of course you couldn't drive very well with one hand. When it became very dark you would take the lines and drive yourself, and she would snuggle up close to you. What a girl! What a night! Was there anything in this world to equal this, the girl of your dreams. And you? The shades of night had covered the earth with a mantle of darkness, and you asked her if she didn't like you just a little bit. But that is the sweetest story ever told. Just keep that locked up in your memory for it is too sacred to expose to the gaze of others. Now everything is hurry and the romantic setting is all gone, for now there is nothing to compare between a buggy and a motor car, and all you get is the creaking of the car, especially if it is over a year old.

When the boys of today are old like we are, and we are a long time forgotten, there will be some one to take down the history and will read of the real happiness that their ancestors had when out with a good horse and buggy, and the most necessary part, a splendid girl. All are gone, for today we see them as their finances have improved riding along in a limousine with a lap dog instead of having a little fairy in the house. It seems as though us old fellows just have to believe the old days were the best. But don't kid yourself, the very things that we have today are away ahead of some of the things we had 60 years ago. The only thing I miss is youth. I would like to go out with a nice horse and buggy all slicked up, and with a splendid girl with me. Say, young man, that was living, and when you brought her back home, you recall just before you said good night, you just kissed her. Gee, wasn't you the bold thing! And didn't you think kissing was like eating soup with a fork, for it was a long time before you had enough. This is station "Yesterday" signing off.

Breakfastless Children And Tuberculosis

By Logan Clendening, Kansas City.
(From Gorgas Memorial Institute)

Mother hasn't time to fix a hot breakfast. Or she hasn't time to fix a breakfast at all. So the children open a can of apricots and a box of crackers. Then at school they get tired and cross because they haven't had enough food to fuelize their engines. So when lunch time comes they have lost their appetite. It is just as well they have, for lunch is no better than breakfast. Mother is going to a bridge game or to a movie so a few pickles or an ice cream soda at the drug store is all they get. Mother has reached the age of cigarettes instead of a decent meal, and they all get fatigued in the course of the afternoon.

This is an exaggerated picture of many American homes today? If doctors who inquire into these details from patients may be believed, it is not. It is happening on your own street.

We have heard so much about the dangers of overeating recently that it might be well to consider that the opposite—undereating—has some dangers too. One of them certainly is tuberculosis. Of the three or four different factors which influence the acquisition of tuberculosis—bodily build, contact, fresh air, sunshine and good nourishment—some are beyond control, such as our bodily build, or exposure to tuberculosis (which is everywhere). We can't all go to Florida in the winter, so we can't get plenty of sunshine. But nearly all of us can be well nourished—if we want to. If we want to! Of course if a nice figure is more important than getting consumption we can't. If getting to the bridge game is more important than must go hungry or badly fed. But it is well to understand the consequences.

Nothing illustrates the influence of food on tuberculosis better than the World war experience. For fifty years the incidence of tuberculosis had been steadily declining. Then came the war and a distinct restriction of food to the civil population. The number of cases of tuberculosis sprang up as if some unseen power had touched a button. In Germany where food restriction was most rigorously enforced this was most notable. In one province of Germany the number of cases of tuberculosis increased nearly a hundred thousand in 1917 over the last prewar year 1913.

Hanging in England

LONDON—All England is intensely interested in the announcement that three widely known American criminologists may be invited to help Britain in deciding whether capital punishment shall be abolished in this country.

These three experts are George W. Kirchwey, of New York, Lewis E. Lawes, governor of Sing Sing prison, and Judge Marcus A. Kavanagh, of Chicago.

The committee of the House of Commons which is delving into this difficult question may request those Americans either to appear in person to submit views in writing. Upon findings of this committee will depend whether a bill shall be introduced to do away with the death penalty.

Since the beginning of English history, capital punishment has been the price paid for murder in any part of the British Isles.

And in this country there is only one mitigating circumstance in connection with murder—outright insanity, which calls for life imprisonment. Crimes of passion sway no judge or jury. The mother who shoots the woman who has ruined her home must hang.

There is no distinction in the matter of sex. Men and women alike are dropped through the heart-chilling little trap door into eternity.

But in recent years there has grown up a considerable opposition to capital punishment. Because of this growing sentiment, the government appointed the committee to look into the matter.

I was much interested in a chat I had the other day with George Ingram, England's most notorious ex-burglar. He created a world sensation in 1923 by stealing, with help of a colleague, two priceless Gainsborough portraits from Benham House. Ingram has served a long term in prison and knows the underworld as perhaps few men do. More than that, he has been a student of criminology for many years.

He is firmly convinced that capital punishment does not prevent murder. He told me that many times he has had hardened criminals say to him that they would much rather be hung than go to prison for life. They fear death less than they do the awful, soul crushing solitude of grim stone and steel cells.

Running through some old London newspapers several items brought home forcefully the remarkable change a few generations have produced in the handling of criminals.

Read's Weekly Journal for January 26, 1754, records in its quaint English that the sentence of death was passed on nine people for burglary and theft.

But by far the most striking thing was this, in another issue of the same paper published a few days later:

"Last week the famous Mary Brown, alias Margaret Dunn, as executed at Oxford; she acknowledged her crime, but said she thought it too small an offence to lose her life for, which was picking a pocket of five or six shillings three years ago."

They hung Mary Brown for stealing five shillings. And now they are considering whether they shall abolish hanging for murder.

"Exalting the Valleys"

SCRIPTURE: Memory Verse: "Every valley shall be exalted" (Isaiah 40:4).

Read: Isaiah 40:1-8.

MEDITATION: Life is a cross-country journey. It lies over valley and hill. Isaiah says that every valley shall be exalted and every mountain and hill shall be made low. The order of the phrases may indicate that valleys furnish the greatest problems. Certainly they furnish the greatest problems in spiritual engineering. The mountains do not present so much difficulty. Men are not much intimidated by mountains. There is a challenge in the mountains that stirs one's spirit. It is the valleys that discourage. If we can only get our problem or difficulty into such shape that it will challenge us, as a mountain challenges, we can usually handle it. To conquer a valley, exalt it, make a hill out of it, and then climb the hill.

PRAYER: O Thou, through whom we are more than conquerors, help us to face this day without fear. May every difficulty that arises be a summons to our spirits to disclose the vast divine resources that thou hast put within us. To him that overcometh thou dost give the crown of life. Amen.

CHILD TRAINING

Fear And Its Effect Upon Young Children

Janette Stevenson Murray

In one of our parks last summer, there was a well dressed woman with her two little boys. The three-year-old kept running away. Finally in exasperation she shook him saying, "If you don't stay beside me, I'll throw you into the bear's pit and he'll eat you up."

Another distraught mother in a big hotel silenced her obstreperous son with the threat, "Now you make less noise or I'll go away and leave you here alone."

An ordinarily intelligent and well educated woman had her three-year-old daughter in a store. The baby kept handling things on the counter. "Don't do that!" exclaimed the mother, "or the man will put you in the cellar."

We often hear declarations such as these, even in this day, though there is a general feeling that the time has passed when the child was scared into obedience by being told that the bogey man would get him.

Such threats strike terror to the child's heart when he first hears them. There is a shock, the effect of which is never overcome, even though he soon learns his parents have no intention of doing as they say.

One should never punish by shutting in a closet or a dark room; never force a child to do anything he greatly fears. As much as possible fear should be kept out of the little child's thought. If he is afraid to go to bed, attention should not be called to the fact, but some one should go with him through the dark hall and shadowy stairway, encourage, befriend him and make him happy so that he will forget about his fears.

The use of fear in discipline should be strenuously avoided. A frightened child is cramped and handicapped with lack of confidence, chronic anxiety and morbid dread. He has no desire to use his powers or assert his ability.

From the time Martha was three months old, she had been so severely punished by her mother that she had become thin, nervous, secretive, and afraid of everything. She had always been restrained—never allowed to talk or give vent to her feelings— so upon entering school she would not open her mouth, not even to read out loud. The teachers knew she could read because they noted her interest in the printed page when she thought herself unobserved.

An aunt and a neighbor went to see her teacher who became especially interested upon hearing the story of Martha's life. Persistent kindness and encouragement at school have helped the child overcome fear. She reads aloud in her class and the teacher is planning to have her read before a visitor as soon as she is quite willing.

Another timid child became so frightened at a rather cross teacher that he could not read. His mother went to see the teacher and told her that the boy was affected in something the same way by his father's stern manner and gruff voice. The mother said, "Tom's throat fills up and he can't read. Try a little love and praise; he will get rid of his fear and be able to read." The teacher tried this. It worked out just as Tom's mother had said it would.

If we inspire children with a feeling of confidence, it will help them to develop naturally and will be the first step towards the habitual desire to do the right things. Fear paralyzes; confidence bestows that freedom which is the foundation of success.

COUNT SHOWN IN RED ARROW CONTEST

The fifth count in the Red Arrow booster contest was taken this morning with results highly gratifying to the merchants of the Red Arrow club of Norwich. The number of arrows deposited in the treasure chest in the lobby of the Palace theatre contest was larger than in previous counts. This was due to the friendly dinner enjoyed by the boosters at the Wauregan hotel on Tuesday, March 25, with the Red Arrow merchants acting as friendly hosts. The boosters are manifesting new interest and energy in procuring new business for the Red Arrow merchants.

The awards for the booster contest will be made at the May auction with six prizes valued at $1500 to be given to the boosters having the largest number of Red Arrows to their credit.

The arrows to the credit of the high boosters according to today's count have reached the three million mark and are as follows:

Mrs. Elizabeth Drew 3,157,600; Mrs. Iola Bjurstrom, 2,005,290; Mrs. LeRoy Hubbard, 1,906,750; Mrs. Delia Charter, 1,569,250; Mrs. Maud Moody, 1,-[illegible]; Mrs. Goldie Freeman, 1,406,-[illegible]; Mrs. George Gifford, 1,249,550; Mr. George Babbitt, 1,018,150; Mrs. Edward Brennan, [illegible]; Mr. Paul LaBlanche, [illegible]; Mr. E. V. Hough, 640,330; Mr. Charles Kotowski, 403,120; Miss Margaret Leone, 74,720.

The contest still has two months to run and the Red Arrow merchants are in hope that additional active boosters will strive to reach the top with the chance of winning first prize which consists of a ten piece living room suite valued at $625.00. The other prizes are as follows: Second prize, Electrolux gas refrigerator, $400; 3rd, diamond ring and setting, $250; 4th, Zenith radio, $215; 5th, Maytag washing machine, $160; 6th, domestic electric sewing machine, $150.

NORWICH RIFLE CLUB WINNER IN LEAGUE

At a Mohegan Rifle league meeting Tuesday evening in Groton with Pioneer Hose company, the Norwich Rifle club was declared the league winner when its tie with the U. S. Coast Guard for first place was settled. Each had won ten and lost one match, but a shoot-off was impossible because the coast guard team members had been sent to different stations. It was decided that the team with the highest average score for the eleven matches would be winner, the Norwich Rifle club thus being winner by the extremely small margin of 2-8 of one per cent or average per man of 175.16 for Norwich and 173.87 for Coast Guard, a difference of only 1.29 points for 55 scores. The members of the winning team will be awarded suitable medals.

NORWICH WOMAN KILLED WHEN AUTO LEAVES ROAD AT "DEAD MAN'S" CURVE

Mrs. Rose Lavallee Riley, 28, of No. 13 East Baltic street, was instantly killed about 11:30 o'clock Tuesday evening, when the automobile in which she was riding crashed through the state highway fence, overturned in a ditch 20 feet below and pinned her beneath it, at Dead Man's curve on the Military highway. In the car with her were John Kehoe of the Norwich state hospital, owner and driver; Beatrice Frenette of 184 Talman street, Paul Chaplin of the Norwich state hospital, and Antoinette Domipique of 249 Yantic street, all of whom received superficial wounds, when they were thrown free of the overturned car.

The machine was being driven toward Norwich at what is judged to have been excessive speed and in failing to negotiate the turn, skidded in the soft sand on the right shoulder of the road. From the marks on the highway it is indicated that the driver applied his brakes in a vain effort to get back on the hard surface, but in this he was unsuccessful. The machine struck the state highway fence, tore down six sections of it and, breaking it into many pieces, hurled it about the road and embankment, some of them being found 30 feet away.

Before hitting the fence the machine had traveled a distance of 90 feet from the time it left the hard surface of the highway. With momentum not spent, the vehicle plunged down a 20-foot embankment, rolling over and over, evidently, coming to a stop against a small tree, upside down. The dead woman was pinned beneath the rear end of the machine, and was killed instantly from a fractured skull, broken neck and broken shoulder, according to a diagnosis of Dr. N. B. Lewis, medical examiner, who made a preliminary examination. The other four passengers were thrown clear of the machine and suffered only minor injuries, a cut wrist, a bruised shoulder and cuts.

The five persons were riding in a Nash roadster, L-1498, owned and driven by John Kehoe, who is held under a technical charge of manslaughter and reckless driving pending the finding of Coroner Edward G. McKay, who was notified and conducted a preliminary investigation. The accident was investigated by State Police Officers Elmer McKenzie and John Smith of the Groton barracks. It was learned that the two men were riding in the front seat with Miss Frenette between them, while the other two girls were seated on top of the seat with their feet behind the other passengers. The top was down. The machine was considerably damaged.

The ambulance from the W. W. Backus hospital went to the scene of the accident, but was not called upon to remove any of the persons to the hospital, as their injuries did not warrant. They were taken to the Norwich state hospital, where their injuries were treated by the nurse from the Backus hospital.

Coroner McKay gave Undertaker C. A. Gager permission to remove the body.

Kehoe, whose home is in Jamaica Plains, Mass., but is employed at the Norwich state hospital, was arrested by the state police on a manslaughter charge and held at Norwich police headquarters. He will be presented in Ledyard town court.

Judge Robinson has found considerable difficulty in some towns in his district in securing persons capable and desirous of taking on the work. In some towns the only applicants for the job were tax collectors or assessors, these being ineligible for the work according to the census regulations. Where this condition has existed the judge has found it necessary to go out into the town and round up somebody able and willing to do the work.

The workers are scheduled to begin their work this afternoon and all information gathered after today will be as of this day; that is, anyone who dies after today will be counted alive in the census and anyone born after tomorrow will be non-existent according to the census.

STORRS HENS AVERAGING CLOSE TO 100 EGGS

In the 21st week of the Storrs egg-laying contest there was an increase of 65 eggs over the previous week's production and a gain of 628 eggs over the corresponding week a year ago. The total production for all pens was 5,254 eggs or a yield of 75.1 per cent.

The mark that had been set was 85 eggs per hen to the end of March but this will be beaten by more than ten eggs. In other words, every hen in the contest, dead or alive, is going to average nearly 100 eggs in the first five months.

Pine Hill Poultry farm's pen of Reds from Weston, Mass., was an easy first for the week with a score of 66 eggs. Following this, one notes six pens of three different breeds all tied for second place with 63 eggs each. They include Harold F. Barber's pen of White Rocks from Dover, Mass., Toivonen farm's pen of Leghorns from Girard, Pa., Edward N. Larrabee's pen of Reds from Peterboro, N. H., and three other pens of Bay State Reds entered by F. S. Chapin of Longmeadow, George B. Treadwell of Spencer, and Burdean Acres from Newton Center.

For third place three pens of three different varieties are tied with 62 eggs each. They are James Dryden's pen of Barred Rocks from Modesta, Calif., Donald I. Goodenough's Rhode Island Reds from Torrington, Conn., and Hollywood farm's pen of Leghorns from Woodinville, Wash. For fourth place three pens of Rhode Island Reds tied with 61 eggs each. They include a pen entered by Harold G. Colt of West Hartford, Conn., and two Massachusetts pens owned by Charlescote farm at Sherborn, and Scott's Poultry farm from Groton.

For the past five months or since the contest started last November, the hens have been regularly aroused every night at 9 for an extra meal. They were encouraged to eat all they could in the belief that more feed means more eggs. On the other hand, this artificial stimulus cannot be carried too far.

Further, with the advent of longer days and more working hours, a hen can eat enough during daylight thus making it unnecessary to wake her up in the middle of the night. These night lunches will, therefore, be discontinued on April 1. Of course the process has been gradual. That is to say, the lights are turned on progressively earlier for a fortnight or so until daylight hours and evening lunches come approximately at the same time.

Rhode Island Reds—Harold G. Colt, West Hartford, 1,295; Edw. N. Larrabee, Peterboro, N. H., 1,230; Donald I. Goodenough, Torrington, 1,214; F. S. Chapin, Longmeadow, Mass., 1,197.

CONNECTICUT SEED LAW REMOVES BUYING WORRY

With the approach of spring farmers and home owners are undergoing the annual review of seed catalogues and at the same time worrying whether the seeds they purchase either for the farm or the city lawn will show a high percentage of purity and germination. This is needless worry, according to the state department of agriculture, if a few simple rules are observed in making the purchase.

Connecticut seeds as a whole are showing a high test this year and merchants are placing tags on each bag giving the per cent of purity, per cent of weed seeds, per cent of noxious weed seeds, per cent of germination and date of test together with the name and address of the dealer. Information of this nature is required under the new Connecticut seed law to be placed on every package of agricultural seed offered for sale in the state. By purchasing only seeds labeled in accordance with the above requirements, it is possible to know in advance just the quality of seed you are getting.

Although it is generally considered that most of the large distributors of seeds are located in states west of Connecticut, the department of agriculture calls attention to a few sidelights on the Connecticut seed industry. One Hartford seedsman has 11 carloads of set onions for this spring's planting, another dealer in the southern part of the state during the spring season, often ships several carloads from the warehouse in a single day. There are five wholesale seed houses in Connecticut doing an annual estimated business in excess of $3,000,000. However, a portion of the seeds handled by these companies are sold before reaching Connecticut.

NORWICH MAN TELLS OF CHINA MISSIONS

Bandit raids, a wild boar in flight through the streets, kidnaped Chinese city commissioners—and yet Rev. Edward H. Smith of Norwich, representing under the American Board of Commissioners for Foreign Missions the Park Congregational church of Norwich, and the Congregational churches of Hanover of Talcottville, writes from his post at Ingtai, China, that the "spirit of God is working in churches and schools in China."

"Bandit raids have kept people's nerves on edge," writes this Norwich missionary, "and the commercial center here is living from hand to mouth. Recently the six commissioners at the head of the Foochow government were captured, bound, and lugged away as prisoners from a banquet 'given in their honor.' While Dr. Neil H. Lewis and I were on a recent tour encouraging the Christians, healing the sick and examining schools, a wild boar broke loose and ran for some 10 miles pursued by people with bird guns. This beast made a lot of business for the doctors. In Ingtai City he nearly killed two of our friends.

"Yes, there is plenty of copy to thrill the church in America if they but knew the big issues involved and the mighty spiritual events that are taking place in China. Tremendous movements for good or ill are surging through the multitudes of Asia. The missionaries are your message—the still small voice of the spirit—in the midst of the roar and earthquake of political and social revolution. We are not discouraged.

"The future, politically, is as uncertain and problematic as ever, but the futureof the Kingdom of God is certain.

"One of our churches has been occupied this week by army officers, and used as a fort with a beseiging army outside. This is a fair parable of the church militant in China today. No more—we are too busy to write."

Yet in the midst of all this turmoil, on a recent Sunday afternoon in Ingtai a group of young people gathered about the Smith's parlor table to listen to Prof. Hubert Clark of Harvard and to ply him with questions about evolution, science and God, man's place in the universe, and all the other problems that were troubling them. As they went away they said, "It has been just as if we were all students in America."

Rev. Mr. Smith was born in Franklin and is an Amherst college man, 1898, and Hartford Seminary, 1901. The same year he went to China under the American Board. He has supervision of churches and schools in Ingtai, Foochow district, China.

CAR OF JAMES T. JONES, NORWICH, MEANS OF DETECTING TIRE THIEVES

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, April 1—Theodore Gelinas, of Benham road, Groton; Seigfried Sonnenberg, Chicago avenue, Groton, and a New London minor residing on Franklin street, were in the police court this morning, charged with the theft of an automobile tire and rim, the property of James T. Jones, 16 Bliss place, Norwich. Gelinas testified in court that he, alone, stole the tire and completely exonerated his companions of any wrong-doing. Because of Gelinas' statement, Judge Daniel M. Cronin imposed a fine of $25 on the young man and ordered a nolle in the other two cases.

Jones drove to New London Monday night and parked his car on Huntington street. While he was absent Gelinas and his two companions drove to a point near the parked car and the former removed the tire and carried it to his machine, the trio then speeding away. Gelinas' act was observed by a pedestrian, who noted the markers on the Groton auto and this information was supplied the police before Jones discovered his loss and made known that fact at police headquarters. In the meantime it was ascertained that Gelinas was the owner of the auto sought and the state police were requested to apprehend him. Gelinas drove to his home and secreted the tire in the cellar, after which he and Sonnenberg went for another ride. When they returned, however, Officers Fred Johnson and James Dygert were there to meet the pair and they were arrested. Gelinas' car has been given close watching by the state police for several weeks for it is believed the owner and his companions have been guilty of numerous thefts, but not until last night were the youthful crooks detected.

JEFFERSON AVE. HOUSE DAMAGED $4,000 BY FIRE

Fire caused considerable damage to the two and one-half story residence at 366 Jefferson avenue, owned by James E. Wragg and occupied by the owner and his family and by J. G. Arnold and family; the damage, it being estimated, will be close to $4,000. How the fire originated has not been determined, but it is believed it was started either by a careless occupant of the house, defective wiring or a defective chimney. Another cause of the blaze is that it originated from sparks from a bonfire, but appearances indicated that the fire started in the interior of the residence, rather than from the exterior. The fire was discovered about 10 o'clock this forenoon and was burning with such rapidity that it was believed the building would be gutted. An alarm was sent in from Box 368, corner of Jefferson avenue and Colman streets, and was responded to by Deputy Chief Calvin Edmunds and four pieces of apparatus. The fire was at its height when the firemen arrived, for a strong wind prevailed. Because of the danger of the house being destroyed, two streams of water were emptied into the building, but it was over an hour before the fire was extinguished.

D., Groton, was arrested today by Automobile Patrol Officer George Cockell, charged with violation of the city ordinance in interfering with the driving of fire apparatus. An alarm was rung in this forenoon for a fire on Jefferson avenue and on Broad street, it is claimed that Spencer drove his truck in such a manner and with utter disregard to the sounding of the siren that Deputy Chief Calvin Edmunds' auto was interfered with so that it was delayed in arriving at the fire. Chief Edmunds made complaint to the police after the subduing of the fire, with the result that Spencer was arrested.

"Move Over, Mountain— More READING Hard Coal Is Needed"

The demand for Reading Anthracite—that better Pennsylvania hard coal—grows and grows.

To satisfy it, the largest, most efficiently equipped hard coal breaker in the world has just been added to the vast producing equipment of this company.

Near Mt. Carmel, Pennsylvania, Reading engineers found a swampy valley high in the hills but partly filled with a veritable mountain of refuse from old mining operations. So they said, "Move Over, Mountain", and moved it. The valley was filled and levelled. The side of Locust Mountain was stripped bare to expose for miles the Mammoth vein of hard coal to supply part of the coal for the new breaker.

Your coal merchant has Reading hard coal, or can get it. Insist on Reading for your fires.

ANNOUNCEMENTS

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., April 2.—"The wheels started turning today in our Locust Summit breaker."

That was the laconic announcement of A. J. Maloney, president of the Philadelphia and Reading Coal and Iron company, in telling the world that months of effort, the spending of millions of dollars, had culminated in providing facilities for daily producing many thousands of tons of the most perfectly cleaned and accurately sized anthracite ever offered to consumers of hard coal.

From top to bottom of the mammoth plant located at Locust Summit, Pennsylvania, the world's largest breaker, one finds only the most advanced equipment for getting hard coal ready for the market.

This is the first complete unit to be finished in the mammoth program of electrification and expansion undertaken by this company—a program involving the expenditures of millions upon millions of dollars in elaborate improvements unprecedented in the anthracite industry.

Some idea of the tremendous size of the Locust Summit breaker may be obtained from the fact that over 3,000 tons of structural steel and 5,700 cubic yards of concrete went into its construction. To make room for the breaker with accompanying facilities a veritable mountain of culm dumped from former mining operations had to be moved, and a valley floor levelled.

Other improvements are scheduled to go forward rapidly. Since the Philadelphia and Reading Coal and Iron company owns directly or through its subsidiaries acreage estimated to contain billions of tons of hard coal, the possibilities of the program now under way can be appreciated by everyone.

Gulf Refining Co.

Volatility in gasoline is one of the prime factors in the efficient operation of the modern automobile motor, says a local official of the Gulf Refining company, large producers and refiners of gasolines and motor oils. Volatility resulting in instant and complete vaporization is secured by the use of motor fuels possessing an end point of 400 degrees Fahrenheit or lower.

The Gulf Refining company is marketing just the kinds of gasoline from which the best results are to be obtained—That Good Gulf Gasoline with 400 degrees F end point and Gulf No-Nox motor fuel 374 degrees F end point. These gasolines vaporize instantly and completely to the last drop—giving quick starting, quick pick-up, more power and greater mileage. Both of these fuels also possess high anti-knock quality which is of vital importance for successful operation of the modern high compressor motor.

While carbon is not desirable it is always found to a greater or less degree in all motors after a few thousand miles of running—carbon deposits increase the ratio of compression which is very satisfactorily overcome by these anti-knock fuels. Fuel knocks which are apt to occur on hills and during quick acceleration in traffic are not only annoying but detrimental to the motor. Retarding the spark will reduce the knock but likewise reduces power. The safe and sane way to get rid of them is to use fuels of known anti-knock quality.

And further—the end point of gasoline has nothing to do with the anti-knock quality—many ordinary motor gasolines are doped with chemicals which may render them anti-knock but the quick, responsive vaporization is lacking—a good, straight-run petroleum product with 400 degrees F. end point or better and high anti-knock quality is the best for your motor.

Palace Theatre

Will murder out? Does the criminal always get what is coming to him? Those who want to know about such things will have an opportunity to find out by attending the big double feature show at the Palace theatre today, where one of the pictures is appropriately entitled, "Murder Will Out." Here is a film which has a cast including Jack Mulhall, Lila Lee, Noah Beery, Malcolm MacGregor and other great lights of the stage and screen. The other feature on this bill is a different sort. It is called, "They Learned About Women," and the stars are none other than Gus Van and Joe Schenck, the famous team of Van & Schenck, supported by a cast including Bessie Love, Mary Doran, J. C. Nugent, Benny Rubin, Eddie Gribbon and Francis X. Bushman, Jr.

Imagine, if you can, a plot that opens in a sumptuous apartment, a bachelor's quarters, then swings into a setting that includes an exclusive club, a lonely deserted highroad, a Chinese pagoda built on a millionaire's estate, a detective bureau, the office of a doctor, a cemetery at midnight, a United States weather bureau, then a morgue, New York harbor, and most sinister of all, the deck of a mysterious submarine and the interior of the craft. That is the setting of the great drama, "Murder Will Out." And it is just as creepy, just as thrilling as it sounds. And what a cast it has, too!

"They Learned About Women" is full of good baseball and good baseball lingo, Van and Schenck are a couple of big leaguers, who spend their winters doing a stretch in vaudeville. Bessie Love is the girl with whom both the pals are in love. She is engaged to one of them, but that one happens to be the fellow who is vamped by another girl, a chorus girl, too. Broken hearted, she plans to marry the other, but just then the partnership is split up by jealousy. However, the chorus girl romance goes on the rocks and the straying sheep comes back to the fold only to learn that the girl who really loves him is about to marry his erstwhile pal. There is a predicament, but wait and see how it turns out. Wait for the great World Series reunion at the end, when amid the crack of bats, love again finds a way! Don't miss it!

Broadway Theatre

Lovers of action, romance, thrills, music, dancing, color or what have you will find their every desire satisfied in the smashing double feature program opening at the Broadway today. Two photoplays of such exceptional show value that either would be featured alone at any other house than the Broadway, offers a mid-Lenten feast of rare merit. Gary Cooper, that lanky heart-breaker of "The Virginian" is up to his old tricks again in "Only the Brave," a stirring romance of the Civil war, in which Gary is a spy in the Union army, sent "across the line" on a dangerous mission, which he renders doubly dangerous by losing his heart to a dainty southern belle, Mary Brian. Fast, thrilling action, with hand to hand engagements and hot skirmishes, resulting in his capture and sentence to the firing squad, seem likely to write his finish, but Yankee luck and strategy win the day for him—and the girl, as well. The historical surrender of Robert E. Lee, hero of the southland to "Fighting" U. S. Grant, the burly Union commander, is an interesting highlight of the picture. The companion picture presents the most daring achievement ever made in motion pictures, in the presentation of the old favorite, "The Phantom of the Opera," with Lon Chaney and the original cast, plus the addition of dialog, music, dancing, singing and color. The enormous scenic sets of the Paris Grand Opera house, with Gounod's most famous opera "Faust", in presentation, complete with a symphony orchestra of 150, choruses numbering into the hundreds, and a trained opera company in the leading roles, and done entirely in technicolor, is a bit of filmcraft that would have been impossible a year or two ago, but the tremendous facilities of Universal overcame all difficulties. The underground tunnels of the Opera House, the sinister habitat of the mysterious "Phantom," various pleasure resorts of Paris of the early '80s are reproduced with startling realism, the magic organ music of the Phantom is haunting in its sweetness and the fast action and terrific climaxes follow one another so closely as to be bewildering. Mary Philbin is the unfortunate Christine, victim of the phantom's horrible love, and Norman Kerry her soldier sweetheart, both in their original roles in the silent presentation, and the remainder of the gigantic cast of nearly 5,000 is intact. Music lovers will revel in the majestic music of "Faust," heard for the first time via the talking screen, and lovers of the mysterious, adventurous and spectacular will also delight in this new revelation of the beauties of Leroux's famous story. Fox Movietone news, as usual present the headline tidbits of the week.

HENRY BRADT FORFEITS BOND OF $25 FOR SPEEDING

Before Judge William A. Wilcox, in Stonington town court Tuesday morning, the case of State, Arthur C. Whitmarsh of Groton barracks, vs. Henry Bradt, 24 Vendale street, Brookline, Mass., was called. Martin called the bond and it was declared forfeited by Judge Wilcox.

In the case of State Police Officer John Smith vs. Frank S. Severance, 294 Hayles street, Providence, Prosecutor Hammacher informed the court that investigation had shown that a trailer of the type used by the defendant was legally registered in Rhode Island as one unit, but if under Connecticut registration laws, the trailer and truck would have required separate registration. His recommendation for an absolute nolle was granted by the judge.

The case of the State vs. John R. Paine, 20 Netherlands avenue, Brookline, Mass., was continued to April 8, next.

Clerk A. G. Martin was directed to send official notice to Michael J. Carroll, 69 Brewster street, Providence, to appear April 8 for a motor vehicle law violation, which later investigations had shown to be the case.

Hill, 15 Courtland street, Pawcatuck, on the recommendation of Prosecutor Hammacher was granted an absolute nolle by the court on the charge of faulty automobile equipment, relative to lack of windshield wiper, the rubber of the same having been taken out for repairs and the violation not a wilful one.

The electrical contract, together with those for the plumbing, ventilating and heating, was signed by the contractors and members of the building committee in the office of Superintendent of Schools Willard H. OFF FOR ST. LOUIS BY BUS, BUT RUNS INTO BLIZZARD

Stretch Morrison left the fishing village of Noank on a bright spring day, Sunday, leaving around 8 o'clock for the golden west, St. Louis, where men are men and horse flies are June bugs. Reaching New York at 2:45 in the afternoon, he was in time to catch the bus. The call man said, "For all points west!" It was the Greyhound Line with a dog on it. The driver was dressed as good as the Prince of Wales, in a gray suit and cap to match. Twenty-seven were on board several women among the jolly party. A New York state cop stopped the driver and for several minutes they talked and he gave the high sign to go ahead. Then everyone had a smile, being afraid it was a tag.

Going into Newark, N. J., one auto hit another which held up traffic for 10 minutes. Morrison sat down in a seat with a fellow bound for St. Louis, as funny as William Haines in the movies. He said a prayer as the bus made a stop at a city. The driver told where the rest rooms were and long enough so they could look the city over. It sure was a fine day. Getting into Harrisburg, Pa., before reaching there a loud noise was heard. Many thought they were shot and Morrison thought it was Chicago. But it proved only a flat tire or a blow-out. They soon had that fixed and in about 10 minutes they were bound for another city. William Haines knowing Mike Crane, said, "Can you guess this town?"

I looked at my watch—could not see the hands, so said, "It is Pittsburgh!" Sure enough only a few minutes late and loading up again, about 30 were in the big bus, headed toward the west. The sights were good—farmers plowing and planting: hills and valleys could be seen a long way off. Getting into Wheeling, West Virginia for a short rest we ran into an old man with a long white beard that almost touched the ground. He said, "Well it is spring! A few days ago a flock of wild geese were bending their wings toward the north." It sure was hot in Virginia; crossing a bridge found us in Bridgeport, Ohio, with a long hill to climb that took us 45 minutes.

Still the farmers were plowing uphill but it got cloudy and looked like rain. Getting into Columbus it sure did rain. We had a chance to get supper and then beat it again, having seven on board for California and a newly married couple, spending a honeymoon by bus. Reaching Dayton, Ohio it was foggy and raining hard. We had to change our watches back to central time. We got about 20 yards when a big cop said, "Hold up! A fire! The firemen are trying hard to save the building." We were held up for 25 minutes. The smokeeaters know how to take care of a fire. But that London fog was so thick you could cut it with a knife. The driver had to take it easy as the rain was still falling. Getting into Indianapolis the home of the American Legion we joyfully found the greyhound on time. We got a new driver here and he sure knew his stuff and was careful as a watch-maker. But it was a bad night. Reaching Marshall we stopped for a short while but the wind was blowing an Illinois gale, around 40 miles an hour. Still everybody was happy in the bus. Many jokes were told that set them into an uproar. We came into Effingham, Ill., and the snow came fast—a real blizzard came to give March a welcome. The flakes were large. We stopped for a good cup of coffee and a Scotch ham sandwich. While in the lunch room the driver looked out the window and said, "There goes the bus and no one at the wheel!" He got there quick, but it hit a Ford. No damage was done but it took 10 cents worth of paint. Funny Mike Crane said, "The company will send a check for it!"

About three miles from Effingham the blizzard was worse, but we tried to get through—no use—it was 10 o'clock on Tuesday morning and we were due in St. Louis at 10:45. The drifts were from 18 inches to 5 feet deep and it was still snowing. Three grey hound buses, eight trucks and twenty automobiles were stuck for a long while. The snow was high as the windows on automobiles. There were 12 in the bus and not a sandwich in sight. There were two women on board and a child 2 years old all the way from Springfield, Mo., and he was braving it well. One farmer was eaten all out. A red brick school house was used to house the people from the automobiles and about a hundred stayed there. Cards were played and songs were sung in the school house and a woman from New York did a dance. Stretch and Mike kept things going in the bus bound west. All were in good spirits for we knew that we were safe.

At last everybody got the regular places for a sleep, but there was nothing to eat for 16 hours. The baby was crying for milk. The bus driver asked Morrison if he would try and get some milk at a small village about 2 1-2 miles away. Billie Otterman, from the smoke city, Pittsburgh, said, "I will go along too!" It was 9:30 p. m., so across the field we went with snow up to our waists, jumping brooks to make it. Bill Otterman said, "Hey, Neil! Help!" and all I could see was his iron hat on the snow and a hand in the air. I worked for 10 minutes and got him out of that drift. He was happy. We had to make the village by the lights of the town seen far away, walking vines over the brook and if it broke, down into the brook for us! Our feet were tired, wading in the snow. It was another jump across the brook and Stretch missed so went up to his knees in water. Billie had given me a helping hand. We reached the village and found a lunch place open, and got 27 sandwiches and 3 doz. doughnuts and the bottle of milk, also got a supper for ourselves. After everything was ready we started back to the bus. On the road I fell, but saved the milk for the baby. We crossed the field again and were all in, but got back to the bus at 1 o'clock a. m. We passed around the eats and got the baby the bottle of milk. Everyone was happy. In another hour the bus company sent up sandwiches and coffee and we all tried to sleep on a full stomach. In the morning around 8 o'clock we had breakfast at a farm house where the company made plans for us. That farmer cooked 107 eggs in one day and one cow went dry, giving milk for the hungry travelers. Funny Mike Crane said, "I could stay here a week if the bus company still brings up the food!"

In the afternoon of Wednesday the state highway snow plow got going and at 2 o'clock the automobiles and trucks began moving east. Then the west-bound ones were ready, but we had to wait, for our gasoline ran out, after running for 36 hours. It was 5 o'clock when 40 gallons came and we were all set for St. Louis. Only eight were aboard, for the woman and the baby were taken off in the morning by the bus company's auto. As we got under way a loud cheer was given, "All set for a real bed and a good rest!"

Reaching Highland we had supper and got into St. Louis 23 hours late, making the trip in 77 hours. It was spring in Ohio but a blizzard in Illinois. The California people stayed over in St. Louis for the night and started out again the next morning for the golden west.

ACADEMY OPENS BASEBALL SEASON SATURDAY AGAINST RICHMOND TEAM

That Saturday's Academy-Richmond Radiator game, opening the local baseball season, will be no tea party was made known last night when Manager Jerry Fallon of the Ironmen announced his list of players who are straining at the leash for the tilt with the Wildcats.

The Richmonds will have the same team that made such a good impression in the latter part of the Dusty league race in 1929, save for two positions. As Lloyd Jarvis, pitcher, and Mace Goldblatt, catcher, are away at school, Fallon has secured Lefty Lucier and Pete Tombari in their stead.

The rest of the team includes Gerry Burke, former Academy captain, on first, George Jarvis at second, Steffy Cimikoski at short, Gil Kampf at third with Lamory, Gaudette and Leo Jarvis in the outfield. Lucier will share the pitching burden with Andy Kotch, Richmond veteran. Although this team is bound to be behind the Academy in practice they will probably make up for it in experience. And don't believe they haven't any supporters, either.

The Academy will probably face no better pitcher in their entire schedule than Lucier, who hurled the Smoke Shop into the Dusty league pennant last season. Neither will they face such hitters as most of the Ironmen are. This game shapes up as one of the toughest tests for an opener that the Wildcats have ever had.

Despite a strong wind, the Academy had a long afternoon session Tuesday. There was no morning workout.

Another casualty was added to the squad when Bud Fontaine, regular pitcher, received a black eye from a foul tip as he was standing beside the batting cage. He is expected to be ready for Saturday's game, however.

Bob Geer dropped one over the fence in practice and Chubby Gibbs, Flather and Geer contributed long clouts in the practice game.

DO YOU REMEMBER THIS ONE?

The Academy and Bulkeley went at it Saturday, May 24, 1888, at Williams park, and the Red and White won, 13 to 8, getting four runs in three innings, the third, fifth and sixth, and one in the first. Richards, pitching for Norwich, struck out 12 men and had 15 assists. He and Kelly, in left field, were the hitting stars. Bulkeley was only able to collect five safeties.

YANKEES HAVE TOUGH TIME BEATING TEXAS U.

AUSTIN, Tex., April 1—(AP)—The New York Yankees were forced to come from behind with a three run rally in the ninth to defeat the University of Texas today, 4 to 2. It was the Yankees' fifth straight victory since leaving Florida.

Oscar Peebles, hurling for the collegians who have won 16 conference titles in 18 years, held the slugging Yankees at his mercy for eight innings. Four hits, however, in the final round ruined what appeared to be the first triumph of the year for the university nine over a professional team. Texas previously had met the Giants, the White Sox and San Antonio.

Babe Ruth's contribution was a double and a walk out of five times at the plate. On his three other trips, he flied out once and grounded out twice. An attendance of 6,600 broke a 10 year record. Score:

AGGIE VARSITY WINS GAME FROM SECONDS

(Special to The Bulletin)

STORRS, April 1—The Connecticut Aggie varsity nine had its second scrimmage of the season today and took the second team 7-5 in seven innings. Tourville was at the receiving end for the varsity, and Wilson performed on the mound. Ryan was stationed at the troublesome second sack but this arrangement is not final and other candidates are being tried out here during the absence of Captain Abe Moore. The rest of the varsity lineup consisted of Goebel in right field; Tombari of Norwich at short; Brown at first; Darrow at third; Endre at center field; and McCombe in the left field position.

INDIANS TAKE SCALPS OF GIANTS WITH EASE

NEW ORLEANS, La., April 1—(AP)—A crowd of 6,000 packed its way into the park here today to see the Cleveland Indians meet and vanquish their first major league opponents of the year, the New York Giants falling before the American leaguers 8 to 2.

Loose fielding on the part of the McGrawmen plus some timely hitting on the part of the Indians accounted for the Giants' downfall. Eleven hits were made by Cleveland from the combined pitching of Pruett, Ralph Judd and Fred Fitzsimmons. Willis Hudlin hurled seven innings for the Indians and was relieved by Red Shoffner, who let the National league representatives down with two hits in the last two innings.

JACKSONVILLE, Fla., April 1—(AP)—Rube Marquard's pitchers were no match for Manager Robinson's sluggers today, as the Brooklyn Dodgers defeated Jacksonville of the Southeastern league, 18 to 4.

DALLAS, Tex., April 1—(AP)—Ted Blankenship, Chicago White Sox hurler, was a better pitcher than his brother, Homer, and the American leaguers scored a 7 to 1 victory over Dallas of the Texas league.

Ted pitched most of the game and with Hal McKain, his successor, permitted but six hits. The Sox slammed Homer Blankenship and Tauscher for 13, including home runs by Smead Jolley and Clyde Reynolds. Score:

Braves Have Light Work

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla., April 1—(AP)—The Boston Braves returned here today for a two days' workout before moving up to Macon, Ga., for the series with Brooklyn, which opens on Thursday. Manager Bill McKechnie appeared greatly displeased with the showing of the tribe made against Rube Marquard's Jacksonville Tars. Douglas and McKinley, two of Marquard's pitchers held the tribe to four hits for a 1 to 0 shutout.

Phillies Have Hard Practice

WINTER HAVEN, Fla., April 1—(AP)—Manager Burt Shotton took advantage of an open day in the southern training schedule today to put his Philadelphia National team through a long, hard practice. Tomorrow the Phillies start northward and are due in Philadelphia in time for the opening of the spring series with the Athletics beginning Saturday.

PLAINFIELD HIGH TO HAVE NO BASEBALL TEAM

It was announced Tuesday at Plainfield that Plainfield high has decided to discontinue baseball this spring and its schedule, recently announced, including a game with the Academy, has been cancelled. Financial difficulties were given as one of the reasons for the decision.

It is understood that the authorities have decided to put the money that would be used during the diamond campaign into a new athletic field now in the process of construction. It is said that the sport will be returned to the athletic curriculum in the 1931 season.

To add to the surprise of this move was the statement Tuesday evening that prospects for a good team at the school were very bright, in fact, the brightest in years.

Plainfield was to have played N. F. A. here Saturday, April 19, two weeks from Saturday. This school has been an early-season fixture on the Wildcat schedule and the cancellation of the games, on such short notice, leaves Coach Brigham in somewhat of a hole to secure a replacement. However, it is understood that South Manchester is seeking a date with the locals and this school may plug the gap.

Reply to Manager Oney

Sports Editor:—In reply to the Manager John Oney, of the invincible "Polish Royals", I wish to repeat my statements I made in my letter. They are as follows:

"I maintain that, Michael Panek, for personal reasons known to myself and the members of the Polish American Citizens' club, has resigned from the managership of our baseball team. That Mr. Panek has engineered the invincible Polish Royals. That this new team will for the first time play this season."

It is interesting to note, Mr. Editor, that neither Manager Oney or Mr. Panek, have come across with a denial to my statements. They did not even make an attempt to correct my statements. "Silence gives consent", rings true in this case and I don't mean maybe!

It is not my intention to offer an 'amende-honorable', neither is my letter expected to 'aut vincereaut mori' in its attempt.

ALEXANDER E. POREDA,
Polish American Citizens club

Have you seen the new beacons being erected on Franklin square? Well, if you haven't, you ain't seen nothing.

They have a cement base with brick superstructure and a concrete top. They are sure a work of art and will remain so until some driver starts an argument with one.

When this argument takes place we'll lay our money on the beacon, if size counts for anything. There's absolutely no excuse for anybody missing them if they really want to take a crack at them.

When the workmen first started to build them I wasn't sure whether they was starting a filling station or laying the foundation for a business block. Now if they will plant some ivy around them they will have a real beauty spot.

The beacons have been set in such positions that it will be much easier to navigate automobiles around them, but a lot harder to go between them. Anyhow, they are much more attractive and substantial than the old ones and are an undertaking in the right direction.

Now if they would only plant a coupla shade trees and put in a few benches the square would be a great place for the unemployed and taxi drivers to hang out, on summer evenings.

What is to be done with the old beacons? These old ones have stood a lot of punishment in their day. Many is the time they've been put down for the count, but they recuperated very fast.

Somebody suggests that they hang the city gates on the beacons and plant a few rambler roses around the beacons to make it look like a park entrance. But that's the way with people, build 'em something nice and they want it all decorated with flowers, etc.

But don't make a practice of crashing those beacons because it's going to cost a lotta money to put 'em together again.

Long may the beacons live.

FAGAN IS CATCHING FOR AGGIE FRESHMEN

Fred Fagan, whose big bat won more than one game for the Academy last year, is the leading candidate for the catching berth on the Conn. Aggie freshman nine. Fagan pitched and played in the outfield last year for the Wildcats, so that his working behind the plate would seem to qualify him as a general all-round player.

Fagan will use a glove, protector, etc., this year that Gabby Hartnett, Chicago Cubs' star receiver, picked out for him about five years ago. It seems that when Fred attended Blackstone high, where he caught for three years, Hartnett, who lived nearby, came to him and recommended a certain kind of equipment, even went so far as to help him in picking it out.

Fagan is the third Academy boy in the last few years to turn up as a college catcher. Mace Goldblatt, with William and Mary and Billy Tirrell with Wesleyan, were the others and the funny part of it is that neither Tirrell nor Fagan caught at all for the Red and White, Tirrell, playing both at first base and in the outfield.

N. B. A. WASHES ITS HANDS OF HEAVYWEIGHT WRESTLING

CINCINNATI, April 1—(AP)—The National Boxing association which last August included wrestling under its jurisdiction, late today said heavyweight wrestlers have blocked all plans for honest competition and washed its hands of further attempts to clean up the heavyweight wrestling game.

Stanley M. Isaacs, N. B. A. president, said: "Heavyweight wrestling factions desire and intend to continue using unsuitable contestants, matched under secret arrangements and ballyhoo conditions similar to the chaotic condition which has existed in this wrestling class for five years."

As a result of the investigation, Col. H. J. Landry, Friars Point, Miss., chairman of the wrestling championship committee, announced heavyweight wrestlers, their promoters and all heavyweight wrestling interests immediately were barred from recognition in N. B. A. territory.

Bocaratone Wins At Bowie.

BALTIMORE, Md., April 1—(AP)—Bocaratone, a Plater product of the New Orleans turf season, stepped into high class company to win the $5,000 inaugural handicap at Bowie as 15,000 race fans welcomed the return of the thoroughbred sport to the eastern tracks.

The victory of Boraratone came as a distinct suprise as few of the faithful believed that Mrs. W. J. Potter's six-year old gelding was capable of carrying on against some of the best sprinters in Maryland. But the popular little New Orleans rider, G. Cinerak, was in the saddle and he gave the gelded son of Spanish Prince II a great ride.

Tigers Beat Montreal.

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla., April 1—(AP)—The Detroit Tigers made it two in a row today by defeating the Montreal Internationals, 7 to 6, in an exhibition game, here.

The Tigers' fielding showed considerable improvement but with the exception of home runs by Johnson and Gehringer, hitting again was not up to the team's standard. Score:

JONES WINS SOUTHEASTERN GOLF TOURNEY, 13 STROKES AHEAD OF SMITH

AUGUSTA, Ga., April 1—(AP)—Before a gallery of more than 3,000 Robert Tyre Jones, national open champion from Atlanta, today shot two brilliant rounds of par shattering golf and won the Southeastern Open tournament with an aggregate of 284 strokes.

The nation's leading amateur led the field of more than three score players by 13 strokes.

In second place came Horton Smith, Cragston, N. Y., professional, with 297.

Smith's score enabled him to collect the $1,000 prize money offered to the professional who could match par figures most consistently.

Jones today gave his rival a lesson in the finer points of the game. Bobby was four strokes ahead of Horton at the end of 36 holes play and stretched his lead to 13 today as he turned in brilliant rounds of 69 and 71.

Jones combined scores of 72-72-69-71 to produce his low total. The first two rounds were played over the hill course at the Country club yesterday. Today's final 36 holes were shot on the Forest-Ricker course.

A stroke behind Smith in third place came Ed Dudley, Wilmington, Del., professional, with 298, while Joe Turnesa, Elmsford, N. Y., and Whiffy Cox, Brooklyn, both professionals, had cards of 299. Johnny Farrell, former national open champion from Mamaroneck, N. Y., and Tom Kerrigan, of Siwanoy, N. Y., were in the forefront with their 300's.

Frank Walsh Chicago professional, turned in 301, while Harry Cooper, unattached pro., was a stroke behind. Tony Manero, Elmsford, N. Y., had 304 and Billy Burke, Greenwich, Conn., turned in a 305.

Jack Forester, Hackensack, N. J., marked up 306 and Henry Picard of Charleston, S. C., was a stroke behind with 307.

The hazards of the difficult, heavily wooded and trapped course found among its victims several of the country's leading links stylists. This company included Gene Sarazen of Fresh Meadow, L. I., who had 311, Al Espinosa, of Chicago, with a 312, and Bobby Cruickshank of Purchase, N. Y., with 313. Young Lee Fowler of Atlanta was second low scorer, among the amateurs, marking up a 308 for the round.

Morning, par, out—454 354 344—36
Jones, out— 554 244 244—35
Par, in—444 344 354—35—36—71

Horton Smith played today's two rounds in a rush to make an airplane headed for Boston, Mass., where he has an engagement tomorrow.

The low professional scorers with their money prizes follow:

FAVORITES COME THROUGH FIRST ROUND OF N-S GOLF

PINEHURST, N. C., April—(AP)—A group of lop-sided matches, several of which ended in the early part of the second nine holes of play, featured the opening round of competition play in the Women's North and South Amateur Golf tournament here.

Only two of the eight matches went the limit. Maureen Orcutt, of New York, the medalist, was forced to the 18th by Peggy Wattles, the Buffalo, N. Y., contender, and Mrs. Leo D. Federman, of New York, staged a garrison finish to take the last three holes and win on the 18th from Mrs. Marion Turple Lake, of New York, former southern champion.

One surprise was the defeat of Betty Abernethy, of Pittsburgh, who was downed by Louise Fordyce, Youngstown, Ohio, by eight and seven. Miss Fordyce was playing championship golf, her 38 for the first nine being the low nine hole score of the day.

Glenna Collett, national champion, defending her north and south title, found little difficulty in beating Mrs. John Arends, of Chicago. After a bad first hole in which she took six, Glenna sailed in to wind up on the twelfth, seven and six.

Edith Quier, of Reading, Pa., beat Dorothy M. Smith of Brooklyn, by 7 and 5.

Helen Hicks, the hard-hitting Hewlett, L. I., girl, banged out a six and four victory over Mrs. Edward Baker, Boston, Mass., scoring three birdies on her way, but Mrs. O. S. Hill of Kansas City had some trouble beating Mrs. J. Marvin Haynes, Washington, a comparatively inexperienced tournament player. Playing on the 12th two up, Mrs. Haynes squared the match on the 13th but could not hold her own, losing out on the 16th and 17th.

Mrs. Arthur Harrison, Lockport, N. Y., gave Virginia Van Wie, Chicago, a scare and was one up at the end of the first nine. Miss Van Wie put on steam, however, starting at the 11th and took five of the next six holes.

Tomorrow's matches find Miss Fordyce playing Miss Hicks, and Miss Quier taking on Miss Van Wie in the first bracket, while in the second bracket, Mrs. Federman and Miss Collett clash and Mrs. Hill and Miss Orcutt fight it out.

LES CANADIENS TAKE FIRST GAME FROM BOSTON BRUINS

BOSTON, April 1—(AP)—Les Canadiens took a page from the book of the Montreal Maroons, their home town rivals here tonight, when Cecil Hart's fast skating and hard checking players defeated the supposedly invincible Boston Bruins by a 3 to 0 score in the opening game of the final playoff series for the historic Stanley cup.

This reversal of form was hockey's most startling upset of the year for the "Flying Frenchmen" were outclassed by the Bruins in their seven previous clashes.

The colorful Montreal team won because its defense moved up to the blue line and its forwards checked hard and fast from start to finish. These tactics spoiled every Boston rush and made the 1929 world's champions appear amateurish many times during the fray.

Two of the victor's three scores came within four minutes in the second session. The other was netted with less than four minutes to play in the third.

Al Leduc was Les Canadiens' outstanding scorer as he caged one puck and provided the assist for the final score, made by Pete Lepine, Sylvio Mantha caged the second tally, with Aurel Joliat assisting.

REDS RALLY TO WIN OVER ATLANTA CLUB

ATLANTA, Ga., April 1—(AP)—The Cincinnati Reds came from behind here today to take the first of a two-game series from the Atlanta Crackers, 9 to 7.

The Crackers nicked Red Lucas, ace of the Red pitching staff, for seven counters in the first five innings, but the Reds came back with clusters of four runs in the sixth and seventh. They scored one in the first.

OVER 30 REPORT FOR PUTNAM HIGH TEAM

(Special to The Bulletin.)

PUTNAM, April 1—About 30 candidates responded to the first call for baseball practice at Putnam high announced today by Coach L. F. Noyes. There were five veterans in the squad.

Putnam's hope for success this year rests in the pitching staff, where they are especially strong. Coach Noyes will spend much time in developing a batting punch among his charges. Putnam's first game is scheduled the latter part of the month. The team is handicapped just at present because of the athletic field being under repairs.

GLICK-BERG BOUT TO REPLACE SINGER-FERNANDEZ GO

NEW YORK, April 1—(AP)—A ten-round bottle between Joe Glick, veteran Brooklyn lightweight, and Jack (Kid) Berg, of England, will head Madison Square Garden's boxing show Friday night.

The Glick-Berg encounter was arranged tonight a few hours after the Garden announced that Al Singer, Bronx lightweight ace, had injured his hand and would not be able to go through with his bout with Ignacio Fernandez, of the Philippines.

Almost Perfect Score.

CLEVELAND, Ohio, April 1—(AP)—A near perfect game of 299 by Sydney Baker, of Peru, Ind., today gave bowlers a thrill at the annual tournament of the American Bowling congress.

In running to the near-heights, Baker put every ball squarely in the 1-3 pocket in the final games of his singles. His 11th frame toss crossed over for a perfect break. The 13th ball was there, but the seven pin stuck after taking a wiggle.

Billiard Exhibition

L. Benson, the local pocket billiard champion, will play a 250-point match with Joe Flood at Hickey's Billiard parlor, Wednesday and Thursday evenings. Benson and Flood have played many times with honors about even. Their rivalry extends over a period of 20 years. Their first meeting was in Chicago in 1909 where they played for the Tri-State championship. A suitable prize will be given the winner by the proprietor, Mr. Hickey.

NEW HAVEN, April 1—(AP)—Tony Canzoneri, New York, former featherweight champion of the world, won on a technical knockout over Steve Smith in the seventh round of a scheduled ten round feature bout at the Arena, here tonight, before one of the largest crowds here in two years. The referee stopped the bout because of a bad cut on Smith's head. Canzoneri easily won all of the rounds, sending in lightning lefts to face and head repeatedly.

Canzoneri weighed 131 1-2; Smith 130.

FIRST AVIATION SCHOOL PROPOSED FOR CHINA

SHANGHAI—(AP)—A scheme for the establishment of a civil aviation school in Shanghai for instruction of Chinese pilots, has been presented to the aviation department of the air ministry.

The school, if it materializes, will be the first of its kind in China. Despite the fact that the Chinese have, during the past few months, made considerable aviation, no attempt has been made to teach the Chinese civilian youth how to fly.

In this respect the Shanghai school will fill a long felt want.

See Lights 150 Miles Away

OMAHA—(AP)—Robert Cochrane, Boeing pilot on the Omaha-Chicago division of the transcontinental air mail route, claims a record for sharp vision after seeing beacon lights 150 miles away from here. He was flying at 7,000 feet above the city when he spied all the lights to the east leading to Des Moines and two beacons beyond.

POETRY FOR THE WIDE-AWAKES.

Warren's Address at Bunker Hill

Stand! the ground's your own, my braves!
Will ye give it up to slaves?
Will ye look for greener graves?
Hope ye mercy still?
What's the mercy despots feel?
Hear it in that battle-peal!
Read it on your bristling steel!
Ask it—ye who will.

Fear ye foes who kill for hire?
Will ye to your homes retire?
Look behind you! they're afire!
And, before you, see
Who have done it! From the vale
On they come—and will ye quail?
Leaden rain and iron hail
Let their welcome be!

In the God of battles trust!
Die we may—and die we must:
But, oh, where can dust to dust
Be consigned so well,
As where heaven its dews shall shed
On the martyred patriot's bed,
And the rocks shall raise their head,
Of his deeds to tell?

And the lady shook her flaxen head,
And civilly answered: "Nein!"

"Got any girls?" the marshal said
To the lady from over the Rhine;
And again the lady shook her head,
And civilly answered: "Nein!"

"But some are dead?" the marshal said
To the lady from over the Rhine;
And again the lady shook her head
And civilly answered: "Nein!"

"Husband, of course," the marshal said

"The devil you have!" the marshal said
To the lady from over the Rhine;
And again she shook her flaxen head,
And civilly answered: "Nein!"

"Now, what do you mean by shaking your head,
And always answering 'nine'?"
"Ich kann nicht English," civilly said
The lady from over the Rhine.

UNCLE JED'S TALK TO THE WIDE-AWAKES.

What is time? The question seems simple enough, but it is a mighty difficult one to answer.

No doubt even our primitive forefathers had some means of dividing the day into parts, guided by the motion of the sun; but the first form of measurement we can trace comes from the Babylonians, Persians, and Syrians, who began the day at sunrise and divided it into twenty-four hours.

There were many ways of measuring hours long before the invention of watches or clocks. The shadow from the sun suggested its application to a sun-dial as far back as 540 years B. C.

Water-clocks were the first contrivances for measuring spaces of time independently of the motion of the earth, and they are of great antiquity; but the unequal flowing of water and the changes of temperature made them far from reliable when accuracy was wanted.

When candles were invented they were used to mark the passing of time.

Sand-glasses were introduced about 330 A. D.

When the possibilities of gravity were generally known, they naturally suggested a means of obtaining the necessary motive force for a machine to mark time, and as far back as Archimedes, before the Christian era, and after him Gerbert, a monk who lived in the tenth century, invented clocks composed of wheels actuated by a weight. Pocket watches could not be made until some other means besides ropes and weights for driving the mechanism were known. The timepiece, moved by a spiral spring instead of a weight, was constructed as early as the fifteenth century, though the law which governs the mechanical theory of springs was first enunciated by Huyghens in the seventeenth century.

LETTERS WRITTEN BY WIDE-AWAKES.

My Trip to the Moon.

Dear Uncle Jed: My lands! How rapidly I am traveling through the air. Look at the moon coming to meet me! She surely must have prepared a wonderful dinner for her guests. I am almost there but I will have to stop at one of the gasoline stations to buy five gallons of gasoline. But to my surprise I learn that there is not one gasoline station in the vicinity of the moon. The stars are very kind and they agree to shift me along. As I advance onward I notice many peculiar dwelling houses. The people frightened me when I saw what horrible creatures they were. The stars explained to me the life of these people which proved to be very different from the people on this earth.

At last I arrived at the home of the moon's guests greeted me. When I walked in many of the moon's guests greeted me. I took a seat near the sun but I was so afraid of getting sunburned that I moved on to the north star. It certainly was very cold near him so I moved further on to the moon. The bright light of the moon dazzled my eyes so much that I grew dizzy. A fourth time I changed my seat and this time it was near a small star who was timid and shy. The meal was at last served. There wasn't a thing there that a human being could eat. It was very strange consisting of varieties of live morsels and food which I didn't know the names of. The stars asked me many questions about myself and my home. When they wanted to know the place where I lived, I told them that it was a small town in Connecticut called Norwich. The sun said he shone over Norwich many times. The moon said she took his place at night.

After all the guests of the moon finished the meal, the stars had important engagements to be attended to so they bade us good-bye. Then the sun took me for a joy ride in his golden chariot. We rode on and on, over continents and oceans. When we were directly over Norwich the sun lost control of his chariot and down, down, down I went with a crash and a bang. There I lay on the floor and it didn't take me long to realize it was only a dream.

Sings of Spring.

Dear Uncle Jed: I am glad spring is coming, aren't you? You know Saturday was the first day of spring, but I guess winter hasn't gone yet, it was so cold.

Have you discovered the first signs of spring yet? I have, just the other day I saw a robin and there's no end of pussy willows around here. If you look at the trees carefully you can see little birds.

I live on a little farm and so I can take many good hikes. I like to go hunting for wild flowers, but it's not so nice when you get your feet wet, there are so many brooks around our place. But there's not one place where you can fish.

The Runaway

Dear Uncle Jed: The title of my story is "The Runaway." One day as I was walking along the sidewalks, I heard the wild clatter of horses' hoofs on the road behind me.

Looking back I saw a sight which nearly took away my breath for there, running down the street, was a horse wild with fright, dragging a light carriage behind him in which a young girl sat.

Even though it was a small town, a crowd had quickly gathered, but everyone seemed paralyzed with fright, except one young man who seemed to always have his wits about him.

He quickly leaped off the sidewalk and jumped again, this time for the horse's bridle. Catching it, he pulled it with all his strength, bringing the horse to a sudden stop.

The girl and her parents thanked the man heartily afterward and maybe offered him a reward.

Coal

Dear Uncle Jed: This is the first time I have written to you and the Wide Awake circle. I always enjoy reading the other letters.

Coal is found in great abundance in the United States and in most of the countries of Europe, especially in England, Belgium and France.

Coal is a black and hard mineral. Its most important quality is the readiness with which it burns, and its power of giving out heat while burning.

The chief kinds of coal are bituminous; thecs

The chief kinds of coal are the hard anthracite and the soft bituminous; the former is used for ordinary heating purposes; the latter for the gas which it gives off when heated, which is conveyed to our houses to give us light.

The benefits which we obtain from coal can scarcely be told. It warms and lights our dwellings, and cooks our food. By its help we obtain steam, which works all our machinery and drives our locomotives.

My Pet Pig

Dear Uncle Jed: I will tell you about a pet pig we bought last May. He would go with me and the dogs all over the place and do all sorts of tricks. We could sit on his back, roll him over. One day he saw the door open and went in and laid down in the dining room. What a time we had to get him out. He would stand in the brook so we could throw water over him for a bath. How he enjoyed it! One day, just into New Years, the butcher came and took him away and he dressed 281 pounds. I named him Billy.

Corn

Dear Uncle Jed: In school we have studied about corn. The white men first saw corn when they were with the Indians. The Indians taught the white men to plant corn. The corn center is in Chicago. Corn is the most important grain in the world. It is made into breakfast foods. Cornmeal is used for feeding hogs and cattle. It is very useful to us.

Our Discovery

Dear Uncle Jed: This is my first story to you and the Wide Awakes. I am going to tell you one of the discoveries my friend and I found when we went into the woods. We walked quite a distance till we came to a brook. We followed it up a distance but it soon came to an end. The place where the brook stopped was a sort of hole filled with leaves. We began to dig the leaves away with our hands to see if we could find where the water was coming from.

After a few minutes of digging we had enough leaves away to see where the water was coming from. We saw that the water was coming in from a little hole. We walked a distance in the direction from which the water was flowing. We then saw that it came from a swamp, but we could not find how the water got to the brook. We thought that it came through the ground so we called it an underground water tunnel. After this we made a dam in the brook. After we had it blocked so that the water could not come through it, we saw that there was still water on the other side of the dam. My friend soon found the trouble. Under a rock we found another underground water tunnel.

My Experience in Fishing

Dear Uncle Jed: Today I am going to write to you and the Wide Awakes, how I caught my first fish.

Last fall I went fishing with my brother for tomcods. We went fishing down Trading Cove. My brother and I started early in the morning. We took some lunch because we thought we were going to stay until five o'clock, but we stood until two.

When we arrived there we started to fix our lines and put bait on. We used clams for bait. I went on one side of the bridge to fish and my brother went on the other side. I went on the warm side where the sun was just coming out. My brother went on the side where the sun was not shining and it was very windy. I sat down on a spile to catch the fish. When I heard a train coming I got off the spile and run to shore. Once I did not hear a train coming and when I saw it was so near, I did not have a good chance to run. So I stood on. Soon the train came on the bridge. I got frightened and held on very tightly to the spile. The train was very long and when the engine went by the bridge began to sway back and forth.

After the train went by I started to fish again. I was fishing about ten minutes when all of a sudden I felt something pulling my line away. I pulled up and what do you think I caught? I caught a mummy instead of a tomcod. Later I had better luck, but this fish was the first one I ever caught.

A Trip to Europe.

Dear Uncle Jed: As this is my first letter to you, I hope you will enjoy it. I'd like to tell you how fortunate I was in making a trip to Europe.

I started from New York, sailed through Long Island Sound and out into the Atlantic ocean then through the English channel, North Sea, Kiel canal and to the Baltic sea. At last we reached the city of Dansig. I sailed on the Vistula river to Crakow in the southern part of Poland.

One day I took a drive through the fields of Crakow. I noticed a highland lass. She was cutting wheat and singing sweetly. I stopped near and listened to her enchanted song. How I wish some one would tell me what she sang. I suppose she sang of sorrow, loss or of battles long ago. The melody was sweet, so gentle I never heard before. I went on but the melody still chimed in my heart. After visiting many places I left for home.

Sports in Winter.

Dear Uncle Jed: This is the first time I have written to you, and hope you will enjoy it. I will tell you how we all enjoy sports in winter.

Winter is the last and coldest season. It comes in the end of December. When that time comes winter lays out its beautiful velvet carpet. All boys and girls enjoy winter by going sleighriding, skiing, skating, etc. They also enjoy winter by building forts of snow.

The flowers go to sleep and the grass is covered underneath the snow. The snow shines like diamonds when the sun shines upon it. Most people think winter is most beautiful.

An Outing on Fern Island.

Dear Uncle Jed: I will tell you of our outing on Fern Island. It was a warm summer day. We decided to go on the lake in my new motor boat, "The Pet." We packed a big lunch basket, got into the boat and were off. Soon we reached the island, that was a way off on the lake. It was called Fern Island because of the ferns found there.

We took the basket and started into the woods. We found a tree stump large enough to serve us for a table. Before putting out the lunch we picked many nice ferns and decorated the stump. Then came the food. We all ate heartily, for it was breezy and cool. After everything was cleared we took a fine swim, after that we motored around the lake. About six o'clock we returned home feeling that we had a fine day.

My Pets.

Dear Uncle Jed: I am going to tell you about my pets. I have two cats and a dog. My dog's name is Buddy. He is black and has a white spot on his breast. My two cats are both tiger gray. They like milk. When I give it to them the dog comes and tries to get some, too, but the other day he tried it and the cat scratched his nose. Buddy put his paw on his nose then took it off and looked at his paw. It was funny to see him.

The Planet Neptune.

Dear Uncle Jed: I am going to tell you and the Wide-Awakes about the planet Neptune. Neptune was discovered in the year 1846. It is 2,775 millions of miles from the sun. It is eighty-five times as large as the earth, but only seventeen times as heavy. Neptune is so far from the earth it can only be seen by a telescope. It takes Neptune one hundred and sixty-five of our years to journey around the sun. It moves very rapidly, it moves three miles a second.

RUTH CODDING, Age 12.

A Good Lesson.

Dear Uncle Jed: I want to tell you how I tried to be selfish. One day some other boys and I agreed to go and gather grapes which were then ripe. It was quite a long way, so we took our lunches with us. We all had baskets with us. We began gathering them on the ground by the side of a brook. The vines stretched to the other side of the brook on some trees. I wanted to get more grapes than any one else, so I climbed up a tree and went out on the vines over the brook where most of the grapes were. I filled my basket just as much as I could, then I began to climb down. A vine broke and I tumbled into the brook basket and all. My friends had their baskets full. I had to go home empty handed and wet.

BURGESS BEDTIME STORY

Peter Greets Mrs. Quack

What greater pleasure than to greet
A friend you had not thought to meet?

Peter Rabbit sat among the old, broken-down bulrushes on the edge of the Smiling Pool. He had come over to listen for a while to Peeper the Hyla and his friends, the sweet singers of the Smiling Pool. Peter always feels better for listening to Peeper. Sometimes when the coming of sweet Mistress Spring seems long delayed and Peter becomes discouraged, he finds that he gets much help from just listening to the song of Peeper the Hyla. Peeper always seems so sure that Mistress Spring is close at hand that those who hear him get the same feeling.

It was late in the afternoon. Peter could see jolly, round, red Mr. Sun getting ready to go to bed behind the Purple Hills. Peter moved. Instantly the singing in the Smiling Pool stopped. It was so silent that you never would have guessed that a singer was anywhere about. And it was all because Peter had moved. You see, he had jarred the ground ever so little and the nearest Hyla to him had instantly stopped singing. That was the same as a signal. If one stopped singing, it must be for some reason. Therefore, all the others stopped singing. So Peter once more made himself comfortable and sat perfectly still. In a moment the nearest Hyla to him, having decided that there was no danger after all, began to sing. At once all the other Hylas began to sing.

Peter sat with his eyes half shut, listening to this concert from the water. Suddenly he heard a whistling sound. Instantly his eyes flew wide open and his two long ears stood up straight. In fact, Peter sat right up. He recognized that whistle. Only wings could have made that whistle and those wings the wings of Ducks passing very near. Against the red of the sky, where jolly, round, red Mr Sun was going to bed, Peter saw seven big, black, swiftly-moving shapes. They turned. Now they were coming back and they were coming down on a long slant straight toward the Smiling Pool. Splash! The first one landed on the water. Splash! Splash! Splash! The others followed.

"Quack, Quack," said a familiar voice.

Peter felt just like dancing. Yes, sir, he did so. He knew that voice. It was many months since he had heard it, but he knew it. "It's Mrs. Quack!" said Peter to himself. "It's Mrs. Quack the Mallard Duck and some of her friends. I wonder if Mr. Quack is with her."

At once Peter hopped out. At the first movement he made Mrs. Quack turned her head toward him. It was plain that she was startled and suspicious.

"Welcome!" cried Peter, "Welcome back to the Smiling Pool, Mrs. Quack."

"Quack, Quack, Quack!" was the prompt reply, and Mrs. Quack swam toward Peter, leaving the other Ducks on the farther side of the Smiling Pool. "Well, well, if it isn't Peter Rabbit!" she exclaimed. "It certainly is good to be back here."

"Is Mr. Quack with you?" inquired Peter.

"He stopped on the Big River," replied Mrs. Quack, "but he'll be along presently. I think he's coming now."

Sure enough, another Duck alighted in the Smiling Pool and at once began swimming toward Mrs. Quack. It was Mr. Quack. Peter couldn't see the beautiful colors of his coat, because it was not light enough; but he knew it was Mr. Quack.

ELECTRIC BOX TO DETECT MINERAL ORES

PARIS—(AP)—Invention of a portable apparatus weighing only four and one-half pounds, which locates gold, oil, lead, coal, and other min- announced by Henry Debauge, a Paris engineer.

He calls it the "endostatic." He has kept secret its workings except to explain that it has an antenna which picks up electrical waves from various deposits.

Belief in the feasibility of the invention was expressed by Prof. Trajan-Metizianu, president of the organizing committee of the first international forage congress, who introduced Debauge's device and said:

"This new method which has been used in Romania since last year is based on the reaction of an electrical nature produced by the undulatory phenomena which accompany each deposite of a body.

"For the moment, the inventor is keeping his method and his apparatus a secret, but there are some most interesting results in accordance with known geological facts. This method already has been employed with success in Romania."

Professor Grozesco of the national institute of geology a Bucharest says he has records of the work done by Debauge's apparatus in Romanian oil fields.

Electrical detection of salt domes and other subterranean structures indicates oil possibly has developed rapidly of late. Other methods give general contours, but Debauge says says his apparatus indicates rather exactly the location of substances sought. Incoming electrical waves are registered on a dial needle.

Bebe Daniels tells you how to be CAPTIVATING

"HOW to be captivating?" Bebe Daniels smiled a deprecating little smile as she considered my question. But when she began to speak her appealingly beautiful brown eyes were thoughtful.

And then I learned this lovely actress feels emphatically there's one thing has more to do with a girl's attractiveness than any other charm—a beautiful skin—clear, soft, smooth.

How alluring in any girl! How sure to win admiration! And to the screen star, Bebe Daniels earnestly explained, a skin of breath-taking loveliness is really essential!

"Only the girl with smooth skin," she said, "need not fear the relentless eye of the camera. For even the cleverest make-up will not suffice under the searching lens of the close-up.

"That is why," she went on seriously, "many girls lacking great beauty but possessing lovely skin have passed on the road to fame the woman with perfect features.

9 Out of 10 Screen Stars Use Lux Toilet Soap

Of the 521 important actresses in Hollywood, including all stars, 511 are devoted to Lux Toilet Soap.

On Broadway the stars of the outstanding stage successes, too, use it. And now the European screen stars—in France, in England, in Germany—have adopted it. You will be just as delighted with it as they. Order several cakes—today.

BULLS HAD SITUATION DECISIVELY IN HAND IN CLOSING HOUR OF MARKET

NEW YORK, April 1.—(AP) — The steam roller bull movement in stocks made persistent progress today, despite the restraining influence of heavy profit taking sales. The market turned decidedly irregular around midday, but bulls took the situation decisively in hand in the last hour of trading, when more than 1,500,000 shares were traded, making a turnover for the day of 5,895,170, still another 1930 record.

The price index of 90 leading shares was pushed up nearly 2 points more to above 200 for the first time since Oct. 23, on which date it tumbled more than 25 points to 180.6. The movement centered in the utilities, steels and oils. Rails, however, were neglected and barely held their ground. Shares continued to change hands in blocks of 5,000 to 25,000 shares. Gains of 2 points or more were common in leading shares, and a few issues closed 4 to 13 points higher.

The day's business news was decidedly cheerful. Steel mill operations were reported to have been stepped up this week from 73 to 76 per cent of capacity, the first notable gain since operations began to lag early in February. U. S. Steel's mills were said to be operating at better than 83 per cent of capacity, and E. G. Grace, president of Bethlehem, said April operations for his company's mills are scheduled at 85 per cent. At this time a year ago, aggregate operations for the industry were at 95 per cent of capacity. Mr. Grace said, however, that indications were that Bethlehem's total 1930 output would come within 10 per cent of the 1929 tonnage.

The weekly crude oil production figures disclosed further success in the curtailment program, and gasoline prices were firmer at Chicago. The copper industry was cheered by a survey of 1930 consumption requirements presented by F. H. Brownell, chairman of the finance committee of American Smelting, at the company's annual meeting, which indicated that world mines are operating at a rate in balance with requirements. A sharp rally in grain prices was another encouraging development.

U. S. Steel, American International, Bendix, Bethlehem Steel, Standard of N. J., Standard of California, Colorado Fuel, Consolidated Gas, McKeesport Tin Plate, National Power and Light, Radio, Republic Iron and Steel, Skelly, and United Aircraft were among issues rising about 2 to 4 points to new highs for the year. Public Service of N. J. rose about 5 and Electric Power and Light 6 to new 1930 peaks. American Machine and Foundry shot up 12. Merchandising shares, recently under pressure, generally rallied in short covering. Montgomery Ward, Sears Roebuck, and Woolworth rose 2 to 3 points. Allied Chemical, however, closed 5 1-2 points lower, and shares losing 2 to 3 included American Tobacco shares, Air Reduction, Ingersoll Rand, Union Pacific and Vanadium.

The wheat market was influenced by bullish Kansas crop reports, and reduction in the estimated northwest acreage. Futures closed about 2 to 3 cents higher. Corn gained more than a cent. Cotton futures closed $1.20 to $1.75 a bale higher.

Credit conditions remained practically stationary. Call money held at 4 per cent. Bankers acceptances dealers raised their rates 1-8 of one per cent to bring them in line with the federal reserve buying rates.

Foreign exchanges firmed up a little, Sterling cables rising 3-32 of a cent to $4.86 9-16.

THE CURB MARKET

NEW YORK, April 1—(AP)—Prices on the New York curb market headed upward again today, but the selling resistance became so great that many of the early gains were cut down or converted into small declines. Net gains outnumbered losses at the close, but it was apparent that operators for the rise were being called upon to absorb a heavy volume of selling in order to push their favorites into new high ground. Trading showed a moderate reduction in volume, the day's sales of 1,452,900 shares falling about 200,000 below those of yesterday's record-breaking 1930 session.

Electric Bond & Share, the recent leader of the public utility group, closed fractionaly lower at 111 5-8 after having dipped close to 110. Cities Service moved up fractionally to another new high at 43 3-8. Electric Power & Light optional warrants jumped 5 1-2 points in sympathy with a late rise in the stock on the "big board" and maintained nearly all of the gain. Central States Electric issues, International Superpower and Nevada-California Electric also reached new high ground. American Gas & Electric fell 2 points and American Superpower and several of the other recent leaders showed more moderate declines.

Oils developed a stronger undertone despite the further increase in the storage stocks of crude oil and gasoline reported for February. Standard Oil of Indiana, Gulf and Lion all moved into new high ground for the year, the rise in the last-named being influenced by reports of increased activity in the stock in the Chicago market. Cosden jumped 5 points on a few sales and Humble advanced more than 2 to within a fraction of the year's top.

Resumption of pool operations in the specialties lifted more than a score of those issues to new high levels. Aluminum Limited soared 23 points to a new high at 200 in odd lot transactions. American Maize Products, Columbia Pictures, Cooper Bessemer, Ferror Enamel, Garlock Packing, Gold Seal Electric, Mesta Machine, Nehi Corporation, Ruberoid, and Tobbaco Allied were among the many other issues to sell at new highs for the year. Translux, which sold as low as 4 1-2 this year, was marked up 2 points to a new high at 11 on merger rumors.

Investment trust and trading corporation shares were irregular. Tri-Continental issues moved to new 1930 peak prices but efforts to extend the recent advance in Goldman Sachs met with heavy profit taking and the stock closed nearly a point lower. Eastern States B and U. S. & Overseas Securities also registered new highs.

BOND MARKET

NEW YORK, April 1—(AP)—A slightly better demand for representative investment issues gave a firmer tone to bond trading today. The market for railroad obligations and for a few utilities broadened and numerous small gains appeared. United States governments again sagged, with the higher priced treasuries losing about half a point each, but turnovers were limited. Liberty Fourth 4 1-4s held firm in an active market.

A substantial part of the day's business was in bonds carrying stock features. International Telephone's Convertible 4 1-2 proved to be the feature, soaring to a new 1930 peak above 125 and then losing all but a point of its net advance. American Telephone 4 1-2s lost 2 3-4.

Alleghany Corp. 5s of 1950, American International 5 1-2s, Baltimore & Ohio 4 1-2s, Missouri Pacific 5 1-2s and Warner Brothers Pictures 6s, all of which are in the share privilege group, were firm.

The increased activity in the rails was most noticeable in Santa Fe General 4s, Chesapeake & Ohio 4 1-2s, Erie 5s, New Haven 4 1-2s, Rock Island 4s, Nickel Plate 4 1-2s, Pere Marquette 4 1-2s, Wabash 4 1-2s and St. Louis-San Francisco 4 1-2s. Most of these issues were able to show small gains for th. day.

Oil company bonds traded briskly at times in sympathy with the stocks, but the net results were negligible. Goodyear Rubber 5s, International Match 5s, International Telephone 5s, Pillsbury Flour 6s and Western Union 5s were among the firm spots scattered through the list.

Foreign bonds shifted irregularly. Brazils moved up 1 to 2 points and Rio Janeiro 8s made a new high of 105. European governments ruled firm, with a large turnover in German 7s at a small net advance.

CHICAGO GRAIN MARKET

CHICAGO, April 1.—(AP)—Broadening of drought areas and increasing complaints of shortage of moisture brought about new soaring of wheat prices today. Nebraska was added to the regions in urgent need of rain which heretofore had been restricted mainly to Kansas and Oklahoma. Upturns in wheat values received additional momentum from announcement of 5,875,000 bushels decrease of world stocks of wheat, reducing the total to only 5,000,000 bushels more than at this time last year.

Closing quotations on wheat were strong at the day's top level, 1 5-8c a 2c a bushel higher than yesterday's finish.

Corn closed 1 1-4-1 5-8c up, oats 3-8-5-8c advanced, and provisions showing 7c-20c gain.

Helping to lift wheat prices were reports that the Wheat Stabilization corporation, a government-sponsored body, had disposed of 500,000 bushels of wheat to southwest and northwest domestic mills. Trade attention, however, centered on advices that despite predictions of rain southwest the skies were generally clear, and that moisture amounted to little. Official reports said the Kansas drought situation had become so critical that livestock raisers had been forced to haul water in several counties.

A leading Chicago expert, making extensive field observations in Kansas and Oklahoma, telegraphed that subsoil moisture of both states was ample for wheat, although rain was needed to stop soil drifting, especially in damaged sections where plants were still small. Other authorities, nevertheless, continued to emphasize that wheat growth was retarded, and that for three successive weeks the condition of the Kansas crop has been going backward. North American wheat export business remained scant, amounting to barely 300,000 bushels today, and including but little from the United States.

Corn showed independent strength. County offerings were light, and it was current talk that there has been liberal chartering of vessel-room for corn to move out of here at the opening of lake navigation April 20 to 25. Oats were responsive to the upward trend of corn.

Commission house buying of lard gave an upward tilt to provisions, despite downturns in the value of hogs.

Closing indemnities—Wheat, May 109 7-8, 113 1-8-1-4; July 108 1-8, 113; Sept. 110 3-8-1-2, 114 7-8. Corn — May 85 1-8, 87 1-8; July 87 1-8, 89 1-8; Sept. 87 1-4, 89 1-4.

RUSSIAN ARTIST PAINTS PORTRAIT OF MRS. GANN

WSHINGTON, April 1— (AP) —A portrait of Mrs. Edward Everett Gann, the first she has had made since becoming vice-presidental hostess, has just been competed by Boris B. Gordon, Russian portrait painter.

The picture required eight sittings and took a month to complete. It is being exhibited at a leading hotel and will later be taken by Mrs. Gann to the hotel quarters which she and her husband share with vice-president Curtis.

Mrs. Gann is shown wearing black velvet, pearls, and a blue satin scarf over one shoulder.

SPRING SUITS SPORT BLOUSES IN COLOR

PARIS, April 1— (AP) —Colored blouses, pink and blue shades preferred, are newer than white for wear with spring suits.

Materials may be wash satin crepe de chine or light weight wool jerseys, preferably of fancy, open weave. Colored voile and handkerchief linen also are widely used.

Council and Troops News Of Norwich Boy Scouts

Using their knowledge of the compass and of map-reading, 16 members of Troop 7 followed a mapped trail through the woods and arrived at a secret destination. The map with directions had been prepared before the hike by members of the troop, who, however, did not give away the secret to those "not in the know." Assembling at troop headquarters at the Dowell club at 1.30 Saturday afternoon, the scouts were given sealed envelopes containing compass directions and a map of the trail through the woods. By the use of their compasses, and by pacing off distances, the scouts were able to find landmarks shown on the map, and thus arrived finally at Hemlock hill, the hidden objective of the trip. Once arrived, fires were built by members of the troop who wished to pass their second class test, wood being supplied by those passing the knife and hatchet test. When the fires had burned down to a good bed of coals, food supplies were taken from knapsacks, and soon the appetizing aroma of sizzling bacon and broiling steak filled the air.

When keen appetites, made keener by a hike through the pine woods, had been satisfied, and camp had been cleaned up, a game of soldiers and robbers was played. The robbers, Frank Amodeo, Francis Driscoll and Scoutmaster Walter Weidman were given five minutes start, after which the soldiers, under the leadership of Assistant Scoutmaster John Boldrighini, attempted to capture the robbers and take them to jail. One of the soldiers, John Golembieski, who became separated from the main detachment of troops, chanced to stumble on the lair of the robbers, and was very nearly kidnapped, escaping only by diligent use of his legs and lungs. He later turned the tables by tracking down and capturing the robber chief singlehanded.

With the finish of the robber hunt, camp was broken, and shouldering their packs, the scouts hit the homeward path, taking a different trail from the one by which they had arrived. Scouts reporting for the hike were Edward Lawton, Henry Butkiewicz, James McNulty, William Smith, Frank Amodeo, William Galligan, John Golembieski, Russell Culver, Francis Driscoll, Angelo Yeitz, Reynolds Chapman, George Johns, James Bina, Frank Barron and Melvin Cook.

(Signed. Scribe Henry Butkiewicz.)

Troop 21 went on a six mile hike Saturday afternoon to Preston. The troop helped to burn five acres of grass and brush. Those who passed tests were: Tony Layko, John Cimikosku, Bernie Lukowski, Charles Wismeck, tracking, firebuilding. Second class cooking was passed by Wisnajeski. First class cooking was passed by Leroy Sebastian. Eight boys attended the hike in charge of two of the troop committee.

The regular meeting of the St. Patrick's Boy Scouts was held Tuesday evening under the direction of Junior Assistant Scoutmaster Nick Tarrant. Mr. Wyant was a visitor at last week's meeting. He also gave a talk to the boys. After the talk the boys enjoyed various games. Friday night nine scouts of Troop 5 and 4 went on a hike to Camp Wakanah. Scout Executive Sellman in the absence of Anthony Kirker remained overnight with the scouts.

"BEING A LADY" POPULAR AGAIN, SAYS GIRLS' DEAN

CHICAGO, April 1—(AP)—A woman educator in a convent, noted for devotion to deportment, sees freedom in manners for young women passing out with freedom of dress.

Being a "lady," highly desirable in the Victorian age, again is popular, said Ethel Fitzpatrick, social dean of Rosary college.

"The old magic of gracious behavior again is the key to the world's treasure chest—for women," she says.

Today's fashions draw distinct lines between sports, afternoon, evening and office attire, and "crossing the line is no pardonable social trespass."

NEW NECKPIECES NICKNAMED "HUDDLES"

PARIS, April 1— (AP) —"Huddles" is the nickname Miss 1930 has wished on the spring revival of old-fashioned ruches and boas.

The modern "huddle" is a neckpiece of pleated or shirred chiffon, taffeta or tulle. It accompanies afternoon and evening esembles, replacing a fur. Usually the dress with which it is worn repeats the ruching in the form of trimming.

Frills Delight Camerman

WEST PALM BEACH, April 1—(AP)—The more feminine a woman appears, the more frills she wears, the better subject she makes for the camera, says E. F. Foley, photographer of fashionables.

Work On Road To Start

EL PASO, Tex.—(AP)—A unit of the $50,000,000 proposed International highway which is to link the interior of Mexico with United States is to be started by the Mexican government this month. The unit, 60 miles long, will connect Juarez, Mexico, with El Porvenir, in the interior.

PIONEER AIRMAIL PILOT HAS FLOWN 2,300 HOURS

SEATTLE—(AP)—John Kaien, pioneer airmail pilot, talks little and writes less.

On the record form given him to fill out when he joined the Boeing system three questions: "Any unusual experiences or achievements?—Participation in outstanding flights?—Any further data of interest?"

The word "none" was written after each question. But four figures standing after the question: "Hours in the air?" told the story. They were 2,300.

Greek restaurants may be plentiful enough in America, but they are such a novelty in Germany that when Berlin's first Greek restaurant was opened the even was regarded worth long newspaper articles.

WAR MOTHERS TO BE GUIDED BY ARMY MEN

WASHINGTON, April 1—(AP)—No group of women ever went to Europe with the journey so carefully prepared for them as the 5,400 gold star mothers and war widows who will make the government pilgrimage to the graves of their sons and husbands in France.

Fifty army officers, carefully chosen by the war department from posts all over the country, will take charge of the women both in New York and Europe.

They will have no worries about baggage, sight-seeing trips or the impressive visits to war cemeteries. Such problems will be shifted to the army men.

These men will range in rank from lieutenant-colonels to lieutenants. They are being selected from as widely varying points as California, Texas and New York. They are chosen for their special qualifications for this most unusual journey.

Nearly every branch of the service, from the tanks to the medical corps, will be represented in the stalwart bodyguard.

Most of the officers already assigned saw service in France. Many of their comrades lie in the European cemeteries. Maj. Albert Kenner of the medical corps, who will go with the first detail of 18 officers April 16 was attached to the British army in the early days of the war. He was awarded the distinguished service cross. Lieut. Col. George G. Bartlett of the infantry served as liaision officer between the American and French armies of occupation.

Women from Nebraska will be the first to begin the pilgrimage. Their state was the one drawn by Mrs. Herbert Hoover from a silver bowl containing envelopes with the names of all the states. The first group will sail from New York May 7.

TWEED MIXTURES LEAD NEW STYLES

PARIS, April 1 — (AP) — Tweed mixtures seem easily the most popular new spring styles, judging from fashionably dressed women at Paris race courses. One piece dresses and short coats, and three-quarter coat ensembles are most noticeable.

NORTH STONINGTON

Breed Theatre

The most remote postoffice in the United States was discovered by George O'Brien and other members of the company making "The Lone Star Ranger," Fox Movietone all talking romance of the Southwest, adapted from Zane Grey's thrilling story, while on various locations in Arizona. "The Lone Star Ranger" is now being shown at the Breed theatre.

The postoffice is located at Kayonta, 175 miles from the nearest railroad station. The postmaster is one proud individual. The mail is transferred to Flagstaff once a week on horseback and it takes seven days for the round trip.

Sue Carol was the only member of the company who received mail. She had two letters from Nick Stuart.

Another interesting discovery was made at Rainbow Arch. This was a large register, encased in a metal box set in a huge rock. The book was placed there by the federal government and nearby is a printed request for every visitor to register. As the Fox company numbered some 200 people, they came close to filling up the book.

It is interesting to record that the last visitor to register before George O'Brien and Sue Carol inscribed their names was Zane Grey and the one just ahead of his was that of Harold Bell Wright.

They had visited the spot some weeks before, both accompanied by several fellow travelers. Grey's number on the register was 1175.

The Shimizu tunnel, in Japan, now under construction, will shorten the time between Tokio and the northwest by three and one-half hours.

METHODISTS GATHERING IN NEW LONDON FOR THEIR ANNUAL CONFERENCE

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, April 1.—The New England Southern Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church is meeting for its 90th annual session here this week, opening formally at 9 a. m., Wednesday, and the business sessions continue each forenoon during the week.

The presiding bishop this year is Bishop Frederick D. Leete, of Omaha, Nebraska, who was consecrated as a bishop in 1912. The General conference that year was held in Minneapolis, Minn., and there he was elected and consecrated with seven others chosen as regular bishops and one other as a missionary bishop. Previous to his elevation to the episcopal office, he had distinguished himself as a pastor. He served several strong churches with credit but his final success was in a six years' pastorate at the Central church, Detroit, Mich. He has presided over this conference once before, in 1919, when the conference was held in Taunton, Mass.

Six times before, the conference has met in New London, viz: In 1848, 1864, 1877, 1891, 1905 and 1923.

Methodism in New London has had an interesting history. The first Methodist minister to preach in New London was the famous pioneer Methodist itinerant whose name is familiar to New England Methodists, Rev. Jesse Lee. He was on his way to Boston and stopped here Sept. 2, 1789, and preached on the steps of the court house at "early candle light." The first "Meeting House" was built in 1798, though the first membership enrollment was in 1793. At the dedication of the house of worship, July 20, 1798, both Bishop Asbury and Jesse Lee were present and both preached. A revival in 1816 added 300 members and necessitated a new church building, which was built and dedicated in 1817. During the years which followed there were some divisions and in 1840 many withdrew to form a Wesleyan Methodist church without bishops. The church survived, however, and erected another house of worship which was dedicated in 1842 by Rev. Miner Raymond, D.D. The present church edifice is a beautiful structure, valued at $150,000, completed and dedicated in 1917, during the pastorate of Rev. Myron E. Genter, now superintendent of the Norwich district.

The present pastor of the New London church is Rev. Charles E. Spaulding, D.D., who came here in 1925 after completing the term of six years as superintendent of the Worcester (Mass.) district of the New England conference. From that conference he was transferred in coming to the New London pastorate, where his work has been eminently successful.

The principal events of the first day of the conference are as follows:

9 a. m., holy communion in charge of Bishop Leete, followed by organization and business; 11 a. m., memorial service, Rev. W. I. Ward presiding and address by Rev. E. J. Curry. At noon each day the bishop will conduct a devotional service. 2 p. m., conference sermon by Rev. W. M. Newton; 3 p. m., [illegible] Ministers' association, Rev. H. [illegible], president; 4 p. m., conference institute, Rev. N. E. Burton presiding, address by Rev. A. C. Knudson, dean of Boston university School of Theology, subject: "What Do Methodists Believe?" 8 p. m., Lenten service, auspices of the New London Federation of Churches, sermon by Bishop Leete.

Opening Public Meeting

The first public service of the conference took place this evening at [illegible]. [illegible] music was rendered by the Bulkeley-W. M. I. orchestra. [illegible], as chairman, introduced Hon. [illegible] Rogers as lieut.-governor of Connecticut and also as a fellow-citizen of New London, who, in a few well chosen words, welcomed the conference.

Mayor C. D. Twomey followed Mr. Rogers and dwelt upon some of the special attractions of New London and invited the members of the conference to enjoy these things while here. The third speaker was Morris [illegible], president of New London chamber of commerce, who referred to religion as an essential to life, and voiced his appreciation of the presence of this conference in this city.

Bishop Leete was introduced as the presiding bishop of the conference and he responded fittingly. In the course of his speech he said: "We naturally like to be welcomed and the good things you say of us. It reminds me of what a great preacher once said after being introduced in a very complimentary way. Said he: 'Of course I know that all you have said cannot be true but I am such a good example of total depravity that I like it and I will not conceal it.'"

The second half of the program was in charge of Rev. I. W. LeBaron as chairman and opened with the singing of the hymn "Lead On, O King Eternal." Prayer was offered by Rev. Dr. J. I. Bartholomew.

Rev. Clarence True Wilson, D. D., the corresponding secretary of the board of temperance, prohibition, and public morals of the Methodist Episcopal church, of Washington, D. C., was the principal speaker. Dr. Wilson said in part:

"I will frankly state that I believe prohibition is right in principle and a success in practice. The constitution provides for the common defense. We never made a serious attempt to defend the home, the women, the youth, the weak or the habit-bound until we closed the saloon and prohibited the manufacture of its poison. Gladstone says: It's the province of government to make it easy to do right and hard to do wrong. It is not drunkenness that is unforgivable, but the encouragement to drunkenness. It is not vice that is unpardonable, but the artificial stimulation of vice for profit.

"The defects in prohibition will never justify your tramping underfoot the laws of the land you love."

He affirmed that 93 of the state legislative bodies out of a possible 96 have voted to ratify the prohibition amendment. No such support came to the original constitution itself.

Dr. Wilson said that no nation had ever emerged from a war before with such prosperity as has this nation emerged from the World war. Other nations have met all kinds of adversity. The only reason is for our advantage spelled in the word prohibition.

The address was frequently applauded and made a deep impression.

Conference Notes

Methodist history in Norwich discloses some names among her pastors who have served the Methodist church in New London, as follows: Rev. J. Ellis Hawkins, who was pastor in New London 1885 to '88, was pastor of the former North Main street church, Norwich, 1864 to '67. Rev. Thomas Ely, pastor in New London 1852 to '54, was at the former Sachem street church, 1854 to '56. Rev. M. P. Alderman, who served New London 1854 to '56, was at the former Central church 1857 to '59. Rev. A. J. Coultas, who was at the former Sachem street church 1885 to '88, moved to New London from there in 1888, where he had a four-year pastorate. Rev. H. D. Robinson, pastor in New London 1880 to '82, was presiding elder of the Norwich district 1882 to '86. Mr. Robinson now survives, residing in Attleboro, Mass., he being the oldest living member of this conference at the present time.

Rev. George O. Richardson of Orleans, Mass., Rev. Harlan L. Bromley of East Wareham, Mass., and Rev. Clinton E. Bromley passed through Norwich Tuesday afternoon on their way to the conference in New London. Mr. Richardson is a native of South Willington, Conn. The Bromley brothers were born in Jewett City and spent several of their boyhood years in Norwich.

COTTON'S NEW POPULARITY IN BLOUSE AND DRESS

PARIS, April 1—(AP)—Cotton steps out of the sports clothes category in spring styles and takes its place among fabrics for tailored blouses and simple dresses.

One leading couturier shows short-sleeved simple afternoon dresses of a printed cotton material similar to fine crepe. A small floral design on a white background is a favorite.

Voile also figures for summer blouses to be worn with suits. Many spring tailored suits have crisp cotton pique blouses, mostly sleeveless.

Colored poplin is replacing linen to some extent for sport and beach dresses. It rumples less easily and costs less.

White cotton pique easily is the favorite for sport and beach dress fabrics. Plain-colored beach clothes, incidentally, are smartest for the coming summer.

Some suits, however, have gay flowered printed linen or cotton jackets.

Cotton pique gloves are an innovation at one dress house. They are made of the same material as blouses, or collar and cuffs accompanying dark blue tailored suits.

The newcomer among cotton materials used for summer styles in exclusive places is mattress ticking. Fine-striped blue and white ticking is used for trousered beach suits and big sun hats.

NO WALL FLOWERS IN CAPITAL PARTIES

WASHINGTON, April 1— (AP) — There are few wall flowers at debutante parties in Washington.

Through the ratio of women to men in the capital is reckoned at 16 to 1, careful mothers and chaperones see to it that winsome debs have plenty of cavaliers.

Because of this wise and determined foresight, the girls fairly dance the soles off their slippers in a single evening. There are no disconsolate damsels draped along the walls.

Stag lines often extend half the length of the ball room. A debutante must divide one dance among three or four men. That makes her look very popular. The stags "cut in" without ceremony. Debs smile and nod graciously and a moment later they ditch these partners for new ones.

Midshipmen and cadets in uniform, young men with a foreign accent from the legations and embassies and bachelor members of congress line up along the dance floor. As the evening progresses the "cutting-in" becomes fast and furious.

Debbie's spirits must never flag, her smile never waver, no matter how many hours she has been dancing. That's the social code.

Next season's debutantes are beginning now to plan for their coming out parties while those of the present season are announcing their engagements. Several of the past winter's crop have married.

The book of Mormon has been published in 15 languages.

AGRICULTURAL INTERESTS

FERTILIZING PRACTICE OF LAWNS

Golf clubs have brought a welcome gift to garden makers in scientific information on lawn growing, which has been developed by an organization of greens committees in co-operation with the United States Department of Agriculture.

Lawns need fertilization much oftener than is the usual practice and they need all elements of plant food in liberal quantities. But there is one element which they need more than others—that is nitrogen. Nitrogen stimulates leaf growth and grass is all leaves.

It has been learned by experience, however, that a lawn which is fed nitrogen alone becomes rank and soft and is an easy prey to fungous disease. When a balanced fertilizer containing phosphorus and potash as well as nitrogen is fed, healthier growth results. And it is a general rule in fertilization that where a balanced ration is used, more fertilizer can be applied with good effect. An unbalanced diet gives plants indigestion.

So lawns should be given a balanced fertilizer of the modern quickly soluble mineral type at least once a year; and they should be given occasional application of nitrogen in addition.

The U. S. Department of Agriculture recommends as the medium for applying this nitrogen the use of sulphate of ammonia. The reason for this recommendation is that experience has shown that sulphate of ammonia regularly used discourages weeds. After three years' use of it on golf fairways, dandelions have been known to disappear. The quantity of sulphate of ammonia to use is a total of 25 pounds per 1,000 square feet, and this should be applied in five doses through the year. It is best to dissolve it in water and sprinkle the lawn with the solution. Siphon pumps can be obtained which will mix the solution with the water which is used to irrigate the lawn and this is the ideal method.

GETTING AN EXTRA EARLY START

It is still too cold in large portions of the country to do more than accumulate a supply of manure for the hotbed but it is none too early to get an early start with a few pots of seeds in the house in a convenient sunny window. For extra early tomatoes this is an excellent plan, getting the plants up in the world and of some size by the time the hotbed is in commission when they may be transplanted directly into the hotbed and be good sized plants by the time the season is sufficiently advanced to put them in the open ground. Some gardeners leave these transplanted plants in the frame to give their crop in early summer as with an early start the plants are too large to move easily. If only a few plants are to be raised this is an excellent plan.

Manure for the hotbed should be the first care of a gardener at this time as it is none too soon to get the pile into shape for the hotbed. Stack it where the hotbed is to be located in a flat-topped pile and after fermentation is under way it will need to be turned over once a week or every fourth or fifth day in order to distribute the fermentation equally through the pile.

Owing to the scarcity of manure, cold frames are becoming more and more popular. Plants can be transplanted into the cold frame a month before the season is safe in the open fro mpots and boxes in the house. Seed may be sown directly in the cold frames of the hardiest annuals at any time, to be left to germinate as soon as the weather is propitious and thus get an early start and have sturdy plants to move into the garden beds. This is a useful scheme with lettuce.

There is always an ambition in every gardener's soul to grow good muskmelons at least once in his life. Start melon seed in pots in a warm window now. Plant two or three seeds to a five-inch pot so that the whole ball of earth may be turned into the ground without disturbing the plants when planting time in the open comes. Many gardeners who have had poor luck with sweet peas outdoors in unfavorable seasons now negotiate them by planting in pots indoors, an excellent plan.

SCARS MADE BY PRUNING NEED PROMPT TREATMENT

Shade trees often suffer permanent injury as a result of improper care or complete neglect of the wounds caused by pruning. Specialists of the United States Department of Agriculture recommend that scars made in pruning be painted immediately with shellac to prevent drying out and consequent dying back of the cambium layer, the area just beneath the bark.

Shellac should be prepared by dissolving gum lac in alcohol. No other solvent should be used, as some solvents actually kill back the cambium layer instead of protecting it. In the case of small wounds a half inch or less in diameter, shellac will give complete protection under ordinary conditions, but on larger wounds the shellac should be covered with some more permanent preparation, such as asphalt, tar, or good lead paint of any desired color.

In the case of large wounds, good results will be obtained if the shellac is applied only over the cambium, cut edges of the bark, and the sapwood, but the permanent dressing should cover the entire scar.

A shellac brush can be cleaned easily by working it around for a few minutes in a cup of water with half a teaspoon of ordinary borax. Shellac can readily be removed from the hands with the same preparation.

LEGUME SILAGE MAY AID DRY-LAND DAIRY FARMS

Sweetclover silage may prove valuable as a wintering ration for dry cows and heifers under dry-land conditions during years when other feed crops fail, says the Federal Bureau of Dairy Industry. Sweetclover can be placed in an inexpensive silo, such as a trench, and can provide the principal fed for the dry stock through the winter. This is indicated by tests at the United States Department of Agriculture field station at Ardmore, S. Dak.

Cows, however, did not relish the sweetclover silage as they did corn silage or grass silage. In a feeding experiment in which cows were fed sweetclover silage without a grain or hay ration, production dropped greatly. A sweetclover crop usually produces considerable vegetation, even in years when drought takes the corn crop, but in the vicinity of Ardmore many cows refuse to graze the sweetclover because of a bitter taste that is more noticeable in that vicinity than at other field stations of the department. Experience with sweetclover silage at Ardmore showed that ensiling causes the bitterness to disappear.

At the Huntley, Mont., station cows preferred corn silage to alfalfa silage made by adding 1 part of beet-sugar molasses to 20 parts of first cutting alfalfa.

"An interesting feature of the legumesilage feeding," says J. R. Dawson of the Bureau of Dairy Industry, "was the inability of the animals, when receiving silage as the only feed, to maintain an appetite for consumed large quantities for a few large quantities. Many of the cows declined after a short time.

VERY LITTLE HONEY IS BOUGHT IN THE COMB

Housewives who wanted pure honey 25 years ago bought it in the comb because extracted honey was quite generally adulterated with sugar sirup. Today extracted honey is just as reliable as that in the comb.

The first interstate seizure of adulterated honey in 10 years was made in January, 1930, by officials of the Food and Drug Administration of the United States department of agriculture. During this period government inspectors have vigilantly sampled and analyzed interstate shipments of honey and have visited the factories where honey is extracted and packed for shipment.

After the passage of the federal pure food law in 1906 many seizures of adulterated honey were made, with the result that violations became rare and the consumers gained greater confidence in honey. The honey industry has prospered so that during the fiscal year 1928-29 exports to foreign countries totaled 12,000,000 pounds. The domestic consumption of honey has been increasing yearly and bee keeping has grown into an important industry.

The recent seizure consisted of 2,075 pounds. Chemical analysis showed it to be about one-fourth sugar sirup. It was seized in Oklahoma and had been shipped from Texas.

Pure honey will sugar with age, so sugaring is no indication of adulteration, as some people believe. The quality of honey is not harmed in this crystallization process. Crystallized honey can be returned to liquid state with gentle heating. Overheating is to be avoided as it may spoil the flavor.

FERTILIZING OF PASTURE PROVES A WISE VENTURE

Pasture plots top dressed with complete fertilizer and lime showed an increased yield that was three times that of unfertilized plots, according to records of 16 farms in Massachusetts where county agents conducted pasture demonstrations in 1929, says R. W. Donaldson, extension agronomist at the Massachusetts Agricultural college.

Last spring pasture top dressing demonstrations were established on 56 farms for the purpose of finding the best treatment to restore runout pasture sods. Records of yields for the first year were obtained on 16 of these farms.

Five plots were fenced off in each pasture, on four of which different treatments were used and one was kept as a check. The following were the treatments and the average yields on 16 pastures.

The following figures give the amount of fertilizer per acre and the yield of dry grass per acre; unfertilized, 1196 lbs; 600 lbs. superphosphate, 1588 lbs; 600 lbs. superphosphate and 1 ton lime, 1674 lbs; 600 lbs. superphosphate, lime, and 200 potash, 1958 lbs.; 1000 lbs. 5-10-10 and 1 ton lime, 3442 lbs.

Treatments with superphosphate showed only slight gain; where lime and potash were added clover began to show up in many of the plots. Lime and minerals work slowly, but they improve soil conditions so that clover and better grasses gradually take the place of weeds and moss after several years. However, where nitrogen was added to make a complete fertilizer, there was an immediate response and a stretch to the grass that did not require a microscope to detect it.

Assuming a valuation of $30 per acre for rough pasture, a charge of $3 per year should cover investment, taxes, and fence repair. A ton of air-dry grass from the unfertilized plots costs, therefore, $3.34.

When lime or fertilizer is applied, these costs must be added, but the lime should be good for five years, the superphosphate and potash should last at least three years so only the proportionate costs should be charged for any one year. Nitrogen, however, would be applied each year and charged in full against the crop.

On this basis: A ton produced on the superphosphate pasture cost $9.90; on the superphosphate, lime $9.80; on the superphosphate lime and potash $10; while on the complete fertilizer and lime a ton cost $11.50.

INFECTED CHICKS SPREAD DISEASE WHILE IN INCUBATOR

Bacillary white diarrhea, also known as pullorum disease, may spread from infected chicks to healthy chicks in the incubator, even though the chicks are not actually in contact, the U. S. department of agriculture announces in reporting progress in the study of the cure, prevention, and eradication of this serious disease. Dr. Hubert Bunyea and W. J. Hall have demonstrated the danger of this type of infection in investigations under way for two years at the Bureau of Animal Industry Experiment Station, Bethesda, Md. Their work was part of a program of study formulated by the bureau and the National Poultry council. The committee in charge of these investigations consisted of Drs. M. Dorset, M. A. Jull, and H. Bunyea, all of the Bureau of Animal Industry.

The eggs used in the experiment came from two flocks, one known to have the disease, the other free from it as shown by the agglutination test. Separate trays for the two kinds of eggs were used in the incubators, and the chicks, when hatched, were prevented from coming in contact with those in the other trays. In four different types of incubators it was found that pullorum disease was transmitted from infected chicks to normal chicks. The infection ranged from 45 percent in the still-air type to 81 per cent in the agitated-air type. The control chicks, hatched, in separate incubators, from eggs obtained from non-reacting hens, showed less than one-tenth of one per cent infection.

In all cases the spread of the disease occurred within a period of from 18 to 24 hours after hatching, apparently as a result of air circulation. In no case did any of the chicks from one tray have direct contact with those in another tray. Deaths of healthy chicks exposed to the disease showed that even when the chicks were brooded under the most favorable conditions, a large percentage died within two weeks as a result of the infection.

The experiment showed that from the moment it comes out of the shell an infected chick immediately becomes a menace to all other chicks in the same incubator. An infected chick is also a menace when placed in a brooder with healthy chicks.

A HISTORY OF CONNECTICUT INDUSTRY

Released by Manufacturers Association of Connecticut,

The Hendey Machine Company, Torrington

In 1870 The Hendey Machine company was started in Wolcottville, now Torrington, as a jobbing machine shop by Henry J. Hendey and his brother, Arthur. As the makers of planers and shapers, the company early established a reputation built upon the highest ideals in quality and workmanship.

With this background the company arranged with Wendell P. Norton, in 1892, to manufacture his patented quick change gear engine lathe which was such an outstanding improvement that the company became known on both continents as the premier lathe builder. Almost every European works of the better class uses Hendey lathes, large numbers are used in the Orient—two having been shipped to Calcutta and carried 400 miles inland by coolies. Before the last war nearly every battleship in the British navy carried one.

Quality and precision have always been foremost in the building of these machines. In spite of the fact that these machines have always been more costly than any others the success of the company is an outstanding example of the reward for building steadfastly to an ideal. During the war the company's product was accepted by the allied governments without inspection with such satisfaction that the practice still stands.

The company operated its own foundry and employs a force of about 850 hands. Due to the increase in the demand for its products and the requirements for heavier and more powerful machines, the company is now completing a half-million dollar addition to its present plant and equipment.

The officers of the company are: John A. Coe, president; Sterry H. Childs, vice president and treasurer; Frederick N. McKenzie, secretary.

TAFTVILLE

Members of the Taftville Rod and Gun club are discussing the advisability of having their hunting dogs vaccinated for rabies, as advocated by the Department of Domestic Animals of the state.

Preaching from the text, "Be ye faithful unto death, and I will give thee a crown of everlasting glory," Rev. James Seidel, Redemptorist priest, who for the past week has been conducting a mission for the English speaking members of Sacred Heart church parish brought the mission to a close Sunday afternoon, with a stirring sermon on "Perseverance." Rev. Father Seidel urged his congregation to keep and live up to the resolutions which they had made during the week, and to persevere in living a right life in spite of any difficulties which may be encountered. He closed his address by bestowing upon his hearers the papal benediction and his own blessing.

The service came to a close with solemn benediction of the blessed sacrament, at which the pastor, Rev. Frederick R. Des Surreault was the officiant, and he was assisted by Rev. Donat Jette and Rev. Omer T. Mandler. The choir composed of members of the English speaking branch of the Children of Mary sodality sang, accompanied, as they have been throughout the week by Miss Mayme Hasler.

Rev. Father Seidel, has left town for Brookline, Mass., where he is to assist other members of the Redemptorist order in conducting a mission at a large church. During his short stay in town, his eloquence and sincerity, endeared the young missioner to all who were privileged to hear him. Before his departure, Rev. Father Seidel, expressed his appreciation for the zeal of those who took the opportunity of maintaining a steady attendance at the mission; of the local clergy; the choir, and spoke in commendatory terms of the acolytes, especially those who assisted him at the 5:30 mass. During the week, the missioner has preached at the masses at 5:30 and 7:30; and addressed the congregations at all the masses on Sunday.

While the successful mission was in progress, religious articles were sold by Miss Grace Phalen, Miss Helen Breault, Miss Viola Chappell, Miss Julia Chappell and Miss Anne Dailey, members of the English speaking branch of the Children of Mary sodality.

Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Linderson and Miss Helen C. Aberg of North Third avenue, and Wilfred Linderson of Bridgeport, were week end guests of Mr. and Mrs. Daniel S. Vergason of North Stonington.

There was no meeting of the members of the Young People's society of Christian Endeavor of the Taftville Congregational church Sunday evening, to allow those interested to attend the address of Rev. Charles N. Arbuckle, D. D., of Newton Center, Mass., who spoke at Central Baptist church, Norwich.

After spending a few days with relatives in Mystic, Mr. and Mrs. William Hassler and their daughter, Miss Ruth Hassler, have returned to their home in Occum.

A requiem mass, requested by the Children of Mary society, for the repose of the soul of the late Catherine Swain, who was a member of the society, was sung Monday morning at Sacred Heart church.

English papers note that Mr. and Mrs. Ernest G. Stranz, who have been traveling for the past few months on the continent, have returned to their home in London. Mrs. Strans is the former Miss Elsie Seddon, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John W. Seddon of South-B street.

TRAINING CLASSES FOR EXHIBITION AT Y. M. C. A.

Everything is going nicely for the second annual exhibition to be held at the Y. M. C. A. on Friday of this week. All the classes are putting on the finishing touches to their drills, and everything will be in fine shape for the dress rehearsal Thursday night. The senior girls class, under the direction of Mrs. Streeter, are putting on a clever dance number which should go over big.

The junior gym class are putting on a boxing drill in which there is plenty of action. They also are going to give a striking dumb bell drill. Bill Hill, the winner of the Junior "B" all around athletics, will lead this special number.

The seniors as usual will furnish the thrills of the evening with bar work, and tumbling. They will also give an exhibition of lighted club swinging. Emery Davis, boys' work secretary, has been practicing with the class for several weeks and reports that they are all set. Mr. Davis is a fine Indian club swinger, and is fortunate in having seven or eight other members of the class with several years experience of lighted club swinging.

There will be several clowns to keep the "sunny side up" of the crowd. They have been getting up new gags and tricks to spring when the going gets slow, which will not be very often from the looks of the program.

LAUREL HILL SIDING TO HOLD 175 CARS

A siding, which will accommodate 175 cars, is to be constructed by the New Haven railroad from its Laurel Hill yard in this city south to Fort Point. Plans for the siding have been prepared and work is expected to be started soon.

Work was started Tuesday on the construction of a 175-car siding from North Webster, Mass., northward to a point about two miles from Oxford.

Plans are to have both sidings completed before the summer traffic rush starts on the Norwich and Worcester branch of the road over which long and heavy freight trains are now operated.

TO MAKE STREET IMPROVEMENT AT JUNCTION OF MARKET AND WATER STS.

Arrangements have been completed to cut the sidewalk at the old Jaeckel corner, intersection of Market and Water streets, back four and a half feet. The slice to be taken off will begin at a point on the easterly side of Market street near the northwesterly bounds of the corner property now owned by Mrs. Yetta Sternlieb and about 30 feet northerly from the corner at Water street and sweeping thence southerly and easterly by a curved line to a point on Water street about 15 feet east of the present corner. The piece to be removed is crescent shaped, about 45 feet long and four and a half feet wide through the center portion.

This change has long been needed because the angle of the walk, which is nearly eleven feet wide at this point, juts out into the street so as to interfere with the smooth operation of vehicles proceeding down Market street and turning to the left into Water street. If the proposed ordinance turning traffic this way to reach Laurel Hill passes, as is expected, the elimination of this projection at the corner will prove of especial benefit.

The improvement itself follows the pattern of many similar ones accomplished by the present administration and made possible without material cost to the city by the generosity of adjacent property owners. In this particular case Mrs. Sternlieb contributes whatever rights she may have in the strip of sidewalk to be thrown into the street without compensation. A six foot sidewalk will remain and the new line will actually improve the property remaining.

Herbert B. Wightman, the street commissioner, plans to execute the work to effect this change next week.

SPECIAL SERVICES SPEAKER DISCUSSES SELFISHNESS

"Are We All Selfish?" was the topic of the message given by Rev. Dr. Charles N. Arbuckle of Newton Center, Mass., Tuesday evening, at the Central Baptist church. It was the third in his series of addresses here under the auspices of the Y. M. C. A. in cooperation with the churches of Norwich. Secretary Edwin Hill, of the Y. M. C. A., was the leader of the service. Rev. Charles H. Ricketts, pastor of the Greeneville Congregational church, read the Scripture, and Rev. Gurdon F. Bailey, pastor of the First Congregational church, Norwich Town, offered the prayer. Secretary Hill announced that at the service this (Wednesday) evening there will be a collection in the interests of the vacation Bible school.

In announcing his topic Rev. Dr. Arbuckle said that he is endeavoring to discuss this week the major perplexities of faith. Wednesday night, he said, he will speak on Personality. There are those who tell us we are all selfish, said the speaker, and he went on to explain in detail the arguments set forth to prove that we are all selfish. For instance, he said that law-abiding citizens are law-abiding because they are happy in being so. There is an element of selfishness there. Why do we say our prayers? Because we think we will get things by so doing; move the will of God, so that it is not His will be done but our will be done.

You come to church, why? Some because they would be bored at home. Some because they have no where else to go and some because they believe they will get some good out of the service, and they do. However, they are all thinking of themselves, so, from that point of view, they are selfish.

But there are two sides to everything. There are two kinds of motives that govern all our services. The primary motive, which is the instinctive motive, and the end motive which is the goal. All our instinctive motives are the gas that makes our car go, but the place we want to go, the choice is what makes us what we are. The reward Jesus speaks of is not a bribe, like the nickel given to a boy for being good. You don't make your features but you do make your countenance. We are rewarded openly as the consequence of good living.

REDUCTION IN ELECTRICITY RATES IS IN PROSPECT BY CITY DEPARTMENT

Decision for a reduction in the charges for electricity, both for power and domestic purposes, has been made by the board of gas and electric commissioners of the city department, which will be of substantial benefit to the users of electric service from the local plant.

A special meeting of the board was held Monday night at the offices of the department on Shetucket street, at which Mayor Lee Roy Robbins sat in by invitation, and Mr. Morrill, an electrical schedule expert, was in attendance.

The schedule to be put into effect will result in a decrease of about $40,000 in the department's receipts and a consequent saving of that amount in payments to be made by customers of the department.

According to General Manager Charles W. Taggart, the revised schedule of rates which has been in force during the last two years has worked out so satisfactorily that the proposed reduction in the electrical rates is now possible. In the past year electricity sales increased by 14 per cent in kilowatt hours over the previous year, operating revenue increased 3.97 per cent, operating expense decreased 1.8 per cent, and net earnings increased 19.39 per cent.

In connection with the new schedule, it is probable that a five per cent discount for payment in 15 days will also be put into effect, this applying to all classes of business and on top of the new rates. What the new electrical schedule is to be the department is not quite ready to announce, but the proposed reduction will be another demonstration to the citizens of the determination of the department to give its customers the greatest benefit possible from the operation of the plant and the institution of the best rate structure that can be devised.

SAYS FEAR IS HOODOO AGAINST LIFE SUCCESS

Sam Grathwell of Cincinnati indelibly stamped himself upon the minds of his audience as an excellent speaker when he appeared Tuesday evening at Slater Memorial hall under the auspices of the Woman's City club. He was introduced by the president, Mrs. Charles B. Gilbert, who made several important announcements. His subject was "Getting By Your Hoodoo".

We are responsible for our own failure and success, the speaker said, after enumerating a number of strange beliefs of people and pointing out that the reason why men fail is because they do not think. We get out of life, what we put into life and nothing more. He illustrated this point by telling of a farmer, who had not been successful in Florida and another, who had been. The reason for the latter's success, he explained was because he could see what the other failed to see.

You have a pessimist group in the city of Norwich and a group who are allright, the latter an asset to themselves and to the community, he said. The speaker warned his audience against the superficial optimist and the chronic kicker. If you can't pull for your city pack up and get out.

He spoke of people having inferiority complex; who are conscious of the other fellow's ability and not of their own. These people are always crying, he said, they are doomed to failure. Their worst handicap is thinking they can't succeed. Is it possible for anyone to succeed if he thinks he can't? Discover your talents and drive them through to success. Those who are interested in nothing, get nothing out of life. Success begins with a fellow's will. Fear of mind and lack of self-confidence prevent success. A lot of people are where they are because they will not take a chance because of fear. There is no greater conquest of life than the conquest of fear. He who conquers fear conquers failure.

In defining the pessimist and the optimist, Mr. Grathwell said that the latter sees the light in the dark and the former blows the light out in the dark.

The speaker declared that it was wrong for parents to instill fear in their children by telling them of bogeymen and the terrors of darkness, but rather they should teach them to be brave in their childhood days. We should not call our boys and girls of the present day bad, for if they think they are bad they may become bad. You will find good in them if you will only look within them.

The speaker was given a rising vote of thanks for his most interesting and able talk.

THREE CALLS TUESDAY FOR FIRE DEPARTMENT

Three more calls for brush and grass fires occupied the attention of the fire department Tuesday afternoon. At 2:13 o'clock an oral alarm was entered at the Greeneville station for a brush fire near the long stairs on North Main street. An employe of the city was burning over the land, but the person who sent in the alarm was not aware of this fact. The blaze was put out with brooms by members of Engine Co., No. 2. The land is owned by the city of Norwich.

A grass fire started by boys with matches in the rear of 55 Greene avenue got the department out at 3:02 o'clock. Three gallons of chemical and pumps were used to extinguish the blaze. The land is owned by Benjamin Krieger. Squad A, Engine No. 3 and Chief Henry R. Taft responded.

Sparks from a locomotive were responsible for a grass fire alongside of the N. Y., N. H., and H. railroad tracks near the new dock off River avenue, the call coming in at 6:39 p. m. Squad A, the chief and Deputy Chief Dennis J. Brennan put out the blaze with brooms.

WANTS RADIATOR COMPANY IN LINE FOR BIDS

Secretary John Richardson, of the Norwich chamber of commerce, visited the office of the commissioner of finance and control at the state capitol Tuesday in the interest of securing recognition for the local plant of the Richmond Radiator company in the matter of equipment for the new state asylum building at Fairfield and the new state office building at Hartford. It was brought to the attention of the local secretary that the specifications for the work in question did not include mention of the local firm and since this state work has a direct bearing upon the employment question throughout the state and locally, this investigation was made with the result that it was found such omission would occur at the architect's office and not at state headquarters. Further investigation will be made at this point.

BELIEVE INCOME TAX WILL FALL SHORT OF ESTIMATE

While Collections For Nine Months of the Fiscal Year Exceeded Those of Previous Year, It Is Estimated That the Total For the Year Would Fall $50,000,000 to $100,000,000 Short of December Estimates—March Collections Decreased $42,000,000 From the Same Month Last Year—Total Receipts For the Nine Months Were Reported As $3,042,150,971.

WASHINGTON, April 2—(AP)—Although the treasury department's final report for March today showed an increase in income tax collections for nine months of the fiscal year, it was estimated that this total tax for the year would fall $50,000,000 to $100,000,000 short of estimates last December.

Income tax collections for the first nine months of the fiscal year, which ends with June, were $1,812,137,844, an increase of $125,574,244 over the same period of the previous fiscal year. Collections for the last quarter, however, usually drop about $50,000,000, indicating a considerable decrease from the estimated $2,480,000,000. The first three months of this calendar year brought in only $627,524,917.

The department also said that income tax collections for March had totaled $559,503,703, a decrease of $42,000,000 from the same month last year. It had been estimated this decrease would be $50,000,000. This smaller decrease was accepted as indicating that losses in the stock market decline last fall had not been as large as anticipated.

Total tax receipts for the nine months of the fiscal year were reported as $3,042,150,971, indicating a probable total for the year of $4,000,000,000 with expenditures estimated at $4,023,681000. Miscellaneous receipts, however might make up the difference. Out of an indicated surplus at present of $109,941,826 the treasury must take $100,000,000 recently allotted to the federal farm board.

A decrease in the gross debt of the nation to $16,389,624,566 on March 31 as compared with $16,459,508,732 on February 28 also was reported.

ENUMERATION IN TWO DISTRICTS COMPLETED

WASHINGTON, April 2—(AP)—Hardly had President Hoover been counted today in the 15th decennial census, upon which will be based a re-distribution of the seats in the house of representatives, before widely separated communities of the country began to report that they had finished their task.

A Missouri district, an Idaho district and one from New Jersey reported to census headquarters here before the offices closed at 5 p. m., that they had finished the tally of their residents.

Centertown, Cole county, in the exact geographical center of Missouri, by telegram to Director William M. Steuart claimed the honor of being the first incorporated municipality to finish, and called a noon town meeting to celebrate.

Census district 28-22, Kootenai county, near Coeur d'Alene, Idaho, completed the enumeration at 9:30 a. m., and was believed to have been the first district done with its work.

District 14-59, Morris township, Morris county, New Jersey, consisting of the Morris county children's home, was reported by Supervisor William H. Hosking, Dover, N. J., as having finished at 2:45 p. m.

President Hoover followed the census director's advice, given to everybody by press and by radio, to have answers to questions already prepared when the enumerator arrives.

RADIO PHONE BETWEEN U. S. AND SOUTH AMERICA

NEW YORK, April 2—(AP)—Radio listeners everywhere will have an opportunity to hear President Hoover inaugurate direct radio telephone service between the United States, Argentina, Chile and Uruguay tomorrow morning.

Coast to coast chains and short wave stations are to transmit the ceremonies from the temporary cabinet room of the state, war and navy building in Washington, starting at 10:55 a. m. Besides the NBC and CBS networks, the short wave transmitters of WGY and KDKA and W2XE of the Columbia system will send out the program to the world.

The program is expected to close at 11:30.

RETIRED PHILA. BROKER BECOMES OCEAN VOYAGER

NEW YORK, April 2—(AP)—J. T. Jefferies, retired broker of Philadelphia, has become a perpetual ocean voyager. Last Dec. 4, Jefferies started out for Glasgow, Scotland, but figuratively speaking, he hasn't set foot on land since.

Jefferies sailed for Scotland on the Caledonia but when the ship returned he still was on board. He explained to ship's officers that he liked nothing better than sea travel and that the ship suited him perfectly.

Since that trip the Caledonia has made two 39-day cruises and one shorter cruise to the West Indies. So has Mr. Jefferies, retaining the same cabin.

The Caledonia set out for Scotland again Saturday—with Jefferies still on board.

CHICAGO, April 2—(AP)—The Chicago region is to draw upon the huge natural gas reservoir of the Texas Panhandle for its gas supply.

Preliminary agreements for tapping the Texas gas basin with a 950-mile pipeline whose northern termini will be the Insull Utilities stations of Illinois and Indiana were announced today by Insull, Son and Company, Inc.

The story was told by Miss Pearl Powell, who identified the body of a man found shot to death, near here last Saturday as that of William Robert Pearman, 47, former automobile mechanic of Columbia, Mo.

Dr. A. J. Bass, retired dentist and prominent land dealer of Columbia, was in jail here on a first degree murder charge. Officers accuse him as having been the "master mind" in the alleged plot.

Identity of the victim, which had been in doubt after the family of William Folta had exploded Dr. Bass' identification of the man as Folta, was cleared up to the satisfaction of officers by the ex-waitress, admitted confidante of Pearman.

Dr. Bass held an assignment of insurance policies totalling $200,000 on William Folta, but the body of the slain man was not identified by insurance adjusters as the same person on whom the policies were written.

DRYS TELL OF IMPROVEMENT UNDER 18TH AMENDMENT

Six Prohibition Leaders Declared That Economic and Social Conditions Have Grown Better Under Prohibition—Deets Pickett, Secretary of the Methodist Board of Temperance, Maintains That the Country Has So Adapted Itself to Conditions Under Prohibition That Any Change Would Severely Shock the Entire Structure.

WASHINGTON, April 2.—(AP)—Dry forces ended their case in the prohibition hearings before the house judiciary committee today with statements by six leaders describing a decade under the 18th amendment as having improved economic and social conditions throughout the country.

After presenting but one witness, the drys obtained permission of the committee to offer written statements from their leaders without subjecting them to cross-examination, abruptly ending the session and the hearings. The wets, however, are to be given opportunity for limited rebuttal two weeks from today.

Since Feb. 12, the committee has heard first from the wets and then from the drys, opposing opinions on the measures to repeal the 18th amendment, which have been before that group for years. Both sides presented witnesses from many walks of life.

At the outset today, J. Weston Allen of Boston, former attorney general of Massachusetts, the only witness to take the stand, contended that under the constitution there was no inherent right to drink or sell liquor.

Solution of the drink problem, he said, rested in strict enforcement by the several states.

The statements, which were introduced into the record unread, came from F. Scott McBride, general superintendent of the Anti-Saloon league; Deets Pickett, secretary of the Methodist board of temperance, prohibition and public morals; Ernest H. Cherrington, general secretary of the World League Against Alcoholism; Rev. Edwin C. Dinwiddie, superintendent of the National Temperance bureau; Rev. William Sheafe Case, superintendent of the International Reform federation, and Eugene L. Crawford, general secretary of the board of temperance and social service of the Methodist Episcopal church, south.

Each statement reasserted opposition of the organizations represented to any repeal or modification of the dry laws.

McBride said that "not surrender, but education, observance and enforcement is the solution of the liquor problem—the only answer to the alcoholic liquor question."

Pickett asserted that "the country has so thoroughly adapted itself to conditions existing under prohibition that any change would severely shock the entire structure, lessening both production and consumption, disturbing both finance and commerce."

Cherrington said that after ten years the wets had not formulated any new plan for the control of liquor that would be a substitute for absolute prohibition.

Despite all handicaps and the "venality and corruption of officials which its enemies induce," Dinwiddie said that prohibition had "operated to the great material, moral and social advantage of the American people."

Canon Chase asked for immediate approval by the judiciary committee of measures recommended by the law enforcement commission to strengthen dry law enforcement and the prompt disapproval of measures to repeal the 18th amendment.

He also urged congressional investigation of "corrupt alliances," which he said doubtless existed between bootleggers, racketeers and prominent political leaders of both major parties in the larger cities, particularly New York, Philadelphia and Chicago.

Advocating the treatment of violators of the prohibition law as rebels Crawford said his organization took the view that "the issue is no longer the enforcement of the prohibition law."

The issue, he said, is the maintenance of the constitutional government.

COMMITTEE MAKES FAVORABLE REPORT ON CHILDREN'S HOME

(Special to The Bulletin)

WILLIMANTIC, April 2.—A report of an investigation of conditions at the Windham County Home for Children in Thompson has been made by Alfred P. Abbe, chairman of a committee of the Willimantic Exchange club, and indicates that there is nothing wrong at the home for which any agency is responsible.

The investigation failed to disclose any of the bad conditions that had been represented from other sources, according to the committee, which consisted of Alfred P. Abbe, Samuel Chesbro and John F. Carr. The home was visited three weeks ago and officials of the board were met. The officials not only invited inspection but assisted in giving detailed information.

While the main building is not considered a modern institution, it was found sound of construction. The structure is built of wood and therefore presents a fire hazard. The fire escapes were believed inadequate and not sufficient for the sudden exodus of the 110 children at the home. Dormitory facilities were considered good. The committee was informed that estimates had been received for new fire escapes to conform with modern regulations and that the new equipment would be installed soon.

Chairman Abbe described, in his report, the playroom conditions as being inadequate for the number of children although the inmates appeared contented and faring well under good care. The food is very good and the water supply, which was inadequate during the drought last year, is entirely ample at the present time. A water tower in the rear of the home has a capacity of 3,500 gallons, to which is attached a hose reel for fire protection.

A difficult condition was mentioned as one of the contentions of the home board in that some of the inmates are subjects for the Mansfield Hospital and Training school, which is over-crowded at present. Wherever possible, and after a careful investigation, the children are placed in good private homes.

Although not a serious one, there is an over-crowded condition at the home, the report states. There was no evidence of any harsh treatment of the inmates, whose ages range from 4 to 18 years. Ample medical attention is given.

Some 20 per cent of the inmates are said to come from the town of Windham. The home is located about three miles from Putnam.

Colgan of Pomfret, also a member of the firm, have purchased the holdings of the old Thorndyke company plant, including two mills, storehouses and water privileges. First Lieutenant Edward A. Morrison of Company C, this city, is one of the team of ten men picked by line officers of the regiment to represent the 169th Infantry in the state rifle matches to be held soon.

Trees were reported down along several highways, a number of house blinds were smashed, various signs were blown down and one of the large electric light globes set on a standard in front of the postoffice was sent crashing to the sidewalk.

The huge New York-Boston transport planes that pass over this city regularly were forced by the high wind to an altitude that made them look like tiny specks in the sky today. Many people thrilled at the sight of the giant planes disappearing into fluffy cumulus clouds as they headed into the wind.

COLUMBIA

Miss Eleanor Collins of New York spent the week end with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Hubert Collins.

Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Buell had a narrow escape from losing their house by fire, Saturday forenoon. Mr. Buell had a bonfire on ploughed ground near the house and this was apparently out. Mr. Buell went into the woods with his team and a gust of wind blew a spark from the fire into dried grass near. This quickly spread to the corner of the house, setting on fire the hay with which the house was banked at the foundation. A passer-by discovered the blaze, which was shooting up two sides of the house, and notified Mrs. Buell, who called for help by telephone. In a short time enough men were on the spot to get the blaze under control, after the fire had eaten into the lower clapboards of the house, scorching those above. As the road on which the Buell house stands is a back road and not in very good condition in mud-time, there is very little passing, and the providential passing of the man who discovered the blaze is all that saved the house, as a few minutes more would have been too late. It also illustrates the great blessing that a telephone is in the rural districts. Many fires the past few years have been checked by the ability to get help promptly by telephone.

Columbia grange accepted an invitation to neighbor with Colchester grange Wednesday evening and furnished three members on the program. The program planned for Columbia grange for this week will be carried out at the next meeting, in two weeks.

Mrs. John Howell, wife of the Columbia pastor, was able to be at church Sunday morning for the first time since a recent surgical operation at the Hartford hospital.

Clayton Hunt, Jr., recently found an interesting old coin in the garden back of his house. Upon cleaning, it was found to be an old English half penny dated 1749, with the head of King George 2nd on the other side. The condition of the coin showed it to have been in the earth for a long time.

An auto with a trailer bearing a small speed boat passed through here Saturday afternoon, another proof of coming warmer weather. Since the completion of the new Jonathan Trumbull highway, every car that goes through now is not necessarily going to Columbia Lake, but if this boat was destined for there it is hoped that the owner will find water enough in the lake to float it. The lake has been very low all winter, due to a dry summer and the fact that it has been drawn heavily on, but the past two heavy rains have raised the level several inches, although it is still far below normal, and some of the cottages are a long way from the water line. It is hoped that heavy spring rains will remedy the prevailing conditions before the summer season sets in.

Mr. and Mrs. Lucine Hennequin and two children of Willimantic spent the week end at the home of Mr. Hennequin's parents.

LIBERTY HILL

Mr. and Mrs. Gordon Kinpaird of Hartford visited the former's parents, Mr. and Mrs. John Kinnaird, Friday. Mrs. Kinpaird returned to Hartford with them, coming back to her home here Sunday.

Rev. J. H. Knott's text Sunday morning was Philippians I-21. For to me to live is Christ and to die is gain. Sunday school was omitted to enable the members to attend the funeral of Charles J. Abell, town clerk and treasurer.

Mr. and Mrs. Albert S. Peckham and son, Myron, of South Manchester, former residents of this place, called on Mr. and Mrs. G. B. Dimon and Mr. and Mrs. G. T. Chappell Thursday. Mrs. Peckham's health is somewhat improved.

It Is Folly To Stay Fat

The proof is everywhere. In every circle you can see that excess fat is disappearing fast. Modern science has found a major cause of excess fat in a weakened gland. In late years, physicians the world over have been fighting that cause. They do not rely on starvation.

This modern method is embodied in Marmola prescription tablets. Each box contains the formula, as prepared by famous experts. People have used these tablets for 22 years—millions of boxes of them. Now nearly all have friends who show the results in new beauty, health and vigor.

Go try Marmola. Test the right way to reduce. The results will amaze and delight you. All druggists supply Marmola at $1 a box.

It is with considerable pride that we present to the public of Willimantic and its nearby towns, a modern well equipped Optical Department comparable to the best ones in the large cities.

Better than all this is the fact that we have been able to procure in charge of this department the services of

Dr. W. J. Bergeron, Opt.

He comes to us with the highest recommendations from his former connections most of whom rank among the first in the state.

With more than twenty years of experience in the study and examination of the eye, and its correction, coupled with the fact that he is certified as having passed the State Board examinations in both this State and Massachusetts, should qualify him as capable of diagnosing and correcting the most difficult cases.

The latest instruments, devices and methods will be used and absolute satisfaction is our aim.

All excepting special ground lenses will be stocked by us "uncut" and will be finished in our own shop. This will include the famous "Tillyer" lenses.

April Used Car Rodeo

Business was so brisk in March that we delivered 30 used cars and 18 new Chevrolets. It is necessary to trade at least two used cars for every new one sold. We had 22 used cars on hand March 1st. If you will do a little arithmetic you will readily see how many used cars we had during the entire month to sell. Remember that the 22 cars we had on hand March 1st also brought in 22 more. Still it gave us such a large variety of cars to sell that we had practically anything a man would want in a low priced field.

We know that business is going to be even better in April. We know we are going to sell more new cars in April, in fact we anticipate delivering at least 25 new Chevrolets this month. This means we will get 25 more used cars. Trades on these will amount to 25 additional. April 1, we had 16 used cars left over from March. This means we will get 16 more on this inventory balance. The total used cars we will then have to sell or junk will be 82. We are sure that no one will run short of a used car. If you want one of any vintage, we will have it some time during the month, inasmuch as all the above cars will be in our possession some part of the month of April.

For your convenience, we have made arrangements at the following places and with the men or dealers listed below to show you the used cars we will have to sell. Buy with confidence at any of these places inasmuch as they are under the supervision of our Main Office at 1132 Main Street, Willimantic, Conn. Every customer must get satisfaction even after he makes his purchase.

We are not going to attempt to list any used cars today. Watch for our advs. and they will keep you posted. Come to the different places. You will find what you want. For your convenience we have accurately described all locations and listed telephone numbers.

DANIELSON

HEN BURIED UNDER HAY FOR 8 MONTHS STILL ALIVE

(Special to The Bulletin)

DANIELSON, April 2—Winsted, Middletown, N. Y., and points West, please step aside! East Killingly occupies the rostrum this morning. The little pickerel that crawled inside a toy balloon to hide when he was a baby fish and grew up to find that he had a rubber overcoat on, and no need of scales, which he was without, has nothing at all on a white Wyandotte hen that is now capering around up at Otis Chase's farm—the old Durfee place, so-called—after spending the last eight months buried under tons of hay in the mew of the barn.

East Killingly does no broadcasting unless it has something to say. It steps into the limelight this morning. Last summer when the year's harvest of hay was stored in the barn at the Chase farm this particular hen must have been having an afternoon nap, for, presumably, she was buried under the mounds of it that were stored away.

Be that as it may, on a recent evening while hay was being forked down from the mew for the stock below something was seen to move underneath what now remains of the year's supply. Investigation disclosed the hen, a two year old, weak and emaciated, but still among the living.

How this hen could have lived eight months under such conditions is a matter erudite East Killingly people do not deign to explain, But there was the hen, reduced to a pound and a half in weight, a shrinkage of about 75 per cent from her weight when she was last seen in haying time in the summer of 1929. Taken out and given special care, the hen seems well on the road to full recovery, and was reported as with the flock and chipper today. The assumption is that she subsisted on hayseed during the period that she was buried under the hay. Where she obtained her drinking water, if any, is a matter of conjecture.

Well, Dayville a few years ago, had a hen that attained the age of 34 years. This town is no piker when it comes to hen stories. But it so happens that today's from East Killingly is earnestly alleged to be true beyond all reasonable doubt.

Funeral of Mrs. C. A. Wheeler

At the home on Prospect avenue at 10 o'clock this morning funeral services for Mrs. Clara A. Wheeler were conducted by Rev. Albert Abbott, pastor of the Methodist Episcopal church. The body was taken to East Blackstone, Mass., for burial in the Quaker cemetery, where the committal service was conducted by Rev. Mr. Eastman. Relatives and friends acted as bearers. A. F. Wood was in charge of the arrangements.

OBITUARY

Mrs. Annie L. McQueen

Mrs. Annie Lennen McQueen, 43, died today at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Aldrich, East Killingly, after an illness of about two weeks. Mrs. McQueen was born in New York state December 21, 1886, a daughter of William and Mary Cook Lennen. Mrs. Lennen had been resident hereabouts for several years.

Lake Cottages Burglarized

Here is something approximating an annual story. It was given out this afternoon that it has been discovered that nine summer cottages bordering the shores of Alexander's lake have been broken into and robbed of whatever they contained that attracted the fancy of the marauders. And tonight at the state police barracks on North Main street, Leo Lamoreaux, Victor Novak and Irving Butler, all 16 and all of Ballouville, were being held in default of $1,000 bail each, for appearance in the town court Wednesday to answer to a charge of breaking and entering. Tonight no accurate checkup was available as to the ownership of the cottages, even in official circles. In addition to the breaks at the lake, where raids are made every winter regularly, the boys in custody will be charged with several other breaks—one at the Leader home in Attawaugan, one at the Mary Kartz place in East Killingly and at the Harry Hills place in Pineville.

In the breaks a great variety of things were taken—everything that might be found around a camp or a home. The boys were taken into custody today by State Officer John Murphy.

It is not heartening to report that the building boom of which Danielson heard so much around the first of the year is not materializing as had been hoped. An entire chain of circumstances has brought this situation about, it appears. Nor does it appear likely to be overcome until some time hence.

General conditions throughout the country—bad business—is largely responsible. This has had its psychological effect on numbers who likely would enter into arrangement with the Danielson Building and Loan association, if prospects were brighter than they happen to be, and sign up for a loan for a new home. Now it is a case of waiting and watching until times are better again, and until the old courage and enthusiasm returns. There are those who hope that this may be in the later spring or summer. Danielson really needs at least half a hundred additional homes, that many who work here and live in other nearby communities may be brought into the local fold, to the benefit of Danielson generally, especially in a business way.

So few were in attendance at last evening's monthly meeting of the chamber of commerce that request for action on some matters that were to have been presented were deferred by President W. H. G. Herklots. However, upon the statement of Secretary G. Rene Caron that mills here plan to go on daylight saving time the last of this month, it was decided that the chamber endorse the daylight saving program for Danielson, as for several years past.

Consideration of the matter of changing, in some degree, the time of closing stores on nights where they remain open until after 6 o'clock was postponed until such time as a greater number of business men may be in attendance.

It was reported to the meeting that communications from the chamber have been forwarded to United States Senators Bingham and Walcott urging them to support the measure providing for an appropriation for a postoffice building in Danielson, which measure has had such fine backing from Representative Freeman, who helped its passage through the house of representatives.

FUNERAL

Mrs. Mary Alex

This morning the funeral of Mrs. Mary Alex was held from the home at Wauregan. The services were held at Sacred Heart church in that place at 9 o'clock, Rev. J. A. Demers, M. S., being celebrant of the solemn high mass of requiem and with Rev. J. C. Mathieu of North Grosvenordale, a former pastor, and Rev. J. H. Quinn, the pastor, as deacon and sub-deacon. Many attended the service, including a delegation of the St. Anne society, which also was represented by honorary pall bearers. Burial was in the Sacred Heart cemetery. The bearers were Alfred Basley, Joseph Goyette, Arthur Couture, [illegible] Couture, Paul Peloquin and Harry Crandall. [illegible] E. Kennedy was in charge of the arrangements.

The word goes forth from an official quarter that it is going to be very unprofitable and humiliating for fishermen who try "to beat the game," as it is known some are planning, by fishing two state-leased trout streams in this territory in a single day at the opening of the season and taking an excess of 15 trout in any one day. Both Snake Meadow and Blackwell's brooks, only a few miles apart, are to be under patrol all through the season and every fisherman is to be checked by the patrolmen. They will take the name and license number of every angler they encounter and list the number of fish in his possesion. Comparison of daily records by patrolmen will disclose the names of those who have broken the law by taking more than 15 trout in one day. Arrests are certain for violators, and in addition to such fines and costs as may be imposed upon them they will also lose their fishing licenses for the season.

The state is going to see to it that the few fishermen who would hog the fishing are going to find themselves in difficulties.

On Friday afternoon of this week at the usual time members of the Civic federation are to hold a meeting in the Community room at the Brooklyn Savings bank building.

Dr. K. K. Kinney of Willimantic, a medical officer, attached to the Headquarters detachment, Special Troops, 43d division, stationed here, was a visitor in town today, and while here made social calls on other officers of military units in town.

Among the boxing fans about town a story is being told that may account for the reason why Rene Peloquin, one of Danielson's pet boxers was technically knocked out at Taftville last Friday evening. The story has it that Romeo Dubois of New Haven, who got the decision, outweighed the local boy by 8 pounds.

P. J. Sheridan, owner and manager of Wildwood park, popular summer resort of this town, and Mrs. Sheridan, have returned from a winter's stay in Florida, and again are occupying their home at Alexander's lake.

Numbers of the many friends who knew her during the years she was a resident of Danielson were at St. James' cemetery this morning to attend the burial of Mrs. Maria Hanley O'Brien, wife of John O'Brien, of Woonsocket.

As favored securities have steadily advanced in the market this week there has been more buoyancy of spirit among numbers of Danielson men who were caught in the crash of last fall, and they are now sitting fairly pretty again, though yet to recover all their "paper" profits.

Thursday evening will find hundreds of residents of Danielson attending mid-week Lenten services, previously announced. Next Sunday will be Passion Sunday, followed a week later by Palm Sunday and then Easter Sunday.

The ghost of winter gave a furious, but not wholly impressive, demonstration here about 6 o'clock this morning when a high wind swept a miniature blizzard of snow over the borough for a few minutes. There also was a short, but heavy, downpour of rain, clearing quickly, too, to be followed by a sunny, though disagreeable day, because of the high winds.

Miss Nellie Head, who has been seriously ill at her home on Academy street the past fortnight, was reported today as definitely improved.

EAST WOODSTOCK

The meeting of Woodstock League of Women Voters was held last Wednesday at the home of Mrs. Myrtle Jordan. About 30 attended, including county members. A delicious luncheon was served at 12:15 by members of the East, North and Quinebaug divisions. This was followed by a brief business meeting and radio program broadcast in honor of the tenth anniversary of the league. Mrs. Carsline Chaffee, 90, and Miss Rosamond Danielson, a pioneer worker for suffrage, were guests of honor.

The every-member canvass was held Sunday afternoon by the Missionary committee and assistants. Every home in the parish was visited. At 5 o'clock all met at the home of G. A. May, John Killam, Mrs. J. S. May and Annette May, Mrs. A. E. Dodge, Mrs. Ernest Hibbard, Mrs. Ray Eddy, Franklyn Wetherell, Wendell Bosworth, Rev. and Mrs. Baker were guests at the supper.

Miss Constance Wetherell of Boston spent the week end at her home.

PUTNAM

KING FORCES ANSWER ABOUT STREET LIGHTING

(Special to The Bulletin)

PUTNAM, April 2.—At the monthly meeting of the common council Tuesday evening, Walter N. King, president of the chamber of commerce, asked the question, "On what date will the council consider the matter of new street light fixtures for the business section?" But before a satisfactory reply was given the business man, Mr. King, and Aldermen Chadwick and Dean engaged in an exchange of witticisms which to those outside the rail, seemed to be devoid of humor.

When first addressing the council Mr. King was handed a few of the terse Dean interruptions, which he resented, when he turned to members of the press table and said, "Come on, fellows, let's write them up and tell the public about this."

With this tense situation existent, Acting Mayor Ames rapped for order and allowed City Clerk T. P. Ryan to furnish Mr. King with the desired information concerning the matter of new and much needed street lighting fixtures for the business section. Mr. Ryan stated that the council would consider the problem at the last May meeting and if an affirmative vote was passed, the citizens would be given an opportunity to act on the lighting question at the special city meeting to be held at some date after the last council meeting in May. "Thank you," retorted Mr. King, "That's all I wanted to know."

Street signs, too, were discussed Tuesday evening, but no definite action was taken on the matter of posting the various streets with new name plates. Alderman Migneault, of the highway committee, told of the need of replacing the present weather-worn signs, but reminded the council of the expense which would be incurred. Following considerable controversy on the subject it was voted to have the highway committee investigate costs and secure an estimate of the number of signs needed.

The council ratified the appointment of Dr. Harry W. Sharpe, foreman; Walter A. Wheaton, first assistant; Harry W. Morse, second assistant; Merle Fish, secretary, and W. A. Wheaton, treasurer, of the combination pumper and hose wagon at the central fire station.

Frederick Dumas, dean of Putnam firemen, was re-elected to head the Eagle Hose Co. for another year. Joseph Dumas was elected assistant foreman and Eugene Benoit is secretary. These appointments received the immediate ratification of the council.

The report of the police department showed 20 arrests during the month of March and were for the following causes: Intoxication, 4; breach of peace, 1; violation of state fire laws, 1; fraud, 1; liquor laws, 11; assault, 1; obtaining value under false pretenses, 1. Fines and costs collected amount to $57.84.

The police committee was empowered to purchase a supply of signs to be used to denote the two-hour parking lanes in the city. The signs to be purchased will be durable and inexpensive, Alderman Dean, of the police commission, said. Mr. Dean added that while the new code of traffic ordinances have been ratified, the police will not be instructed to enforce them until the warning boards are placed on the curbings.

In order to relieve the hazardous conditions on Grove street and other streets in the city where elevated rails of the Connecticut company's trolley line, no longer used, are present, the street committee will endeavor to effect temporary repairs by filling in about the tracks with gravel and tar. The tramway concern is agreeable to stand the expense of the undertaking, Eugene Migneault, of the highway committee, told the council.

A. S. Macdonald, secretary of the chamber of commerce, in a statement to the council, said that the organization which he represents realized the grave danger of the presence of the discarded tracks in the street and in an effort to secure their removal, took the matter up with John A. Macdonald, state highway commissioner, who induced the trolley company to agree to the above terms. Following the completion of the reconstruction of the water system, the Connecticut company will be asked to tear out the rails.

Charles A. Thayer, superintendent of the fire alarm system, reported that a quantity of old metal at the central fire headquarters in Union square had been sold for junk, netting the city a return of $40. Mr. Thayer asked permission to expend the money in renovating the firemen's social rooms in the basement of the building, which is known as the "dug-out." "If the rooms were conditioned," Mr. Thayer said, "they would be an inducement for the department members to congregate there at all times, thereby affording the city added protection without expense." Acting Mayor Warren S. Ames, who presided in the absence of Mayor Richard, referred the matter to the fire committee to investigate and report back at the May meeting.

Louis A. Gallovais, Boston, Mass., was in court this morning and was found guilty of a violation of automobile laws. He was fined $2.00 and court costs. Ralph Decatur, of this city, was also before Judge Geissler on a motor vehicle charge and was fined $2.00 and court costs. Both were summoned to appear by State Officer R. V. Scranton of Danielson barracks.

The following building permits have been granted by the common council: To Wheaton Building and Lumber company, for the erection of a one-family house on Mechanics street; to I. K. McNally, for erection of gasoline filling station on School street; to Mrs. Flora Auclair, to build addition to house on Church street, and to Mrs. Beatrice Bertrand, to remodel house at 76 Marshall street.

Two new street lights were erected today on South Main street in the vicinity of the municipal parking area.

The city health authorities recommend the laying of a surface water drain along Arch street to the sewage flow in order to relieve the disagreeable odor which invariably arises when adverse weather conditions exist. The city council is presently considering the matter.

ROTARIANS HEAR TALK ON MODERN COMMUNICATION

(Special to The Bulletin.)

PUTNAM, April 2.—Adelard Noure, manager of the Western Union telegraph offices at New London, was the luncheon speaker at the weekly meeting of the Putnam Rotary club, held at noon today at the Putnam inn. Mr. Noure gave a highly interesting talk on the subject, "Development of Communication from the Hellenism Age to the Present Day." Mr. Noure's talk was one of special interest to the members of Rotary for it was one of business and brought out the dependency of business success upon possibility of instant communication with distant points.

In opening, Mr. Noure impressed upon the Rotarians the debt of gratitude the club owes to the Putnam chamber of commerce for its successful negotiations in bringing about an improved telegraph service for Putnam which is an indirect benefit to northern Windham county at large.

With the advent of the automatic sending and receiving telegraph instruments which were born to the world in the early days of the present century, Mr. Noure, who was then a telegraph operator, said he foresaw the end of the days of the sounder and key. While the clicking instruments were at the peak of efficiency, the human race demanded an improved and more expedient means of instant communication and with these desires of the public ever before them, engineers in the research department of the Western Union began experimenting and after nearly a quarter of a century of incessant struggle they produced the modern Simplex typewriter, a sending and receiving station which is seemingly the height of perfection in the world of communication.

Mr. Noure described the operation of the Simplex machine, his remarks being clarified by the demonstration of two machines which were installed for the talk. Two operators at the keyboard of each machine exchanged words across the room, the messages being transcribed on the endless tape with lightening rapidity.

Preceding his remarks concerning the development of the Simplex typewriter, Mr. Noure related the romantic story of communication methods, beginning with the ancient but nevertheless efficient codes of the Greeks, the smoke signals of the American Indian and winding up with the fruit of the labors of the American pioneers Samuel B. Morse and Alfred Vail—the telegraph. An interesting fact brought out by Mr. Noure was his explanation of the word "telegraph." The word comes from the Greek, "tele" meaning far-off and "graph," being Greek for "write." One other interesting point brought out by Mr. Noure was the disclosure that 48 per cent of all telegrams handled by Western Union are business messages, 46 per cent are social messages and only one per cent of all the business of Western Union is entered in the "two star" column, which messages are harbingers of death, disaster and misfortune. "Telegraph enters into every community of the world," Mr. Noure said, "and aside from business and social worlds, serves many purposes, especially the newspaper, whose existence depends largely upon the ability of telegraph to transmit the news from every corner of the world."

In closing, Mr. Noure praised Samuel B. Morse and his associates for giving the world a system of communication which has served to eliminate and conquer the great barriers of space and time.

A rising vote of thanks was given to Mr. Noure for his splendid talk and a vote of appreciation was accorded his two assistants who so ably demonstrated the use of the Simplex typewriter.

President S. Nickoloff, of the Rotary club, attended luncheon for the first time today since his return from a winter sojourn in Florida, and relieved Alex Gilman, vice president, of the duties of presiding officer. The resignation of Rotarian L. Edwin Hill, formerly of Putnam and now of Danielson, was read with regrets. The following members were nominated for membership on the board of club directors and seven will be elected at the meeting of April 23: S. Nickoloff, Arthur F. Hughes, John Reardon, Alexander Gilman, Rev. U. O. Bellerose, Warren Averill, Leon N. Farrin, M. H. Geissler, Rev. James F. English, Ray C. Bosworth, Arthur E. Smith, Alexander Maitland.

Guests at Wednesday's luncheon were: Henry Dubuc of Danielson, John J. O'Shaughnessey of Southbridge, Adelard A. Noure, Sidney Crine of New London, Carl Donovan, New London; Myles E. Standish of Norwich and N. J. Bulger, Putnam.

Sharp blasts heard at intervals during the day and emanating from the Oak hill section of the city sounded out the activities of men at work on the preliminary stages of the erection of the million-gallon standpipe on Oak hill.

Members of the local division of the state highway department were at work today on the highways in this section clearing away unsightly debris that has collected during the winter months.

Mr. and Mrs. George L. Padgett, of Fremont street, are preparing to remove their household furniture from this city to Webster where they will make their future home.

Mrs. William P. Warren has returned to her home on South Main street, following an operation at the Day Kimball hospital.

Members of the hook and ladder pumper companies at the Central station responded to an alarm for a chimney fire in a tenement in the Farley block on Providence street last evening at 6:12. No loss resulted, fire officials said.

26,000 people were reported to have been in this city Saturday on the opening date of the store of Montgomery Ward & company. The tabulation was made by actual count, a company official said.

Telephone wires in the east side of the city, which, where strung in open wires for a number of years, have been cut into newly strung cables. Line-men have cleared away old wires and removed telephone poles, no longer in use, which has effected a general improvement of the appearance of streets in that section.

There will be a considerably large entry list compiled before the annual eastern Connecticut checker championship tournament opens at this city on Good Friday. W. P. Warren of South Main street, chairman of the committee on arrangement, reports a widespread of interest in the meet.

Rev. Frederick H. Coholan arrived at Promfret from Norwich this morning and assumed the pastorate of Holy Trinity church, succeeding Rev. George J. Donohue, who became pastor of St. Mary's Memorial church in Norwich today.

On April 18, at the Congregational church, a community choir, under the direction of Mrs. E. L. Robinson of Church street, will sing the famous cantata of Sir John Stainer, "The Crucifixion."

Federal prohibition agents from Willimantic have confiscated a Chevrolet coupe, the property of John T. Cudworth of Mary street, Southbridge, which was seized last Thursday evening by local police when found to be transporting a load of booze between Pawtucket and Southbridge.

Capt. A. J. Dubreuil, of the police department, has been notified by the motor vehicle department of the suspension of the operator's license of Robert Brown, of 81 Van Den Noort street.

SPEEDING THE TARIFF

It is quite evident that there is much opposition in the house of representatives to the action that has been taken in the senate on the tariff bill. The first reaction was to let the house give expression to its feelings regarding certain of the schedules before sending the bill to conference. In so doing it was realized that much valuable time was going to be taken up and a greater delay caused in getting final action.

Inasmuch as there has already been too much time wasted in reaching the present stage, it must be regarded as a wise decision that has been reached in the house to change this plan and instead of doing the debating on the various points over which much feeling exists to submit the measure to the conference committee at once.

It is not beyond the bounds of possibility that the conference committee will present a much different bill from that which is placed in its hands. It cannot fail to be aware of the sentiment that exists concerning certain of the schedules and some of the features of the senate bill. Throughout the long discussion it has been indicated that much could be expected from the compromises which the conference committee would reach. It is at least worth finding out what the product of the conference is going to be before proceeding to use up a lot of time that should be devoted to other things.

The fact of the matter is that the tariff bill cannot be disposed of any too soon. The country has lost patience because of the delays that have been indulged in for the purposes of obstruction. It wants to know what the revised tariff is going to be and it cannot find out any too soon. The conference committee faces no easy task, but much dependence must be placed upon it. If the demands of the house can be met in committee so much the better. If the committee can present a bill that will be a better all around measure for the country, it ought not to be delayed. In giving the committee a chance to see what it can do, the house has used good judgment, and if the house wants to voice its sentiments upon certain points it can doubtless find time to do so, even though the bill is in conference.

JAPAN'S ATTITUDE HELPS

The hope is that the London conference will succeed in getting an agreement in which the five nations will participate. That is the object for which it was called and, while progress has been slow and developments have been such as to cast doubt upon the outcome, there is an unwillingness to consider anything else as long as that is among the possibilities.

Some time ago it was intimated that if a five-power treaty could not be concluded that the situation was shaping itself so that there might be a three-power agreement. It must be admitted that a three-power pact would be better than nothing at all, but it has not as yet been definitely determined that the full aim of the conference cannot be attained at this time.

More encouragement is given from the disclosed attitude of Japan concerning the disarmament arrangement to which the United States and Great Britain are favorable. This means that this group of three leading nations can compromise their differences and come to an understanding, while France and Italy are the ones which are holding up the complete success. Through the approval by the Japanese government of the agreement which has been reached between the American and Japanese delegates, definite progress has been made. That this should have its good influence upon the two continental countries is to be expected, although the matters involved in the agreement have no bearing upon those between France and Italy beyond the fact that if two or three are able to compose their differences the good effect of the example ought not to be lost upon the others.

This agreement comes at a time when it is being declared that the gulf between France and Italy is rapidly narrowing. If this can be taken to mean that the prospects of these countries coming to an understanding are bright enough to warrant the feeling that something is actually going to result from their discussions, it is cheerful information. Naturally there is a reluctance on the part of the leaders to plunge very deeply into disarmament or limitation until it is known with some degree of certainty what those who refuse to join are going to do. Encouraged by the others, the time is ripe for France and Italy to clear the way for a five-power pact that will make the London conference a complete success.

FLYING THE OCEAN

Those who fly know what it means to fly so accurately that they will be able to go directly to the point intended. In flying over land they have certain things to guide them, cities, rivers, mountains, occasionally buildings which are marked for that purpose, and certain airport guides, but when it comes to flying over water it is a case of depending upon the navigator.

In the flight to Bermuda from New York, Captain Yancey was obliged to head out over 750 miles of water and fly so straight that he could find the island when he should. He was well aware of the fact that if he got too far to the east, through winds or miscalculations, he would be in a bad predicament. To the west, the danger wouldn't be so great, but when he decided to land, rather than take any chances of getting lost in the dark he disclosed a recognition of the difficulty that is involved in reaching an island destination far at sea. He knew what had been the experience of European fliers who had tried to find the Azores and went beyond their mark and he chose the wiser course of being sure he was right before going any farther. This interrupted the first flight to Bermuda and made it much longer in elapsed time than would otherwise have been the case.

In connection with ocean flying, the idea has been advanced with considerable support that floating airports might be established at intervals across the Atlantic at which fliers in trouble because of engine difficulties or a shortage of gas or oil might stop and get the needed service and then proceed. Further, it has been felt that such a string of stations would be a guide to trans-Atlantic fliers.

The day when any such plan will be carried out is probably in the distant future, but the flight to Bermuda makes it plain that if fliers find it difficult in locating such a spot in the ocean as is occupied by the Bermuda Islands the search for a floating ocean-port, which couldn't be regarded as any more than a speck on the briny, would be much worse. Lights and signals would of course be brought into play to help, but the ocean is a broad expanse of water with water, water everywhere but not much else to be seen.

CONNECTICUT FAIRS

It is a bit early for grange and county fairs, but it is none too early to get the right line of thought developed in regard to them and to make plans that will mean successful results when the fall of the year rolls around.

The larger Connecticut fairs have experienced a decline in the past two decades. They have been growing fewer and fewer until only a few of them are left. They have encountered serious competition through the loss of those who were originally interested in them and their possibilities and through the change in the method of transportation which provides entertainment of many kinds over a much larger area.

At the annual meeting of the Association of Connecticut Fairs it was admitted that fairs must be different. This is unquestionably in keeping with public sentiment and if there is a response to the advice that more industrial exhibits be secured and that premium lists be revised and made more attractive to exhibitors and visitors, aid will be given to making fairs more attractive. More attention is suggested to commercial exhibits of fruit and it is the purpose of the association's committee to set in motion the machinery whereby "the show windows of agriculture, industry and home-making will continue to play an important part in the progress of communities, towns and counties throughout Connecticut."

It is encouraging to note that there is not a disposition to lay down under the changing attitude toward fairs. It is commendable that there is to be an effort to change the fairs to better meet the demands and desires of the public. This may not bring back the big fairs, but it should stimulate more interest in the smaller ones where community interest always plays such an important part. But, for big or little, the effort is worth a trial.

UNLOCKED CARS

Because automobiles are stolen much additional work is placed upon police departments. Many of the cars are recovered but it involves much expense and time and it has long since been realized that it is possible for the owner of the car to place serious obstacles in the way of the theft of machines.

In order to get that cooperation on the part of auto owners there was placed in the automobile law of Massachusetts a section which reads: "No persons having control or charge of a motor vehicle shall allow such vehicle to stand in any way and remain unattended without first locking and making it fast" and provisions are made for fines for those convicted for failure to comply therewith.

Even though this was action that required an auto owner to safeguard his own property against the acts of those who are in the business of stealing motor vehicles, and thus protect him against the annoyance of the loss of his car and such harm as might be done to it and eliminate needless work on the part of the police, there are many who pay no attention to it. They are ready to take a chance in regard to the loss of their machine by theft quite the same as many others are disposed to do in the violation of other requirements of the law concerning driving in the highways.

Under these conditions there probably will, but there should not, be resentment toward the police of Boston who started a drive against those who fail to comply with this requirement. Just why a person should lay himself liable to a penalty for failure to protect his own property beggars understanding, but when he does, knowing the requirements of the law, there can be slight sympathy for him.

EDITORIAL NOTES

With conferences as with nights, it is often darkest just before dawn.

The man on the corner says: There are those who know that trouble doesn't have to be borrowed.

The state treasury of Florida is reporting a surplus of $9,000,000. Now how is California going to answer that?

A Boston judge fined a legless man $150 for driving an auto while under the influence of liquor. A literal case of not having a leg under him.

Once again we are reminded that if a president could veto parts of a tariff bill we might get a revision in accord with the needs of the country.

It will not be possible to deny ourselves those rhubarb pies much longer just to comply with the whims of spring.

DOCTOR'S ORDERS

Mrs. Pettibone was there and Mrs. Teasdale and Mrs. Hagenbeck and Mrs. Doolittle—in fact, it was the largest delegation from her own Poseidon Hills hospital society that Mrs. Furnivell ever had seen attend the semi-monthly meeting of the Civic Doctors' Wives' auxiliary at the New Antwerp hotel.

Mrs. Furnivell, whose husband was secretary of the Poseidon Hills association, was under strict orders to take notes for him at this meeting, so as soon as she was seated she took out her notebook and five sharpened pencils to be ready as soon as the speaking began.

"My husband is so busy today," Mrs. Furnivell murmured to her unknown neighbor in the next chair, "that he asked me to take notes for him. Nice crowd, isn't it?"

"Fine," breathed the lady. "Let me see, you are Mrs.—your face is familiar, but I can't place you—"

"Furnivell," offered Mrs. Furnivell pleasantly. "And you are—I know I've seen you before—"

"Mrs. Genessee. My husband is Dr. Genessee, the bone specialist."

"Of course," said Mrs. Furnivell, "I've heard my husband speak of him. Yes, indeed. Hello, there, Mrs. Teasdale." She turned to welcome four familiar women. "Do come sit with us. Mrs. Teasdale, this is Mrs. Genessee; Mrs. Hagenbeck, Mrs. Genessee; Mrs. Doolittle, Mrs. Genessee—there, that's done, thank goodness." She fanned herself furiously. Just then the first speaker was announced and Mrs. Furnivell lifted her first sharpened pencil.

"I was telling Mrs. Genessee," whispered Mrs. Furnivell as the speaker launched into his dry-as-dust subject, "that I'm under strict doctor's orders today. Oh, no, not as his patient, my dear. As his private secretary, Dr. Furnivell is so busy today—in fact, he's a very busy many anyway, and he asked me to take notes for him. He's secretary of our Poseidon Hills society; re-elected for the fourth time. It certainly keeps him on the jump. I said: 'Dear, whenever I can help you out, just call on me.' But this is the first time he's trusted me. Just like a man, isn't it?

"I do think it's important for a busy man to let his wife be the helpmeet she is so anxious to be. You know what I mean—my dear, isn't that Mrs. Teverbough coming in late? Stunning looking in black, isn't she? I never could wear black. Instead of making me smart, as it does her, it makes me absolutely funeral. That chubby little woman is Mrs. Morgan, isn't it? You'd never dream her husband was the biggest tonsil expert in town, would you, from the way she dresses? And that skinny woman with her is Mrs. Egret, the X-ray specialist's wife.

"I intended going over to Rebel's furniture sale before coming here, but I said to myself, no, the meeting is at 3.30 sharp and I won't be late, especially when so much depends on my being here. My dear, who is that woman next to Dr. Ashmore at the speaker's table? My dear, not Dr. Leonine's wife! Dr. Leonine is such a distinguished looking man—so that's his wife. Well, well. What can she be doing at the speaker's table?

"Who is that woman coming up the aisle? Nice looking, isn't she, but what style in clothes! You know, I often tell my husband I think a doctor's wife should keep herself up. Her clothes are such an indication of her husband's position." By this time the second speaker had finished, and Mrs. Furnivell, suddenly bumped on the elbow, looked up to see her husband standing in the aisle beside her.

"Move over!" almost hissed Dr. Furnivell.

"John! You here!" gasped his astonished wife.

"I saw everything, Marcella," said Dr. Furnivell in a savage whisper. "After you left it suddenly occurred to me I shouldn't have trusted you to take such important notes. You haven't heard a word that was said. I watched you from the back—"

"Haven't heard!" expostulated Mrs. Furnivell. Tears welled in her eyes. "Here are your old notes." Dr. Furnivell snatched the book and hastily scanned his wife's efforts. Then his face lighted.

"By jove," he said, "this is fine! Great! Splendid! The entire report of Dr. Ashmore's speech! I take it all back, Marcella. You women certainly are wonders."—Exchange.

A Washington Bystander

By KIRKE L. SIMPSON
Associated Press Staff Writer

WASHINGTON, April 2 — Some years ago the late John W. Weeks of Massachusetts, then war secretary, was called upon to make a speech.

He was tired of the ternal argument about prepardness for war. He wanted something new to talk about that still had an army angle.

And one thing particularly had impressed him deeply in his cabinet service. He had been amazed to see at first hand the extraordinary scope of non-military duties that fall upon army shoulders.

So Mr. Weeks caused a study to be made, sweeping all army history for its non-military functions and record. Out of that he wove a speech that is still a model for his war department successors.

It was widely printed and reprinted and still bobs up now and then in the wake of army news.

War Mothers

But in all Mr. Weeks learned there was no such strange task for military falk as that upon which it will embark next May. Early in that month there will sail from New York as guests of the government some 300 war mothers whose dead sons still sleep among the battlefields "over there."

And every week thereafter through the summer, and probably through next summer, a similar group will sail, convoyed by army officers, to tour the grass grown American front lines in France, to see for themselves the beauty that has been wrought about the fields of honor where America's dead of the World war keep their last, long vigil beneath the flag.

Uplifting

The propect was not of army initiation. It grew out of the feeling of a gold star mother who went herself to those far away scenes where her boy died. She drew great comfort from it.

There is something uplifting rather than sorrowful about any military cemetery. It seems rather a monument to the glory of patriotic service than a place of weeping.

So this war mother felt it. And she wished that every other woman whose son or dear one still sleeps in France might know the feeling that stirred in her own heart among those long lines of white crosses under French skies.

For estimates of cost, ways and means of carrying out so vast a pilgrimage as the safe and comfortable passage of perhaps 10,000 American women, honored above all others for what the war cost them, over the seas and back, the aid of the army machinery was needed.

And, strangely enough, high army officials who at first dreaded the task imposed upon them now see in it a chance for highest patriotic service. They hope and believe that American womanhood will feel it as a pilgrimage of glory, not of sadness.

YOUR HEALTH

Keeping The Mouth Healthy
By Dr. Richard Clay Leonard, Baltimore.
(From Gorgas Memorial Institute)

Mouth hygiene means the care that keeps the mouth—with special reference to the teeth—in good health. This is accomplished by practicing certain rules of cleanliness, by special attention to the diet, and by the early repair of defects or decay found in the teeth.

To have healthy teeth you must have a healthy start. You have to go back to the diet and health of the mother to insure healthy teeth for the child. In order that it may help in the formation of strong, healthy teeth, the diet of the mother must be rich in lime salts, that is, in tooth or bone forming minerals. The foods that are especially rich in such substances include milk, butter, cheese and other dairy products, oranges and other fruits, tomatoes and green leafy vegetables. Such foods are necessary not only for forming good teeth, but for keeping them in good condition all through life.

Teeth are not always perfectly formed. Often there are slight defects in the structure of a tooth when it comes through the gum. These defects—tiny cracks or crevices in the enamel—offer an easy place for decay—causing berms to start their work. As soon as these tiny imperfections are discovered they should be remedied. A child of three or four years have such defects repaired with little or no trouble, no pain and little expense. Such corrective work will insure the keeping of the first or "baby" teeth until the regular time for "shedding" them. It is of the utmost importance that these baby teeth be looked after with as much care as is given to the second or "permanent" teeth. A young child's mouth should be carefully examined twice a year by a competent dentist.

"Transforming Environment"

SCRIPTURE: Memory Verse: "Passing through the valley of weeping they make it a place of springs" (Psalm 84:6).

Read: Isaiah 35.

MEDITATION: Notice the verb. They "make" it a place of springs. They transform their unhappy environment. Their resourceful spirit finds in it some hidden good. The chapter for today is a picture of the way in which an arid land may be transformed into a fruitful place through the coming of a new and victorious spirit. Oscar Wilde tells us a story of an artist who desired to make a statue to "The Pleasure that Abideth." But there was no bronze in the kingdom except what was in the form of a statue to "The Sorrow that Endureth." So he melted the statue to the Sorrow that Endureth and used the metal for his statue to the Pleasure that Abideth. This is the task of the spiritual artist.

PRAYER: Thou great Creator of men's souls, we thank Thee for the power of the human spirit to triumph over circumstances and to overcome evil. We covet that power for ourselves this day that we may not be easy victims of environment, but may be greater than anything that can happen to us. Amen.

BURGESS BEDTIME STORY

Mrs. Quack Tells Her Troubles

We don't know why this fact should be,
But none from trouble is quite free.
—Mrs. Quack.

Peter Rabbit was delighted. Mr. Quack and Mrs. Quack with six of their friends, had arrived at the Smiling Pool. Just seeing them there gave Peter the feeling that sweet Mistress Spring really was close at hand. Of course, Peter had all sorts of questions that he wanted to ask and he started in asking them. But Mrs. Quack put a stop to this promptly.

"Excuse me, Peter," said she, "but I must ask you to keep your questions until later. You see, we have come a long way and we are tired. Besides, we are hungry. So you'll have to excuse us while we eat and rest a bit."

"I don't see how you're going to get anything to eat here," said Peter. "Farmer Brown's Boy hasn't put any corn out since you were here last year."

"I guess we'll find plenty to eat even if there isn't any corn," said Mrs. Quack. And straightway those eight Ducks began tipping up with their heads under water and Peter knew that they were finding something to eat on the bottom, though what it was he hadn't the least idea.

Having eaten, Mr. and Mrs. Quack and the other Ducks preened their feathers thoroughly and then made themselves comfortable and prepared to rest. Only Mrs. Quack took notice of Peter. She swam over to where he was sitting on the edge of the bank. "It certainly is good to be here," said she.

"It certainly is good to see you back," replied Peter. "Every time you leave to go down to the Sunny South I am afraid I will never see you again. I always fear that those terrible guns will get you."

"They are pretty bad, especially in the fall," replied Mrs. Quack. "Three of the children were killed last fall on our way down. It is a wonder that some of the others were not killed. Of course, Mr. Quack and I have made the journey so many times that we know pretty well how to look out for ourselves. Thank goodness, we don't have to watch out so when we are coming north. The hunters with terrible guns used to be just as bad in the spring as they are in the fall; but it isn't so any longer. That is something to be thankful for. When I think of how it used to be, I sometimes wonder that there is a Duck left."

"I'm glad," said Peter, "that things are so much better than they used to be."

"They are and they are not," replied Mrs. Quack. "It is seldom that we get shot at in the spring, but it is just as bad as ever in the autumn; and it is pretty bad well into the winter sometimes. But it isn't just the hunters with the terrible guns. Goodness, no! They are bad enough, but there are other things that are worse."

"What, for instance?" inquired Peter.

"Well," replied Mrs. Quack, "we haven't nearly as many places to go now as we used to have. A lot of the lakes and the marshes have disappeared. Men have taken the water

"Excuse me, Peter," said she, "but I must ask you to keep your questions until later" away from them. The result is that we Ducks are sometimes dreadfully crowded on the ponds and streams that are left. And then there is the oil."

"Oil!" exclaimed Peter. "What is oil?"

"I can't tell you just what it is, but I can tell you that it is a dreadful thing to get all over your feathers," replied Mrs. Quack.

Peter grinned. "I haven't any feathers," said he. "But, tell me, why is it so dreadful?"

Stories That Recall Others

Company Fare

The children visited the country for several days. While there, their aunt baked biscuits. Billy ate so many that he was asked whether he ever had biscuits at home, to which he replied: "We have biscuits just when we have company."

Charge Account

When Billy came home from Sunday school his mother greeted him apologetically: "Oh, Billy, I'm sorry I forgot to give you your collection money. What did you do?"

Billy was quite nonchalant. "Oh, I just told them to charge it!" was his reply.

A HISTORY OF CONNECTICUT INDUSTRY

Released by Manufacturers Association of Connecticut.

Heminway & Bartlett Silk Company, Watertown.

The Heminway & Bartlett Silk company was organized in 1888 by Buell Heminway, H. H. Bartlett and B. Havens Heminway. All three had formerly been with the original producers of silk thread on spools; namely; M. Heminway & Sons Silk company Mr. Buell Heminway was one of the sons of General Merrit Heminway, the founder of this industry. The business grew rapidly and additions to the factory soon became an annual necessity.

An interesting feature of the success undoubtedly was due to the belief of the officers in the future of the chain store business, which at that time was in its infancy. The firm's selling agents, W. H. Brown & Chichester of New York, finally persuaded the officers to extend credit to one of the original chain stores, which has enjoyed remarkable growth and naturally has been a factor in the success of the Heminway & Bartlett Silk company.

With the introduction of artificial silk (rayon) the company was quick to adapt itself to its uses and at the present time handles large quantities of this material converted for use by the fabric and braiding trade. The firm's products at the present time include spool silk thread of all sizes, pure silk and rayon embroidery threads, knitting silks and special silks for the manufacturing trade.

After 41 years of successful operation the company owns a large modern plant and employs as many as 300, ten of whom have been on the payroll 25 years or more.

The present officers are: B. Havens Heminway, president and treasurer; Howard Chichester, vice president; Buell H. Heminway, Jr., secretary.

Junior: "Mamma, is there anything about the house that you want me to do?"

Mamma (aside): "Well! well! Is Christmas that close?"—Exchange.

BISHOP LEETE OPENS METHODIST ANNUAL CONFERENCE IN NEW LONDON

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, April 2—The 90th annual session of the New England Southern conference was opened formally in the Methodist Episcopal church in New London this morning at 9 o'clock, with holy communion conducted by Bishop Leete assisted by the district superintendents, Rev.'s Myron E. Genter, Edward E. Welles, and Earl E. Story and the pastor of the local church, Rev. Chas. E. Spaulding.

The roll of the conference was called by the secretary, Rev. L. G. Horton. The names of the 150 members and 10 probationers were called and 95 men answered to their names.

In the organization of the conference, the following were named as the chief officials: Secretary, Rev. Lyman G. Horton, Providence; statistician, Rev. Joseph G. Bisbee, Onset, Mass.; treasurer, Rev. Philip A. Ahern, Phenix, R. I.

Dr. Geo. W. Douglass of the Methodist Book Concern presented a check for $2,146 as the share of the conference from the profits of the concern. He also presented a check for $30, the share of this conference from what is known as the chartered fund.

Memorial Service

The memorial service followed. The following have died during the year: Rev.'s Ernest E. G. Wesley, William E. Handy, and Thomas Tyrie; Mrs. Ellen M. Benton, wife of the late Rev. S. O. Benton; Mrs. Laura S. J. Hastings, wife of the late Rev. Geo. H. Hastings; Mrs. Maria E. Johnson, wife of the late Rev. Oscar E. Johnson; and Mrs. Smith, wife of Rev. Charles Smith, present pastor at Uncasville, Conn. Rev. W. I. Ward presided. Prayer was offered by Rev. J. E. Blake, pastor of Plymouth, Mass. Rev. E. J. Curry, pastor of Bourne, Mass., delivered the address based upon I Corinthians 15:49. As we have borne the image of the earthly, we shall also bear the image of the heavenly.

Following the memorial service the conference proceeded in its program and brief addresses were given by Rev. Clarence True Wilson and Dr. L. M. Dunton, for many years in charge of Claflin university, Orangeburg, South Carolina.

Conference Sermon

At 2 p. m. the conference sermon was preached by Rev. W. M. Newton. Rev. Joseph Cooper presided. The Scriptures were read and prayer was offered by Rev. O. W. Bell. Mr. Newton presented a somewhat unique description of recent church history and some of the projects undertaken by the church. He urged that more latitude be given to the individual and that we return to the larger emphasis upon personal Christian experience. In this way we may look for that return of the Spirit and the larger possibilities of a leadership not human but divine.

Methodist Beliefs

At 4 p. m., Rev. N. B. Burton presided and introduced Dean A. C. Knudson as the speaker at the conference institute hour. His address was on the subject, "What Do Methodists Believe?" He spoke of the fact that Methodism has never laid great stress on what men believe. He disclaimed any desire to emphasize differences in denominational beliefs in this day when so much is said of Christian unity. Yet he urged that we cannot go so far as to allow that belief is of no importance and it is important that the other churches understand each other. He urged that Methodists have held to at least four fundamental beliefs which he named as follows:

The primacy of religious experience; the reality of a transformed life; the freedom of the will; a clean cut belief in a personal God.

Evening Lenten Service

The Lenten service in the evening called an audience which nearly filled the auditorium. A vested choir of 40 girls led a very impressive processional. Seated on the pulpit platform were Bishop Frederick D. Leete and the pastors of several of the New London churches.

The choir sang impressively two selections.

Bishop Leete's sermon was based upon the words of John 17:18, "As thou hast sent me into the world, even so have I sent these into the world." The sermon closed with an earnest appeal to the Christian churches of New London to supplement the work of these Christian pastors and speak the personal word to those who need to find Christ as their personal saviour.

SAVED FROM DEATH AFTER DRINKING IODINE

(Special to The Bulletin)

MOOSUP, April 2.— Boleslaw Krajewski, 20, of this village, tried to commit suicide here about mid-night Tuesday evening by drinking a quantity of iodine. His rash act is reported to have been motivated by the fact that he had had trouble with his girl friend, a resident of Moosup. He himself made this statement at the time he was attended by Dr. Alphonse Garcia, shortly after the attempted suicide. He said that he wanted to die. He will recover.

Shortly before 12 o'clock last night Krajewski, who is boarding with Mr. and Mrs. Bodo, who live near the depot, procured a bottle of iodine and imbibed a large amount of it. He was later found in bed in his room by Arthur Bodo, son of Mr. and Mrs. Bodo, frothing at the mouth. Mr. Bodo immediately notified Dr. Garcia, who responded.

At the Bodo home Dr. Garcia endeavored to give Krajewski an antidote in order to remove the poison, but he was unable to do so. Krajewski refused to obey the doctor's order, keeping his teeth tightly shut together. As a result Dr. Garcia applied an injection to his arm and soon had the would-be suicide vomiting. He was not removed to a hospital, remaining at his home.

Seen by a Bulletin reporter this evening Krajewski was in a different frame of mind. He claimed that he had been suffering with a cold, got up in the night for some cough syrup and accidentally drank a quantity of iodine, having secured the wrong bottle. He did add that he had had a number of spats with a Moosup girl, to whom he had been paying attention.

Krajewski is employed at the Aldrich Bros. mill here.

SPECIAL ADDRESS TO SUNDAY SCHOOL TEACHERS

One of the very interesting features of this week's special services being held at the Central Baptist church by the local Y. M. C. A., and the churches of Norwich, occurred Monday evening when the teachers and officers of the Norwich Sunday schools were supper guests of the Y. M. C. A., at the Central church. A delicious supper was served by Mrs. Henrietta Tefft and her very efficient domestic committee. Following the supper there was a splendid talk by Rev. Charles N. Arbuckle, D. D., of Newton Center, Mass. In his talk Rev. Dr. Arbuckle showed the changed emphasis of religious education in the last generation and the resulting enlargement of its scope.

FORTY PATROL LEADERS HOLD TRAINING MEETING

Forty patrol leaders representing every troop in Norwich met Wednesday night at the Thayer building for a second session of the patrol leaders course. Three patrols completed making their patrol animals and during the next three days the patrol "artist" will paint the animal. Scoutmaster A. L. Peale led a discussion on "Patrol Spirit," stressing the factors which make for morale within a troop meeting. Many questions were put to the leaders on the reading assigned in the patrol leaders handbook. Outlines of the Jamboree rally were then handed out and a discussion of the events ensued. The Flying Eagle patrol was chosen to lay an arrow trail which was quickly followed by the remaining three patrols and which led to the armory. Here the Scouts practiced the dressing race event and other games including mount tag and frog fight. A fruit grab closed the meeting with every Scout getting an apple, orange or banana.

According to Scoutmaster Walter Weidman who had charge of this session, the patrol leaders plan to take a hike this Saturday, leaving Scout headquarters at 9 o'clock. Each Scout will bring the best hike cooking dinner he can originate, and special dishes will be cooked by patrols.

The next meeting of the training course will be held Wednesday in the armory at 7:30 p. m., and will open with a thorough patrol inspection in preparation for the rally inspection. A special patrol award will be made the patrol winning this inspection. Each Scout leader will also bring some "rare" fruit wrapped up in paper for the fruit feed for the evening.

WILL APPLY COLLECTION TOWARDS CHINA RELIEF

The collection this (Thursday) evening at the Y. M. C. A.-Norwich church series of sermons at the Central Baptist church will be for China, it was announced during the service Wednesday evening. It was stated by President Herbert B. Cary of the Y. M. C. A., that the collection taken Sunday night was over $60, and it is hoped that tonight's collection will bring the total for China to over $100. The collection Wednesday evening was for the vacation Bible school.

Wednesday evening Rev. Charles N. Arbuckle, D. D., of Newton Center, Mass., who is the preacher at the series of meetings, spoke on the topic Personality. Rev. Dr. Arbuckle said that a person in preparing a statement of his assets would no doubt list his real estate, cash on hand, stocks and bonds, but that he would probably overlook his chief asset, personality.

What are the elements that make up personality? he asked. The first element is self-consciousness. Along with self-consciousness is recognition of others. If we cannot recognize others we cannot recognize ourselves, and if we cannot recognize ourselves, it makes little difference if there is immortality or not.

Memory is the cement that holds personality together. Dissolve memory and you are gone, personality is gone. The fourth attribute of personality is moral judgment. Everything changes but your personal identity. There is no limit to what you can do to beautify your soul.

BROUGHT JUNIOR HIGH SCHOOL BEFORE ROTARY

Two members of the town school system, Walter F. Lester, chairman of the board, and Superintendent E. J. Graham, with President Shepard B. Palmer, of the Norwich Free Academy trustees, were the speakers before the Rotary club meeting Wednesday noon at the Wauregan hotel. They gave informal talks upon the junior high school plan, which the school board recommends to cure the crowded conditions in the grammar schools and the Academy.

School Board Chairman Speaks.

Opening the subject, Mr. Lester spoke as follows:

Consolidation of the previous seperate school districts in Norwich into one organization was effected in 1912. At that time the newly created town school board found as a part of its physical equipment some 22 school buildings, good, bad and indifferent. As bad and indifferent were all the wooden buildings—and some of the brick buildings, which had been in existence so long as to poorly meet the requirements of modern education. The last buildings to have been built, the so-called Broad street and Laurel Hill schools, were the newest, but even those were a matter of 25 years old, having been built, not far apart in time along in the late 80s.

Even 18 years ago the board realized the necessity for more (different) equipment, but it of needs took some time to get a comprehensive study of the situation and to guage the requirements adequately, and for that reason during the first ten years after consolidation no change or addition was made in the plant. Eight or nine years ago, however, it became alarmingly apparent that some remedy to the congested conditions in the west section of the town was demanded, and the Elizabeth Street school was erected. It was then expected that only a part of the new building would have to be occupied at first, and that the older frame building known as the Mt. Pleasant Street school could be abandoned. How this has worked out is shown by the fact that today not only is there no room in Elizabeth for some expansion sadly needed—all rooms having been fully occupied for years past,—but the Mt. Pleasant building is still full.

A similar crying need for greater facility developed a little later, and the Bishop school was erected on the Preston side. It was at about that time that the town school board came to a realization that it would be failing to do its duty if it should not make a careful survey of the conditions and lay out a building program to be adhered to as early as possible as the years went by. This was done, and it was then difficult to decide which of the units should next be promoted; relief for the Norwich Town section, or for Greeneville. It was concluded that though there was nearly as much congestion in one place as the other, the Norwich Town condition was the worse, for not only were we crowded there, but the conditions were most unsanitary. With the erection of the Samuel Huntington school three of the units were taken care of. Naturally the remaining main units, two in number, i. e.: Greeneville and the Central section now must have attention.

That was the situation in 1923, and undoubtedly before this time the townspeople would have had their attention called to it for some new grammar school development, had it not been the fact that a new phase was interjected into the matter early last year by the facts existing at the Norwich Free Academy, and the public statement by the Academy that by the fall of 1931 some new conditions would have to exist at their plant. Simultaneously announcement was made by the Academy management that it would be ready to cooperate in the institution of a junior high school system here if desired. This meant much to them, for their course had always been based upon a four-year term and it was uprooting some cherished traditions to make a radical change. However, by the relinquishment of the first year of their course, and the consequent reduction of number of students, their congestion would be relieved for some time to come.

This new phase naturally brought your school board to look upon the whole matter differently, and with the possibility for transition to a junior high school plan, put the responsibility upon them to determine whether the board can honestly say that it has given the subject the most earnest thought. Investigations and surveys have been made, and an unqualified and unanimous recommendation made to the effect that the so-called 6-3-3 or junior high school system be adopted in Norwich. This, as of course is well-known, means six grades in the grammar school; three grades (corresponding to our present seventh and eighth grades, plus the first year of the Academy) in the junior high school; and the final three years in the senior high school—here the Norwich Free Academy. It is with a full realization of the board's responsibility to its constituency that such a recommendation is made; it is most certainly a critical moment in the educational system of the town.

The needs of the wonderful private high school with which a kind Providence has endowed Norwich you have heard. We must not forget the deep debt of the town to this institution. It has furnished us for years with high school education at a continual loss to itself—and is ready to continue. We must prize at its full value the ready cooperation of such a private institution with our public system. Probably no similar seat of learning the country over can boast of its equipment. In fact, facilities as are offered in the Slater building and its contents alone, are seldom found outside of the college or university.

From the practical standpoint the introduction of the junior high system here will mean immediate relief of our congestion. I do not wish to take any words from Mr. Graham's mouth, and he will shown wherein the erection of the necessary two junior high school buildings will accomplish that. Buildings, either of the grammar or junior high school type must be built. If congestion can be relieved all around, both at the Academy and in the grammar grades, by the junior high school construction, and at the same time the most modern educational system be afforded the students in the town of Norwich, we believe that it is accomplishing not only a very good piece of business but is placing our town in the van along the line of municipal progress.

Supt. Graham Explains.

Superintendent Graham explained that four courses will be offered to the pupil in the junior high school, viz: the college preparatory, commercial, manual arts and domestic arts. An effort is made to place each pupil in the course best suited to his ability, his mental intelligence is intelligently appraised. While the junior high school plan is comparatively new, it has been adopted in many cities in the United States and 12 Connecticut cities were in the number.

Conditions At Academy.

Mr. Palmer was the last to speak, stating that pupil enrollment at the Academy had increased even more than was anticipated and said that it was probable Slater hall would have to be used in some way this fall for the accommodation of pupils. He said that 800 of the 1,000 pupils come from the town of Norwich, the others coming from surrounding towns. The charge made for pupils from the town of Norwich is $100, but is $150 for other pupils, and the actual cost of operation is a trifle over $150 per capita, exclusive of the charge for upkeep of buildings.

Rotary Directors Elected.

At the business session, at which President Frank R. Murdy presided, the board of directors for this year were elected as follows: Dr. R. R. Agnew, Dr. H. B. Campbell, Emery H. Davis, Harold D. Larabee, Frank R. Murdy, Benjamin H. Palmer, Jr., Charles A. Saxton and Albert M. Van Wagenen.

THE JAMESTOWN SETTLEMENT

The homes of the Jamestown settlement were built in small groups so that greater protection might be had from the Indians. These were called stockades. High wooden walls were placed around the entire group. Around the inside of these walls ran a platform from which all combat was carried on.

GOSLIN SIGNS FOR $10,000 A YEAR AND BONUS

CHATTANOOGA, Tenn., April 2.—(AP)—After two months of long distance debate over terms, "Goose" Goslin, outfielder, today signed his 1930 contract with Clark Griffith, president of the Washington Nationals.

Goslin said he had "signed a contract at Mr. Griffith's terms."

"I will get myself into condition at my own expense," he added.

The terms offered Goslin were a $10,000 straight salary and a bonus scale which would make it possible for him to draw all of the $16,000 which he received last year.

Eddie Mack also said that he has persuaded Dick "Honeyboy" Finnegan, clever Boston lightweight who retired ten months ago, to return to the ring on that date against the best available opponent.

Braves Have Stiff Practice

MACON, Ga., April 2.—(AP)—The Boston Braves, who open a two-game series with Brooklyn here, tomorrow, were given another hard workout today by Manager Bill McKechnie.

Several of the tribesmen, including Rabbitt Maranville, Hank Gowdy and Manager McKechnie, found time for a trip to Haddock, a short distance away, to pay their respects to Mrs. George Stallings, widow of the "Miracle Man," who piloted the Boston Braves to a world's championship back in 1914.

STRENGTH OF ACADEMY CAN BE DETERMINED SAT.

Somewhat of a comparison between the strength of the Academy nine against the Industrial league should be gained by Saturday's opening game between the Wildcats and the Richmond Radiator outfit.

The Richmonds have, over the three years that the Dusty loop has been running, established as good a record as any team. They won the first championship, in 1927, finished in a tie with the Y. M. C. A. for second place in 1928 when the United States Finishers were victorious and last year were in fourth position when the Smoke Shop finished on top. However, it was a poor start in the 1929 scramble that dragged them down for from mid-July on they played as good baseball as any team in the league.

Last year, fans were given a slight comparison of the merits of the two institutions and the schoolboys came out on top, beating both the Thermos Bottlers and the Richmonds. However, it must be said that these teams were not at full strength each time leaving Saturday's game as the first real battle with both teams at their peak of strength.

The 1930 season in a way, is going to be one of revenge for the Academy baseball team. At least, in two of the games will the memories of 1929 defeats haunt the boys.

The Harding and Naugatuck games are the ones in question. Last year these teams handed the Wildcats two of their three defeats, Holy Cross Frosh administering the other.

Harding broke a string of 16 straight victories for the Red and White by winning, 14 to 3, on Memorial day while a week later in the closing game of the year Naugatuck bunted out a 4 to 2 victory on Butsy Weisgraber in a four-run seventh inning rally. Both teams are there to shoot at this year and these games promise to be two of the most interesting of the year.

In at least two of the major games at the campus will there be a battle of bands this season. The Academy's new band will be matched by Bulkeley's and also in all probability by Harding's new band from Bridgeport.

Bert Lucas has a dollar on the Richmonds Saturday.

Most of the schools in this section have now started with their practice sessions. The Academy opens first but others will follow within a week or ten days.

Stafford Springs high, according to reports, will be one of the strongest nines in the Connecticut valley this season. Stafford confines its activities mainly in Massachusetts.

West Hartford high, which gave the Academy a tight battle last year expects to have a tough fight to retain its Central Conn. league honors this season.

CAROLINA HIGH HAS TWINS FOR PITCHERS

KINGS MOUNTAIN, N. C., April 2—(AP)—When the local high school nine changes pitchers, opposing batters rub their eyes and wonder what's in the water bucket besides water.

Gordon and Bill, twin brothers, do the hurling. Gordon is a regulation right hander; his brother flings from the port side.

Bill started against Lowell high school yesterday. In three and two-thirds innings he struck out nine Lowellites. Then Gordon stepped out. The visitors wondered what kind of April Fool's joke this might be.

Attention Rosedale Juniors

The Rangers would like very much to have a game with you, but due to the fact that many of our players work Saturdays it would be impossible to play. However, we will play you on the following day, Sunday.

If challenge is accepted call 729 between the hours of 7 and 9 o'clock.

And speaking of April Fools day, there were quite a number of fast ones perpetrated upon the unsuspecting.

Up in Putnam, George, who drives a taxi, had an expensive one put over on him. George claims it was the first time but those who know George suspect that it it not so.

It seems that on April first, George, was waiting for business at the old stand. A well dressed stranger approached him and asked if he could get George to take him to Providence.

As it is George's business to take people to various places upon request, he complied with alacrity. The man asked how much the charge would be and George told him that $8 would cover it. This was Okay with the stranger.

It was a delightful ride down, George thoroughly enjoying it, as the stranger proved an entertaining companion. They talked on this and that with the frankness of brothers.

Arriving at Providence the stranger directed George to drive into an alley in back of one of the hotels, saying that he had to make a stop at the hotel for just a minute. He even told George that he could drive out through the alley and save turning around.

George did as directed. The stranger got out and walked leisurely into the hotel. George waited, his motor running. The minutes dragged by and finally George became very anxious. In fact he became so anxious that he went on a tour of investigation.

George's investigation revealed that the hotel had several exits, one leading directly to a taxi stand on the opposite side from where George's car was parked. The stranger was nowhere to be seen.

George returned to the car and came back to Putnam charging the ride up to an April Fool joke. Anyway, George says he had a real pleasant ride even if there wasn't much money in it. From now on it's cash in advance with George.

The meanest April Fool joke we heard was pulled by some person in the eastern part of the state. About 2:30 in the morning of April 1st a telephone call was received at the Groton police barracks. The call said that there had been a fatal accident on the New Haven-New London road out Niantic way and officers were wanted immediately.

Several officers were despatched to investigate with the result that they found that it was an April Fool joke. Seems like that was carrying it a little too far. The officers had no choice in the matter, they had to go joke or no joke.

But another one that happened the same morning had a laughable side to it. A certain man in our town who works nights went home about 3 o'clock. Finding the screen door to his home locked and no way of getting in he went to his wife's bedroom window to wake her.

After several minutes he aroused her and told her that the screen door was hooked on the inside and he could not get in. She said "All right", and the man went back to the door. Several minutes passed. Then more minutes slipped away. And it was cold standing out in the wind.

Finally the man went back to the window. "Say, he shouted, aren't you going to let me in?" "Ha ha," says friend wife, "You can't fool me. I'm not going to get out of bed to let you in. This is April Fool's day."

Finally the shivering man convinced his wife that it was no April Fool joke and furthermore that it was no joke to stand out there in the cold.

LOCAL SPORTS ENTHUSIAST PICKS 10-YEAR ACADEMY ALL STAR TEAM

The opening of another decade in Academy baseball presents a good excuse for an all-team on players who have played the last ten years.

This includes the prosperous years of '20 and '21, though the dark years up to 1925 and in the brilliant seasons since then.

Here are the teams:

First	Second
Goldblatt, c	Fontaine, c
Jarvis, p	Weisgraber, p
Hitchon, p	Segal, p
Arico, 1b	Burke, 1b
Paradis, 2b	Cimikoski, 2b
Whitney, 3b	Yerrington, 3b
Tombari, ss	Gibbs, ss
Greene, lf	Hinrichs, lf
LaCroix, cf	Young, cf
Cummings, rf	Mish, rf

How would you like to sit in at a game between these two teams or between one of these nines and the best any other high school of the Academy's size could offer? Either team named above should do as they are quite evenly matched.

There have been few better catchers in high school ball than Mace Goldblatt, who is now on the varsity squad at William and Mary college, in his sophomore year. Mace, while not a deadly hitter, was a dangerous man in the pinch but his greatest virtue was his heady play, his ability to handle two such pitchers as Lloyd Jarvis and Johnny Greene were. Not far behind Mace is Bud Fontaine, the present catcher. Bud is a better hitter than Goldblatt ever was or will be and only lacks the experience that he should get during this coming campaign.

Lloyd Jarvis would top all the hurlers with Howard Hitchon, star of the 1921 league champs, another very good one. Eli Segal, who always pitched with a bum team behind him and Butsy Weisgraber, last year's star and with the team again this year, are the second team hurlers.

Alec Arico, of the present team, he being only an upper middler; Joe Paradis, captain of the 1921 team; Court Whitney, present football coach and Pheno Tombari, varsity shortstop at Conn. Aggies, where he is in his senior year, form an infield that need take back seat for none of them. The second team's inner cordon, Burke, Cimikoski, Yerrington and Gibbs, the latter the 1930 captain, is another sweet looking quartet.

We have an outfield of .400 hitters to present, showing Johnny Greene in left, Buck LaCroix in center, and Hal Cummings in right, and they are also some pumpkins on the fielding end. The other fly-chasing trio is again a unit not far behind the first stringers, for there we have Jack Hinrichs, of 1925; Johnny Young, of 1920, and Al Mish, of 1927, another group of sluggers.

Looking over the list again, we find four of the present team listed in the two lineups and that five of the first team, Jarvis, Arico, Greene, LaCroix and Cummings, have played on one of the two state championship arrays within the last three years.

ANNOUNCEMENTS

OPTOMETRY EXPERT AT WOLMER'S, WILLIMANTIC

Probably the most complete and in many respects the most expert optometry service available in eastern Connecticut will be found in the new optical department recently initiated by Ralph U. Wolmer, prominent jeweler-optician at Willimantic. Mr. Wolmer, who is successor to the well known jewelry firm of Tracy and Wolmer, has been unsparing in giving to the public the very best service and equipment in the optical field.

The department is in charge of Dr. W. J. Bergeron who was secured upon the highest recommendations from former connections, most of which rank foremost in the state. Dr. Bergeron, who speaks French and English, has had more than 20 years of experience in the study and examination of the eye and its correction. He is certified as having passed the state board examinations in both Connecticut and Massachusetts and his qualification in diagnosing and correcting even the most difficult cases is widely recognized.

Dr. Bergeron has at his command the most modern instruments, devices and methods approved for optical work. A complete stock, including all excepting special ground lenses, is carried in the uncut state. This stock and the famous Tillyer lenses is finished in the shop.

As a further service and convenience Mr. Wolmer offers to patrons of the optical department the same dignified "budget plan" which has proven so widely popular in the purchase of jewelry. An invitation is extended to all to visit the new department and become acquainted with present-day methods of correcting eye trouble.

"LOVE LIKE OURS CAN NEVER DIE," MUTTERED MARMADUKE, THICKLY.

"You'd be surprised," replied the sprightly Sophia. "With a rasping voice like yours, love is likely to fly out of the window and land on the back of its neck. What our love needs is insurance."

"What insurance?" he wondered.

"The insurance of OLD GOLDS, boy friend. Throat-ease and tender tones caused by the mellow, mild, heart-leaf tobacco; vocal cords that act without a struggle; no tickle, scratch or scrape. OLD GOLD yourself, Marmie, and we shall be inseparable. There's not a bark in a billion."

EIGHT ENUMERATORS START WORK ON CENSUS

Taking the 1930 federal census started Wednesday in Westerly, when eight qualified enumerators began their task. If they are given proper co-operation by the residents of the town their job should be completed by May 1.

T. Frederick Harry of Newport, supervisor of the work in Washington, Newport and Bristol counties, was here Tuesday and Wednesday to help the local enumerators get a good start. At a conference held Tuesday afternoon in the Toscano building on Canal street he issued final instructions to the workers.

VISITING NURSE ASS'N COMPLETES 20 USEFUL YEARS

Westerly Visiting Nurse association held its annual meeting Tuesday evening. The meeting was held in the library building. The retiring president was Mrs. Clifford W. Campbell. The meeting marks the close of 20 years of activity, the association having been incorporated in 1909 and organized under its certificate of incorporation in 1910. Reports of the visiting nurse, Miss Wilhelmina Koslschke, and officers of the association were presented. The address of the evening was by Miss Helen M. Blaisdell, superintendent of The Westerly hospital.

"A total of 2495 calls having been made this year," Mrs. Frank A. Sullivan, secretary of the association, states in her annual report, "it would appear that the association is caring for many needs and doing much helpful work in the community."

Threatening Fire

About 4:30 p. m. Wednesday the Westerly fire alarm whistle was sounded from Box No. 65, Tower street near Vose Pond, for a brush and grass fire which started near the location of the new Westerly Junior high school building in process of erection. The high wind fanned the flames from which clouds of dense smoke arose. All the fire apparatus of the Westerly fire department responded and the equipment and firemen were used to advantage in preventing loss of property from the fast spreading flames. The flames were driven toward Tower street by the wind and seriously threatened for a time the recently built house of Ralph Fuscaldo. Piles of lumber stacked near the house caught fire and burned in spite of the efforts of the firemen. The flames were finally put out before other homes in the section were placed in jeopardy.

Great interest was shown in the annual meeting of Mystic Fire district, held in Odd Fellows' hall, Monday evening. Whereas there have generally been about 12 to 25 voters present at these meetings, there were over 200 Monday evening. Contrary to expectations, all three resolutions were tabled. It was thought that the first two, namely, that of the Fire district caring for the World War Memorial and extending the Fire district around Ocean avenue, etc., would be accepted by the district. It was brought out that if at any time the War Memorial should need money laid out on it, it would be necessary to amend the charter; in regard to extending the district to Ocean avenue, it was left to the executive committee to decide what territory to include within the proposed boundaries and take the necessary steps to have the district extended. As to the collecting of garbage by the district, this was laid on the table also. Reports of the various officers showed, that the cost of operating the Mystic Fire district for the past year was $19,665.62. An inventory of district property showed, B. F. Hoxie Engine company, equipment, $7000, Hook and Ladder company $7,000, 2300 feet hose, $1600, Chemical truck $3500, and four extinguishers and equipment $200, making a total of $19,200. Before this report was accepted, P. H. Morgan presented a resolution "That the report be accepted but in so doing the schedule of salaries paid to the officers of this fire district be and are hereby revised as follows: 'Each member of the fire district committee and the chief of the department shall receive annually the sum of $25, the clerk of the district, $75, and the treasurer $25, for their services, and all previous votes of this district be and are hereby repealed. Mr. Morgan said that in his opinion the salaries were out of proportion to the work performed. This resolution was voted. Later, B. H. Hewitt offered a motion that the resolution be re-considered in-so-far that the chief's salary be $50, instead of $25. This motion was carried. After this meeting had adjourned, a caucus was called with John Fribance moderator, and the following district officers were named: Executive committee, John Fribance, Conrad Kretzer and William L. Main; clerk, Albert Denison; assessors, James Cooper, John Grinnell and C. H. Blivven; treasurer, John B. Grinnell; board of relief, George D. WOMAN TO ADVISE HAGUE EXPERTS ON INTERNATIONAL LAW

WASHINGTON, April 2—(AP)—A soft-voiced, small woman will act as technical adviser to four distinguished men, experts in international affairs.

She is Dr. Emma Wold, widely-known authority on international law, appointed by President Hoover to accompany the United States delegation to the international conference on codification of law at the Hague.

One of the big questions to come before the conference is the nationality laws for women. Dr. Wold is recognized as an authority in that field, not only here but abroad.

Her pamphlet entitled "The Effect of Marriage on Nationality" has been printed as a public document by the committee on immigration and naturalization of the house of representatives.

Dr. Wold was born in South Dakota and brought up on an Indian mission.

Every time a man tears a leaf off the calendar he realizes that his days are numbered.

POETRY

The Bookshelf

I think it must have been a score of years
Since any in that house had bought a book,
Or read one. Neatly on the shelf were ranged
The volumes that some daughter of the house
Had left behind her, when she went to wed
Some husband, or the tomb. And curiously
I read the titles, with a sickening sense
Of Time and Fashion, grim destroyers, dealing
So cavalierly with these worthy books.
"Quo Vadis," and "The Prince of India"
Stood there besides "The Houseboat on the Styx";
And many a masterpiece by Opie Read
Vied for a place with others by Ralph Connor.
And here was "Richard Carvel," thumbed and worn,
And "Thelma," and "The Bonnie Brier Bush,"
And "In the Bishop's Carriage," and a lot
Of sweetly bound ones by one Myrtle Reed;
And Hall Caine's six best sellers, from "The Manxman"
Down to "The Christian." There were classics, too—
"Sartor Resartus," "Ethics of the Dust,"
And Drummond's "Natural Law in the Spiritual World."
(But these were bound in white, and not much read—
I think that they were graduation gifts.)
But oh, but oh, "The House of a Thousand Candles,"
And "David Harum!" Oh, the cruel years.

—Ted Robinson, in Cleveland Plain Dealer.

The Islander

I never climb a high hill
Or gaze across the lea,
But, oh, beyond the two of them,
Beyond the height and blue of them,
I'm looking for the sea.

A blue sea—a crooning sea—
A gray sea lashed with foam—
But, oh, to take the drift of it,
To know the surge and lift of it,
And 'tis I am longing for it as the homeless long for home.

I never dream at night-time
Or close my eyes by day,
But there I have the might of it,
The wind-whipped, sun-drenched sight of it,
That calls my soul away.

Oh, deep dreams and happy dreams,
It's dreaming still I'd be,
For still the land I'm waking in,
'Tis that my heart is breaking in,
And 'tis far where I'd be sleeping with the blue waves over me.

—By Theodosia Garrison.

HEAVY PROFIT-TAKING IN UTILITY SHARES FEATURE OF STOCK MARKET

NEW YORK, April 2.—(AP)— After and almost uninterrupted rise sustained for more than a fortnight, the stock market turned emphatically reactionary late in today's session. Selling was in huge volume, and the most of the more active stocks closed 1 to 3 points lower. Total sales aggregated 5,312,660 shares, only about 80,000 below yesterday's record 1930 turnover.

Profit-taking in the recently buoyant utility shares was particularly heavy. The price index of 20 representative issues from this group dropped nearly 5 1-2 points. The composite index for 90 leading stocks lost more than 2 points. A wider decline has not been experienced since February 20.

With increasing public participation in the market, professional traders have been growing cautious during the past few days, fearing that the speculative structure was becoming top-heavy. Although there has been a tendency to disregard rising brokers' loans of late, Wall street estimates that the weekly figures to be published late tomorrow will show an unusually large upturn, and many traders hurried to take their profits on the recent rise before these figures appear.

The stock exchange's monthly compilation of total member borrowings as of March 31, published after the close of the market today, showed an increase of nearly $189,000,000. The weekly federal reserve brokers' loan figures for the period from February 26 to March 26 showed a gain of only $331,000,000. The monthly compilation, indicates clearly that the closing days of the month saw a sharp rise in loans, and as it includes more sources it also suggests that last week's reserve figures, showing a decrease of $21,000,000 may have been somewhat deceptive.

An increase of $130,000,000 in reserve member bank loans on securities during the same week also tended to belie the favorable brokers' loan figures of last week.

The weekly steel trade reviews confirmed reports of an increase of about 3 per cent in steel activity this week, but were none too cheerful. Iron Age said, "No sharp rebound in activity is looked for; on the contrary, some producers, doubtless influenced in their views by the hand-to-mouth character of buying and the persistence of price unsettlement, believe that the industry will do well to hold its recent gains." Car loadings figures for the week ended March 22 showed a slight reduction from the previous week, and again were the lowest for the period in recent years. Loadings of miscellaneous freight, regarded as a good index of trade conditions, showed a slight gain over the previous week, but smaller than the seasonal trend would indicate.

Eastman Kodak closed about 9 points lower, and American Telephone, U. S. Steel, Public Service of N. J., Columbian Carbon and J. I. Case each lost about 4. Shares losing 2 to more than 3 included American Can, American Power and Light, American Tobacco, American Water Works, Atlantic Refining, A. M. Byers, Consolidated Gas, Du Pont, Gillette, Goodyear, Liggett and Myers, New York Central, Missouri Pacific, Standard Gas, and Standard Oil of Kansas. Leading coppers were strong spots in the early trading, selling up a point or two, reflecting predictions of increasing consumption. Anaconda and American Smelting touched new 1930 highs. General Electric and International Harvester were conspicuously buoyant, selling up about 4 points to new high for the year, and closing about a point higher. Radio mounted about 2 1-2 points to a new top, and closed firm.

Commodity markets generally moved in narrow ranges. July and September wheat closed fractionaly higher, while May eased. European buying was said to be improving, and government weather and private crop reports were bullish. Corn closed steady, cotton futures reacted 70 cents to $1.40 a bale.

Foreign exchanges were fairly steady. Sterling cables slipped off 1-16 to $4.85 1-2, while the Canadian dollar rallied to parity.

NEW YORK, April 2.—(AP)—Cotton futures closed barely steady, 14 to 23 points lower. Spot quiet; middling 16.65.

THE CURB MARKET

NEW YORK, April 2.—(AP)—Bullish forces on the New York curb exchange were forced to make a partial retreat today as a result of a heavy selling movement launched in the last hour of trading. Many of the early gains were wiped out, and a rather long list of issues closed with net declines ranging from 1 to 6 points, particularly in the public utility and oil groups. A sprinkling of specialties in which pools are believed to be operating, maintained at least part of their gains.

In view of the sharp advance in price during the past week, the reaction was generally expected. It was influenced, in part, by fears of a large increase in brokers' loans, the New York stock exchange monthly figures of member loans, made public after the close, showed a gain of nearly half a billion dollars in March, although the total was still far below the record established last September. The New York Federal Reserve weekly figures will be made public after the close of the market tomorrow.

A break of 6 points in Gulf of Pennsylvania had a depressing effect on the oil shares, which had pointed upward in the early trading as a result of the further decline in crude oil production reported for last week. Standard Oil of Ohio dropped 2 1-2 points and Humble 1 1-2, but Vacuum and Petroleum corporation closed higher, the latter touching a new high for the year.

Pilot Radio moved to new high ground on the successful completion of the flight of its experimental plane from New York to Bermuda. Hazeltine Radio ran up more than 3 points to 30, duplicating the year's peak, on the announcement that it had leased its patents to the Grigsby Grunow company, but lost part of its gain on realizing. Columbia Pictures, Copper Bessemer, Ceuno Press preferred, Curtiss Wright Flying, Foltis Fischer, Ruberoid, St. Regis Paper, Superheater, Trans Lux Pictures and U. S. Dairy A also reached new high ground.

Niagara & Hudson was run up to a new high at 19 3-8 on unofficial reports that it was slated to be merged later with Consolidated Gas of New York. Electric Bond & Share showed a net loss of slightly more than 2 points at 109 1-2 after having sold close to the year's high of 112 1-2 established earlier in the week. Cities Service, which had been moving up fractionally to new high ground nearly every day for the past week, dropped back 1 1-2 points. American Gas & Electric broke 4 points and a number of others yielded a point or two.

In the investment trust and trading corporation group, Shenandoah and Tricontinental attained new peak prices, although the latter lost its gain and closed slightly lower. Eastern States B and Electric Shareholders preferred also reached new high ground but Goldman Sachs and New York Investors were heavy.

CHICAGO GRAIN MARKET

CHICAGO, April 2.—(AP)—Responsive to unabated drought, new crop deliveries of wheat went upward in price today, but May which stands for wheat already on hand lagged behind. According to trade reports, severity of the drought in some districts southwest has become almost unprecedented for this time of year, with wheat in many fields perishing. Estimates of world import needs for wheat were enlarged today to 14,000,000 bushels, but it was asserted that Russia, France and the Danube would be able to furnish all of the increase.

Closing quotations on wheat were irregular, ranging from 3-8c a bushel decline to 3-4c advance, compared with yesterday's finish. Corn closed 1-4c off to 1-4c up, oats 1-4-1-2c advanced, and provisions showing 17-32c gain.

Persistent failure of any rain relief of consequence for either the southwest or the west received first attention throughout the day in the wheat pit, but traders took sharp notice also of monthly unofficial crop estimates from Chicago experts. The estimates suggested that domestic winter wheat yields would total 574,000,000 bushels this season as against 578,000,000 bushels harvested in 1929. Altogether the reports averaged 81.4 per cent as the crop condition, compared with 82.7 a year ago, and were about what had been expected.

Broadly, the prospect for domestic winter wheat, as summed up by one expert was a little below the season's normal, with the outcome more than usually dependent upon weather conditions. Total abandonment of winter wheat acreage, he forecasted, would probably prove to be less than the average abandonment of the last five years. Another leading authority estimated domestic spring wheat acreage would be 7.3 per cent less than last year. Increased export inquiries for wheat from the United States were heard of today, but North American purchases amounted to but 400,000 bushels.

BOND MARKET

NEW YORK, April 2.—(AP)—Narrow price movements prevailed among the higher grade investment bonds today. It was an unusually dull session, even for the convertibles, and closing quotations proved to be irregularly lower. The composite price of thirty issues dipped below 100 for the first time since March 15.

Interest charges remained firm. Call money held at 4 per cent on loan calling while time funds were advanced a shade in the 30-day maturity. When the tightness incident to the first of the month has relaxed, however, an ease in money is anticipated, although there is little expectation that the abnormally low levels of March 15 will be duplicated. Dealers in commercial paper reported a livelier inquiry.

With rails, utilities and industrials of standard types only marking time, the chief moves of the day were in share privilege bonds and in the obligations of amusement companies. In addition, an upturn in U. S. governments was noted but the demand for them was insignificant.

Convertibles slumped, as was to be expected from the heaviness of stocks in the late dealings. American Telephone 4 1-2s closed 4 1-4 points lower at 178 1-4. International Telephone 4 1-2s lost 2 1-4, while Baltimore and Ohio 4 1-2s, Atchison 4 1-2s Missouri Pacific 5 1-2s and Texas Corporation 5s declined about a point.

JEWETT CITY

VISITORS LOOK ABOUT AT BOROUGH IMPROVEMENTS

Many of the close to 100 visitors in town Wednesday, who were here to be present at the church conference, were pleased to have the opportunity of inspecting the new Jewett City Savings bank building, which is less than two months from completion. Of those who were transient callers, a large number were given their first sight of the Quinebaug viaduct construction work, the largest single highway contract in Connecticut, at present. Nobody ever drew a blank on Rev. G. W. Clarke of Preston City. He is right on the spot at any and all times. In anything from preaching the gospel to roasting hot dogs in the Maine woods, he is at home. Wednesday, with a 40-mile gale howling down the Quinebaug, Rev. Bro. Clarke volunteered for the position of "wind-break" at the new bridge, that the others might see without the danger of being blown away.

Local dahlia growers this week have been overhauling boxes and barrels to see how their "toes" have wintered. One man finds himself at a loss to explain why it is that the 50-cent bulbs always show up in fine shape from out of an old soap box where they were thrown in the corner of the cellar, while the choice three and four-dollar roots come out looking like an Egyptian mummy.

Last season, in spite of the continued drouth of mid-summer, many of the early fall displays were the best ever. At the Pachaug grange fair, the late Mrs. F. L. Kanahan of "Wild Acres" farm, Lisbon, and Mrs. F. C. Whiting of "The Elms" on the East Main street extension had wonderful prize winners to show. Mabel Thatcher and Silva Quarta were also winners for the Old Cluey Watson gardens on Main street.

Everything movable was bound somewhere, Wednesday, under the influence of a wind that blew at gale velocity all day.

The usual flock of spring grackles arrived in the East Main street spruces on scheduled time, in the middle of March. The birds tarried three days, with much chattering as they inspected the new building sites, then the whole flock disappeared and was away for ten days. They have made now a second call, which appears to be permanent.

Took 1920 Census

Ten years is so long a time that most local people have forgotten who took the census of 1920. It was the late Herbert C. Webster, he having held a record for accuracy and dispatch, his duty having been performed with no confusion of details.

These who served the dinner at the Conference of Churches held at the Congregational church Wednesday were Mrs. F. E. Robinson, Mrs. Abraham Zegeer, Mrs. Walter Marshall, Mrs. C. D. Wolf, Mrs. E. A. Faust and Mrs. L. G. Buckingham. The waitresses were in charge of Mrs. E. H Hiscox and were Mrs L. D. Howe, Mrs. H. A. Tomlinson, Mrs. Fred Whalley, Mrs. A. P. Anderson, Mrs. Carl Benjamin, Mrs. W. H, Payne, Mrs. F. D. Ballou, Mrs. H. T. Jeffers, Mrs. W A Broadfoot, Mrs N. B. Parkhurst, Mrs. S. R Waters and Misses Helen Hull and Margery Webster.

ST. PATRICK'S DAY EVENTS IN BIG SAN FRANCISCO

From the Hotel Roosevelt, San Francisco, March 11, the Ross tourists are heard from in the following interesting letter:

There has been a great St. Patrick day parade here this morning. It is said 100,000 people looked on, while the bands played Irish airs. I think there must have been a good many Irish here when the city was founded as the names of the streets indicate. One of the principal streets is called O'Farrell, another Kearny, also O'Hara, Bryan, etc.

On Market street is a splendid piece in bronze, illustrating "mechanics." This bronze is of six or seven men life size, stripped to the waist and working with levers and wheels at some machine used in mining. This is dedicated to Peter Donohue by his son. The names of a great many of the business houses are Irish.

The Irish have gone every place—wherever there has been adventure and in California there was surely adventure in '49! Below Montgomery street to the ferries, the land filled in, is partly of vessels that came here in '49 (the gold rush) and never left the harbor again. The desire to get gold was so great that sailors deserted their ships and fled to the gold mines. Today, in San Francisco, the gold is in the banks and one of the banks is the Bank of Italy, one of the largest, if not the largest in the world.

Market street is the main street, very wide, four car lines parallel and room on each side for parked cars and traffic. Sidewalks, 18 or 20 feet wide. San Francisco can only grow toward the south, as the bay is on the east side, the ocean on the west, and the golden gate on the north. In the city proper there are about 750,000 inhabitants.

We reached here a week ago and thanks to the Armstrong families (Ben and Charles) we have been on the jump. We were in church last Sunday morning and as it was next to impossible to get a seat, two or three ushers had taken a good deal of trouble for us, as we were strangers. The Armstrongs discovered us down in front, and at the end of the service, waited for us at the back of the church and greeted us most cordially. (A good place to meet.)

The reason the church was so crowded was that the governor of California was to speak, also ex-Secretary of War under Coolidge, Wilbur. In fact I sat in the Wilbur pew. The rest of the family had to sit some other place. The principal speaker was Annie Laurie, who spoke on Dope (narcotics). In telling of the different kinds of dope she said: There is the dope that soothes and calms the nerves, the dope that exhilarates and gives more pep, and a new dope (I had never heard of it and have forgotten the name) that incites to murder.

I had a chance to speak a word to Annie Laurie and as she shook my hand I said "Maxwelton's braes are bonnie". Although the crowd was very great and she was guarded by a captain of police and two plain clothes men she said "How fine." You may guess why she was so well guarded.

She spoke bitterly of the traffic in dope and although there is 160 tons used in this country every year, the legitimate use would only require three tons.

I asked ex-Secretary Wilbur if he knew any addicts; he said, "Only two." I may know someone that uses dope but it is so well concealed I do not know who they are.

The church we were attending is the First Congregational church of San Francisco; founded in 1849. It is the only church of that denomination here. Chauncey J. Hawkins, D. D., is the pastor. His wife is from Wellesley college, in the same class as Miss Sarah Louise Hadley, of Canterbury and Brooklyn, New York.

We had an opportunity to hear the governor again in this same church, speak on the Functions of the Executive of this Great State.

It is a great state, about 1,000 miles long and 250 miles wide. He spoke of the wonderful roads, (thousands of miles), the schools, the hospitals, homes for the aged, reformatory for boys, prisons, and here the governor was strictly Californian. He said, "We have the largest prison in the United States."

One afternoon we crossed the bay to Berkeley to call on Mr. and Mrs. Gregg (Mary Jennings). We found them in a most attractive home, overlooking the bay. The house is in Spanish style, in beautiful grounds, landscaped by Mr. Gregg. In these grounds is a Spanish well, an out-door fireplace, the walks carpeted with Spanish moss and with a great profusion of flowers and shrubs.

We saw the younger boy, a strapping big fellow as tall as his grandfather, the doctor. We were glad to see the Gregg family as it brought us a touch of home and nearer Jewett City.

We have dinner with the Armstrong families tonight.

Lippitt, Providence, chairman of the board, Manville-Jenckes Co., Providence, R. I.; Jesse H. Metcalf, Providence, president Wanskuck company, Providence, R. I.; John F. Rogers, resident manager the United States Finishing company, Norwich; Albert L. Smith, Philadelphia, Pa., Edward B. Smith & Co., bankers, New York; Henry B. Thompson, Greenville, Del., president the United States Finishing company, New York; Henry B. Thompson, Jr., Glen Head, N. Y., vice-president the United States Finishing Co., New York; Herbert J. Wells, Kingston, R. I., chairman of the board, Rhode Island Hospital Trust company, Providence, R. I.; Charles A. Wimpfheimer, president A. Wimpfheimer & Bro., Inc., New York.

"We have closed our year showing substantial earnings—the best year since 1923. Of necessity our earnings were impaired in degree by the October break in the stock market as the reflex was felt throughout the entire textile industry. Nevertheless we have every reason to congratulate ourselves on the results for the year. The consolidated net earnings of the United States Finishing company and its subsidiaries in 1929, after deducting bond interest, federal income taxes and preferred dividends, was equal to $4.51 per share on the 121,200 shares of common stock of the United States Finishing Co. outstanding December 31, 1929.

"Of the original issue of $2,000,000 of consolidated mortgage 5 per cent bonds of the United States Finishing company, maturing July 1, 1929, there have been retired during the year $593,000, leaving outstanding a balance of only $767,000, which amount has been extended for a period of ten years to July 1, 1939.

"During the year a change was made in the capital structure of the company. At a meeting of the stockholders held August 14, 1929, authorization was given to change the authorized common stock of the company from 40,000 shares of $100 par value to 200,000 shares of no-par value. One hundred and twenty thousand shares of this new no-par stock were issued on a basis of three for one to the holders of the old $100 par common stock leaving 80,000 shares of the new no-par stock in the treasury, unissued. In addition, the preferred stockholders were given three votes for each share of preferred stock, compared with one vote for each share previously.

"On August 15, 1929, the United States Finishing company acquired a controlling interest, through stock purchase, in the Hartsville Print & Dye Works, of Hartsville, South Carolina. Your board of directors believed it to be to the interest of the company to have a print works in the south, and feel that the purchase of the controlling interest in this plant will prove a source of future benefit to the company."

BODY OF WALTER REED, NEW LONDON, DISCOVERED ON ROCKS AT GROTON

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, April 2—The body of Walter Reed, 32, former advertising manager of The Globe, was found on a ledge of rocks on the Groton shore this afternoon, death being caused by drowning, although under what circumstances he went to his death is not known. He is survived by his mother and sister, both residents of Seafort, Md., and by a half-brother, Winder Reed, of this city. Reed came to New London about two years ago to take the post with The Globe. About six months ago he resigned and had not been employed since, except for about three weeks. The body was discovered on one of the jutting rocks between the plants of the Electric Boat company and the Portland Trawling company, about 1:30 o'clock. Because of the clothing being totally dry and due to the absence of water in the system, it was believed that Reed might have met death from some violent cause. For that reason an autopsy was performed at an undertaking establishment at 4 o'clock and it was then revealed that death was the result of drowning. It is the theory that Reed went to the rocks at low tide and probably fell asleep. When the tide rose the water reached the body and caused the man's death. He had not been seen since Monday forenoon, and he had not been at his home, 66 Franklin street since Saturday. How Reed came to be in Groton is strange for it is known that he did not have any intimate acquaintances in that borough.

Baldwin's Affinity Has Husband

The continued case of Harold Baldwin, Medford, Mass., and Mrs. Gertrude Sidoly, 26 Prospect street, charged with lascivious carriage was not concluded in the police court today, for further continuance was requested and granted. The case went over to the 5th inst. Baldwin and the woman, who does not live with her husband, a resident of Bridgeport, were found occupying a room at the Prospect street house last Saturday night and were arrested.

Stiff Fines for Bluejackets

Tony Ossola, Louis Gasco and Charles Clark, sailors, were tried on a charge of intoxication and were fined $25 and costs each. The bluejackets went to the same rooming house where Baldwin and the Sidoly woman were roomers, late last night and which place is conducted by Mrs. Fannie Sudhalter. The sailors were admitted, but their conduct became so bolsterous and offensive that the propriatress ordered the men to leave. This they refused to do with the result that complaint was made to the police and Ossola, Glasco and Clark were arrested.

Women Penalized

Anna Meyers and Lucille Simms, both colored, were penalized, the former charged with conducting a disorderly house, 17 Hill street and the latter charged with frequenting. The Meyers woman was fined $50 and costs and the Simms woman was meted out a penalty of $10 and costs. The women were arrested last night by Automobile Patrol Officer Clarence Martin and Patrolman Frank Philopena when the officers raided the house, which has long been known as a black and tan resort, where white men consorted with Negro females.

Mrs. Anna E. B. Knapp, 2 Crystal avenue, a mill-worker, was charged with violation of the state motor vehicle law in driving without a license and was fined $10 and costs. Mrs. Knapp was arrested last night by Automobile Patrol Officer William Corcoran.

Delayed Deputy Chief

Earl F. Spencer, Groton, was charged with blocking fire apparatus and was fined $10, but execution of the sentence was suspended. Spencer was driving a truck on Lincoln avenue Tuesday and failed to heed the signal of the approaching car of Deputy Chief Calvin Edmunds, which was responding to an alarm for fire, thus delaying the chief.

John Brouwer, 41 Keeney lane, charged with speeding was fined $5 and costs. Brouwer was arrested on Montauk avenue last night by Automobile Patrol Officer George Cockell.

The other cases tried were for intoxication, five of them. Two were given suspension of judgment, another was sentenced to 20 days in jail, but execution of the sentence was suspended; a fourth was fined $5 and costs, execution suspended, while another, an old offender was fined $5 and costs.

NORWICH RUNAWAYS WERE NOT LOCATED

The Child Welfare bureau, Norwich, today requested the New London police to be on the lookout for Kenneth Latham, 15, and Tony Andreal, 12, both colored, who have run away from their homes. It was believed that the boys would be found at the residence of George Baker, but Baker said he had not seen the runaways.

The funeral of Mrs. Mary A. Noble, widow of John C. Noble, formerly of New London, who died in Hartford, was held this afternoon at 2 o'clock at 48 Shapley street. The service was read by Rev. Noble, New York; Clarence F., of Springfield, Mass., and Ellsworth Noble, of Hartford, were bearers. Burial was in Jordan cemetery.

Mrs. Joseph Sienborski

The funeral of Mrs. Eva Sienborski, widow of Joseph Sienborski, of 138 Winthrop street, was held this morning at 9 o'clock at St. Peter and St. Paul's church, a mass of requiem being celebrated by Rev. Joseph M. Raniszewski. Burial was in the Polish National cemetery, Norwich.

ONLY FIVE PASS FIRST TEST FOR POLICE UNDERSTUDIES

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, April 2—It is evident that when applicants for appointment to the supernumerary force of the police department take their examinations at the Jennings school, Mercer street, Friday night, the number of "students" will be confined to a very few; for to date there are but five who have passed the physical examination after which they are eligible to take the mental test. Between now and the time for holding the examination there may be additional seekers for the appointment, but it is safe to predict that if such is the case the added applicants will be exceedingly few.

Charities' Bridge Nets $750

It is estimated now that $750 will be cleared by the Associated Charities from the bridge party held yesterday afternoon at Lighthouse Inn. Four hundred and fifty participated in the play. The inn was decorated with spring flowers donated by local florists. As play progressed, Mrs. Charles Kaufman, assisted by Misses Adelaide Chappell, Elizabeth Lee Chappell, Margarite Fisher, Alma Clarke, Gloria Kaufman and Harriet Chappell, circulated among the players and sold candy. Each package was daintily wrapped in colored paper.

By request James P. Sullivan was the Charities' official auctioneer. Interest was great as he announced purchasers as follows: Mrs. Russell A. Clapp, Jr., half dozen pairs chiffon hosiery; Mrs. G. C. Johnson, two silk quilted pillows; Mrs. Charles F. Klinger, colored glass console set with candles. Table prizes for high scores were awarded also. Mr. Sullivan also auctioned quantities of candy. Mrs. Thomas B. Congdon was chairman of the committee in charge of the party, assisted by Mrs. Frank B. Walker, Mrs. Ludwig Mann, Mrs. F. Valentine Chappell, Mrs. Charles Kaufman, Mrs. Clifford Trull, Miss Harriet B. Chappell, Mrs. Henry Harris, Mrs. Carey Congdon, Mrs. Alfred Labensky, Mrs. George P. Cheney, Mrs. J. Reid Johnson, Mrs. P. C. Woodruff, Mrs. Wilson Brown and Mrs. Frank Zeusler.

Mrs. Thomas Wilson of 65 Federal street; Oliver Robinson, 240 Williams avenue; Burman Perry, Stonington; Frederick Sparrow, 72 Beckwith street; Mrs. Michael Gigliotti and infant son, 43 Front street; Robert Kingsbury, 71 Colman street; Mrs. Joseph Tatley, Gales Ferry; Mrs. Henry Hanson, Montville, patients at Lawrence-Memorial hospital, were discharged today.

Edward I. Raymond has sold a building lot, corner of Morton and Dart streets, to Abraham Shapiro.

A deed transferring title in the house and lot, corner of Montauk avenue and Alger place, to Maude St. C. Lester, was filed for record at the office of the city clerk today.

A false alarm was rung in from Box 332, corner of Franklin and Cottage streets, last midnight. Deputy Chief Calvin Edmunds and four pieces of apparatus responded, only to discover that a fire did not exist.

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Coming to Slater Hall

Count Felix von Luckner, who is to appear here on the evening of April 25, at Slater Hall, is a member of an old and famous military family, a descendant of a marshal of France.

Count von Luckner had run away to sea as a boy and then served seven years before the mast under an assumed name, as a common jack-tar, suffering beatings, starvation, shipwreck and other hardships that the sea visits upon its children. A part of this time he sailed on American and British ships.

At one time he joined the Salvation Army in Australia, became a kangaroo hunter, prize fighter, wrestler, beach comber and a Mexican soldier, standing on guard before the door of President Diaz's palace. His own family had given him up for dead. His travels included a long journey across America, where he worked as a cowboy, a harvester and even as a porter in New York hotels. His land journeys, of course, were made between his trips on the sea. The call of the sea has ever been his strongest urge.

Then, one day, after he had found his way up from the station of a common seaman to that of an officer of the German navy, he returned to his family. All sorts of exploits brought him naval fame, with the result that he became the protege of the Kaiser. As an officer aboard the "Crown Prinz," the finest ship in the Imperial navy, he had fought the battle of Jutland. Then came the exciting commission to embark with the "Seeadler."

The count is a born actor, a giant of a man, with a rare gift of pantomime, which has been heighted by his life at sea. He is vigorously expressive, full of mimicry and intensely dramatic in the recital of his absorbing adventures before the mast.

One of his big emotional moments came when he was compelled by the stern law of warfare to sink the British ship on which he had first taken out papers as a common sailor. This was the "Pinmore." Count von Luckner came across it in the South Seas laden with saltpeter—from which gunpowder is made. The attachment of a sailor to his first ship is almost as strong as parental love. However, the "Pinmore" had to be sunk. See adv.

Breed Theatre

The greatest story of the Mississippi river ever written, "Cameo Kirby," produced as a romantic musical drama by Fox Movietone, opens today at the Breed theatre.

Two great Broadway musical stars, J. Harold Murray and Norma Terris, are co-starred and are surrounded by an all-star cast, which includes such well known players as Myrna Loy, Douglas Gilmore, Robert Edeson, Stepin Fetchit, Charles Morton, and George MacFarlane.

Irving Cummings, whose two previous productions for the audible screen "In Old Arizona" co-directed with Raoul Walsh, and "Behind That Curtain" set new standards for this form of entertainment, directed "Cameo Kirby."

Palace Theatre

When a theatre presents a bill such as the double feature program which the Palace has prepared for its patrons at the moment, it's simply impossible to keep the crowds away. Here, rolled up into one show, are two great pictures, one a splendid mystery, the other an out and out feast of fun and good music. If one lacks anything, the other is sure to have it.

Van and Schenck, well known vaudeville headliners are the featured members of the cast of "They Learned About Women," a cast which includes also such stars as Bessie Love, Mary Doran, J. C. Nugent, Benny Rubin, Eddie Gribbon and Francis X. Bushman. What a cast that is—it sounds almost too good to be true, but there it is. Come and see these old favorites and come and see also an entirely new bunch of favorites in "Murder Will Out," the other picture on this twin program.

In "Murder Will Out" we meet our old friends, Jack Mulhall, Lila Lee, Malcolm MacGregor, Tully Marshall, Noah Beery and others. This film is adapted from that mysteriously named melodramatic satire, "The Purple Hieroglyph," by Murray Leinster. At the same time you laugh, you will find yourself also holding your breath as suspense follows suspense and thrill crowds upon thrill.

An intent and intelligent dialogue has been built into this engaging film, so that there is continuity all the way and one never finds himself being drawn aside to watch for no reason at all, a chorus dance or a minstrel show, as so often happens in poorly directed pictures. Any singing or dancing you find in "Murder Will Out" is legitimate stuff, it belongs in the picture and is a part of the action. There are no interludes thrown in just for effect. Nevertheless the scene shifts so fast it takes one's breath away. Once again may we remind you that you will start out in a bachelor's apartments and before the show is over, find yourself in the grim hull of a submarine. In the meantime the action will have pulled you at top speed along a deserted highway, through a mysterious Oriental pagoda on a millionaire's estate, in and out of a detective and weather bureau, through a morgue and into the mysterious depths of New York harbor.

Beginning Saturday, the Palace will offer "Party Girl", a sensational expose, with Doug Fairbanks, Jr., and Marie Prevost.

Broadway Theatre

When Captain Braydon of the Union army volunteered for espionage service behind the Confederate lines, he little suspected that his "suicide" mission was to lead him straight to the arms of the Southland's fairest daughter. Carrying fake dispatches which must fall into the hands of the rebel headquarters, the young captain was "not expected to return," but after the young southern girl had been smitten by his charming indierence to her wiles, she used every means to circumvent his sacrifice, and he had the devil's own time trying to be "captured." Gary Cooper is ideally cast as the quiet northern captain, with Mary Brian charming as the mischievous southern miss. Fast action, with much hand-to-hand fighting, skirmishes, and the always imminent firing squad are cleverly blended with wholesome comedy in "Only the Brave," this stirring story of an actual incident in the Civil war, preluding the famous surrender of Gen. Lee to Grant, which forms an interesting highlight in this stirringly patriotic story. The companion picture on this amazing double feature bill, playing at the Broadway today and tomorrow, furnishes a brand new set of thrills in the first talking presentation of that masterpiece of filmcraft "The Phantom of the Opera." With the original cast of over 5,000, headed by the inimitable Lon Chaney as the awful "Phantom", and with Norman Kerry and Mary Philbin in their created roles and with the added embellishment of complete dialogue, symphonic music by a 150-piece orchestra playing the immortal strains of Gounod's "Faust," a trained opera company presenting the opus almost intact, and with gorgeous scenes in technicolor, the new "Phantom of the Opera" rises to dramatic heights impossible to achieve until the advent of sound. Never has a double feature program been presented to a Norwich public, with so much to commend, and with such infinite variety, embracing as it does the gamut from comedy to deepest tragedy, and tinted with spectacular scenic effects, music, color and dancing. Fox movietone news presents the pick of current headline events as well. Sweethearts of all ages are anxiously waiting for Saturday, when America's "Sweetie," red-headed Nancy Carroll, with her whole flock of sheiks and shebas will arrive at the Broadway in her very latest, "Honey," rightly billed as "sweeter than sweetie."

"Move Over, Mountain— More READING Hard Coal Is Needed"

The demand for Reading Anthracite—that better Pennsylvania hard coal—grows and grows.

To satisfy it, the largest, most efficiently equipped hard coal breaker in the world has just been added to the vast producing equipment of this company.

Near Mt. Carmel, Pennsylvania, Reading engineers found a swampy valley high in the hills but partly filled with a veritable mountain of refuse from old mining operations. So they said, "Move Over, Mountain", and moved it. The valley was filled and levelled. The side of Locust Mountain was stripped bare to expose for miles the Mammoth vein of hard coal to supply part of the coal for the new breaker.

Your coal merchant has Reading hard coal, or can get it. Insist on Reading for your fires.

The April conference of Six Churches was held at the Jewett City Congregational church on Wednesday, 158 attending. The services were in charge of Rev. G. F. Goodenough, the pastor. The decorations were unusually attractive, consisting of beautiful pink begonias and flowering geraniums, calcelaria, stock and pussy willows.

The morning service was opened with an organ voluntary by Mrs. Walter Benjamin. The invocation was given by Rev. D. C. Stone of Hanover. The beautiful solo "My Task" was sung by Mrs. F. D. Ballou. The responsive reading was led by Rev. A. H. Clement of Jewett City, and the Scripture read by Rev. George Clarke of Preston City. Prayer was offered by Rev. Harold Arnold of Pachaug. The offering was received by Jesse Crary of Preston and E. L. French of Jewett City, Rev. William Prentiss of Plainfield offering the prayer.

The roll was called showing 18 from Pachaug, 31 Preston, 6 Lisbon, 20 Hanover, 17 Plainfield, 30 Jewett City and 34 visitors.

The address of the morning was delivered by Rev. Lydia Hartig of Ekonk. Her topic was "Everybody's Lonesome", and she gave a series of what she styled live moving pictures taken from real life. They served to show how love transforms the lives of people, and the task that is given everyone to satisfy the longing soul for love. The benediction was pronounced by Rev. W. J. Reynolds of Lisbon. Dinner was served by the women of the church under the direction of Mrs. F. E. Robinson.

The afternoon devotional exercise was in charge of Rev. William Penner of Taftville. He read the Scripture from the 23rd Psalm and the book of John, and offered prayer, and gave a brief talk on "The Fellowship of the Christian With Christ as the Center." The minutes of the last conference were read by the scribe, Mrs. E. H. Hiscox of Jewett City. A vote of thanks was extended the church for all that was prepared for a pleasant and profitable day. Jason Lathrop of Plainfield gave a very interesting description of the places he visited on a trip through the west, interspersed with many humorous incidents. The subject was "What God Gave America That Still Belongs to All of Us." Mr. Lathrop was accorded a round of applause at the close of his talk. Rev. Mr. Stone announced that the next conference would be held in Hanover on the second Wednesday in May. The conference closed with the benediction by the pastor.

TRYING TO STRAIGHTEN TELEGRAPH SERVICE HERE

Feeling that there is justification in the complaint as set forth in a public letter by George E. Pitcher and several other local business men who have also felt the result of inadequate telegraph service at certain hours, in Norwich, President Frank R. Murdy of the local chamber of commerce has instructed the local secretary to invite one of the officials of the Western Union Telegraph company to be present at the next directors' meeting of the local chamber, at which time the telegraph situation as affecting Norwich will be discussed. The present plans, so far as the Western Union is concerned, call for week-day hours from 8 a. m. to 9 p. m., and on Sunday, the hours from 9 to 11 a. m., and 4 to 6 p. m., are observed. Norwich people desiring to send telegrams after these office hours are required to call New London by telephone up to midnight every day in the week and pay the toll charges involved in addition to the telegraph charges. Between the hours of midnight and 7 a. m., at which time the New London office opens every day in the week, the person desiring to send a telegram must call New Haven by telephone and pay the toll charges to this point which, added to the cost of the telegram, brings about an unusually high rate and in any event, after the regular office hours of the Western Union quoted above, the people of Norwich are obliged to pay a higher rate than the regular rate charged by the telegraph company. Upon the facts mentioned it appears that this is a question upon which some official light should be thrown and to this end the chamber of commerce will investigate in the interests of the city and its people.

OBJECTS TO PASTEURIZATION PLANT LOCATING NEAR UNCAS-ON-THAMES

Dr. Hugh B. Campbell, superintendent of Uncas-on-Thames, the state tuberculosis sanatorium, appeared as an objector to having a milk bottling station and pasteurization plant established close to the sanatorium property, when the town zoning board gave a hearing Wednesday morning at the mayor's office upon the joint application of Samuel A. Antzis and Philip H. Sheridan for a permit to erect a building for the purposes named. The location desired is on land of John Tomarowich, abutting on West Thames street, and is on low-lying land of a swampy character.

First Selectman William S. Murray presided at the hearing by the board, which reserved decision.

Mr. Antzis, one of the applicants, who formerly was manager of the Frink dairy and at present is operator of the Star dairy, told the board that they would buy 100 feet of the Tomarowich property, along the Norwich-New London highway, and would erect a one-story stucco building, 50x30. The drainage would be taken care of by septic tanks, and city water would be used in the pasteurization plant. It is next to the Goode property. Mr. Antzis said there would be nothing noisy or disturbing about the operation of the plant. Mr. Sheridan also spoke.

Dr. Campbell stated to the board that he expressed the objection of the state to the proposed location of the pasteurization plant. At such a short distance from the sanatorium, he said, it would be undesirable and the noise of milk trucks going 24 hours a day with the noise of the pasteurization plant, would be disturbing to the patients in the sanatorium who should have the benefit of a quiet zone. The septic tanks, he claimed also, would be a breeding place for flies and the overflow would be into the ditch in front of the sanatorium.

The doctor spoke of efforts that were being made to make the surroundings in this neighborhood attractive, and he was seconded in this line by F. Russell Smith, president of the Norwich Golf club, and by Joseph C. Worth, vice president of the Norwich Inn Co., and a director of the golf club. Mr. Worth said that the noise from the pasteurization plant would be objectionable to patrons of the inn and a half million dollar investment would be unfavorably affected if the permit to erect the plant on the sit on West Thames street were granted.

Dr. M. Burt Burstan, who lives across the street from the proposed location, registered his objection, as did William Skelly, a neighbor in that vicinity, who produced a letter of objection from Mrs. Elizabeth DeWolfe.

In rebuttal, Mr. Antzis denied that there would be any more trouble from flies than from an ordinary household, and said that there would be an expenditure of about $20,000 and much would be done to beautify the premises.

DRUNKEN AUTO DRIVERS MUST SERVE SENTENCES

In a three to two decision, the supreme court of errors at Hartford held that jail sentences of six months imposed on drunken drivers convicted of a second offense within six years may not be suspended, and the accused discharged from custody.

The decision was given in the case of Thomas P. Kelly of Hartford against Sheriff Edward W. Dewey, the majority opinion, directing judgment for the defendant, being written by Justice Haines and concurred in by Chief Justice Wheeler and Justice Banks. Justices Maltbie and Hinman dissented.

Kelly was convicted of operating a motor vehicle while he was under the influence of liquor June 18, 1928, in the Hartford police court, and was again convicted of that charge in the same court Oct. 12, 1929, and was sent to Hartford county jail for a period of six months. Dec. 31, 1929, Judge John L. Bonee issued an order suspending the sentence and placing Kelly on probation for one year. Sheriff Dewey refused to recognize the order releasing Kelly, whereupon the latter obtained a writ of habeas corpus from the superior court. The return made by the sheriff to this writ was that Kelly was held under the provisions of chapter 285 of the public acts of 1929, which forbids suspension of sentences for second offenses within six years on charges of drunken driving, state prison sentences or sentence on a person convicted of a felony if he has twice been previously convicted of a felony.

Kelly demurred to this return on the ground that the provisions of the statute referred to, especially section 2, showed that the judge did have power to suspend the execution of the sentence and make the order for probation, this demurrer being sustained by Judge Newell Jennings of the superior court, who directed judgment for Kelly. It was from this judgment that Sheriff Dewey, represented by Assistant State Attorney Donald Gaffney and State Attorney Hugh M. Alcorn, appealed.

TEACHERS DISCUSS MANY SUBJECTS AT STERLING

The March meeting of the teachers under the supervision of Edwin B. Floyd was held in Sterling last week with teachers from Lisbon, Voluntown, Scotland, Canterbury and Sterling present.

The Sterling teachers were in charge of the program which was opened by a demonstration of two and three part singing by the pupils of Mrs. Mary Peckham, principal of Sterling Center school.

Mr. Floyd spoke about the subject matter of the new high school as contrasted with that of the old. Three reasons were given for the failure of teachers in the problem-fusion method. (1) Fear, either of the community or the subject matter. (2) Insufficient planning of the unit of work. (3) Lack of creative ability.

Mrs. Tracy spoke upon The Importance of Health in Our School. The methods of teaching health were brought out. A self-rating test on the desirable qualities of a teacher was given by Mr. Floyd. Mrs. Tanner, the primary teacher at Voluntown, showed the creative paintings made by her pupils in connection with an electric light project.

"Satisfactory Methods of Teaching Suitable Habits" was the subject of Mrs. Peckham's talk. She showed the practical applications of the principles of habit formation, stressing the desirable habits.

A talk on "Citizenship Habits" was given by Miss Ellis. Methods of developing habits of kindness, honesty, courtesy, thrift, helpfulness, sportsmanship, etc., were considered.

Miss Bishop discussed "Health Habits" in an interesting manner. "Physical Education," was the topic which Miss Wing discussed, and Miss Pinkham spoke on "English Habits." Miss Malboro's talk was on "Reading Habits." Methods for improving reading were given. Mrs. Hillard spoke on "Arithmetic Habits."

The final speaker was Miss A. Genevieve Violette, teacher of English at Plainfield high school. Her subject was "Friends of Education in the Modern High School." She discussed the work of the high school and the preparation which an entering student should have.

In addition to these talks, informal discussions of the individual problems of the teachers were held.

It is understood that Burdick has been tampering with the mails for some time. The specific complaint against him charges that he detained a letter containing $4 and addressed to Mrs. Anne Prigodsky of Canterbury.

Dress Rehearsal For Gym Exhibition

Final rehearsal for the second annual gymnastic exhibition will be held tonight (Thursday) at the Y. M. C. A. at 7 o'clock. All classes are to be present at that time.

Several years ago E. J. Fritz, who was at that time physical director at the "Y", put on several circuses which were well attended and were looked forward to by the townspeople with much pleasure. Last year after a lapse of three years the physical department decided to put on some kind of a program that would take in all classes, and give the parents of the boys and girls a chance to see just what the Y. M. C. A. was doing for them in the line of physical training. The first annual exhibition was the result, and just a year ago it was held. It was well received by a large audience, and it was decided to have something along the same line every year. This year's exhibition will be on a larger scale, but at the same time the main idea has been kept in mind. That is to demonstrate what has been accomplished during the past year, and to give the parents of the performers a chance to see their children in action.

Enjoying the lecture with the members of the chapter were about 40 members of the General Ebenezer Huntington society, Children of the American Revolution, to whom Faith Trumbull chapter sent an invitation to attend as guests.

CAMPAIGN TO PROTECT CHILDREN FROM TUBERCULOSIS

With comparatively recent studies indicating the necessity of protecting children from tuberculosis, the state tuberculosis commission and its local agencies throughout Connecticut, will participate in a nation-wide campaign of prevention during the entire month of April. The campaign, one of the many projects made possible by the sale of Christmas seals during last December, will be entirely an educational effort, seeking to impress upon the public the fact that tuberculosis usually begins in childhood, and that people are urged to protect the children from infection by keeping them away fro msick people, by insisting on plenty of rest, by training them in health habits, and by consulting the doctor regularly.

Two important diagnostic aids are commonly used by doctors to detect the presence of early tuberculosis before it makes itself known by symptoms. One is the well-known X-ray photograph and the second is the tuberculin test, a simple, harmless skin test which shows whether or not the germs of tuberculosis have entered the child's body.

A positive tuberculin test and tubercle shadows on the X-ray plate are not necessarily a cause for alarm. They do mean, however, that the child has received an infection from someone, and this "someone" who usually proves to be an adult in the home, must be found, for unless this close contact of the child with the tuberculous individual is broken, there is grave danger that the child may develop lung tuberculosis. The child should be under observation of the doctor until he is fully grown.

The department of agriculture announced that Dr. Wilmon Newell, of the University of Florida, has resigned his position as administrative agent for the department in Mediterranean fruit fly eradication work.

EXPLOSIONS IN FIREWORKS PLANT KILLED 10 PERSONS

PHILADELPHIA, April 3.— (AP) — Ten persons lost their lives and more than thirty were injured today when a series of explosions virtually wiped out the plant of the Pennsylvania Fireworks Display company, Inc., at Devon, 16 miles west of Philadelphia.

Most of the dead were employes of the plant which comprised ten small buildings on a seven-acre tract of land near the main line of the Pennsylvania railroad.

Although hospitals reported treating only about twenty injured persons, many more were treated on the scene by emergency ambulances dispatched with physicians. Many others in the 200 homes in surrounding territory which state police reported were damaged, were treated by family physicians or administered first aid themselves.

Police tonight were still investigating reports that several employes were unaccounted for, but it was believed if they are missing they were represented among the unidentified dead.

The explosions were terrific and caused great alarm on the quiet countryside. The shock of the blasts was felt over a wide area, reports having been received that the heavier explosions were felt thirty miles away.

Heavy damage was done to houses nearby tenanted by workers. Roofs were caved in, porch roofs wrecked and windows blown out. There was extensive minor damage done over a large area, some pieces more than a mile away being affected.

There were three heavy explosions which caused most of the damage, followed by smaller blasts over a period of twenty minutes after the first great shock. At times the exploding fireworks sounded like the rattle of machine guns, rescuers were forced to remain at a distance until the explosions ceased, when hundreds of persons rushed in to the rescue.

The debris caught fire and was burning briskly when firemen and other rescuers tackled the scattered debris of the buildings, most of them of frame construction.

CLASH IN CONFERENCE OVER TARIFF RATES PUBLICITY

WASHINGTON, April 3.—(AP)—The final phase of the republican tariff revision program was entered upon today as the senate and house conferees held their first sessions to adjust the many differences between the two congressional branches over the Hawley-Smoot bill. Thirty-two rates in the chemical schedule were acted upon.

The senate conferees are obligated to a big majority of the contests, the house group receding from its higher rate amendments in 16 instances and the senate giving in on only four. Twelve compromises were reached.

A controversy over publicity featured the first organization and business meeting. Senator Smoot, republican, Utah, and Representative Garner, democrat, Texas, clashed.

Angered when Garner left the committee room and called to newspapermen that he would [illegible] appeared in the doorway and requested that the reporters "come inside."

"I'll give you every rate agreed on," he said.

"I want to make sure that all you fellows get this accurately."

Other republicans in the room expressed surprise that daily publicity was to be given their actions.

Chairman Hawley of the house ways and means committee and head of the house conference group said he had made no agreement to make public the actions only after an entire rate schedule had been completed.

"Yes, but Jack Garner says he's going to give out what we do every day and I'm going to do it myself," Smoot told the Oregon member.

The finance committee chairman then dictated in detail the action taken on the first 32 changes in the bill.

STUDENT RIOT QUELLED BY POLICE RIOT SQUADS

LOS ANGELES, April 3.—(AP)—Police riot squads were called today to quell a student riot at the University of Southern California here which broke out when a traffic patrolman attempted to arrest a co-ed motorist on a charge of reckless driving.

The disturbance, in which several hundred students participated in the streets about the university to jeer policemen was ended quickly after the police emergency squads arrived. No arrests were made, and the only violence was the rough handling of the traffic officer by the resentful students.

Officer Thomas Jensen was asserted by the collegemen to have been speeding by when another car driven by Miss Jeanne Sangor got in the way. Jensen swerved his car, narrowly avoiding hitting her's, and then hailed the co-ed to issue a ticket. Groups of students who were leaving classes at the moment, came to the girl's defense, claiming the officer himself was at fault for speeding. In the dispute someone left the air out of the policeman's automobile tires.

When police from a nearby substation arrived they found Jensen hemmed in by a jeering mob, which besides roughly handling him, had taken his handcuffs and keys. Riot squads from the central station were called to disperse the milling students.

Arrival on the street of President Rufus Von Kleinsmid, of the university, materially aided the officers. The streets about Bovard auditorium then were emptied quickly.

Police revealed the motive for the crime as a dispute over a small loan Anderson had made to Lorenz. Its complications, however, were compounded of treachery, brutality and the betrayal of friendship and love, for besides destroying a fine young life, according to the police, Lorenz left behind him, shocked and sorrowing over the turn of events, the 18-year-old girl with whom he had been friendly for two years, Miss Elizabeth Benson, blonde daughter of Mr. and Mrs. August J. UNEMPLOYMENT LEGISLATION SLATED FOR SENATE TUESDAY

WASHINGTON, April 3.—(AP)—Legislative remedies for unemployment, including a stabilization agency with authorization for a $150,000,000 federal appropriation, were slated today for final discussion on the floor of the senate on Tuesday, April 15.

The senate agreed to take up the measures, by Senator Wagner, democrat, New York, after its commerce committee had approved them without record votes.

The committee action followed intensive investigation of present conditions by a sub-committee that heard William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, and others identified with labor, paint dismal pictures of the existing situation.

Witnesses unanimously endorsed the three Wagner measures. These would expand government machinery for collecting unemployment information. Provision would be made that on the basis of this information, a federal stabilization board could accelerate or retard public construction to meet changing conditions.

POISONS IN VISCERA OF MRS. ROSA A. STONE

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla., April 3. —(AP)—Poisons have been found in the viscera of Mrs. Rosa A. Stone, who died suddenly February 13 at her residence here, officers said today.

Mrs. Stone had written to an undertaker not long before her death, expressing fear that she might be murdered and directing the undertaker to have an autopsy conducted if she died suddenly.

Charles G. Blanchard, of a local undertaking company, submitted her viscera to the state board of health. Quantities of several poisons were found in the analysis, according to a report by R. B. Isley, toxicologist.

Probate of Mrs. Stone's will, in which her servants were named principal beneficiaries, was ordered February 25 and a Daytona Beach bank named executors. The probation proceedings however, were stopped when doubt as to Mrs. Stone's right to will her property and doubt even that she was Mrs. Stone, came to light, officials said.

Charles and Frank Spear of Boston, Mass., through attorneys, requested the court to stay probate of the will until it could inform them what happened to the will left by Captain Frank Stone, Mrs. Stone's husband, who died March 15, 1925.

They alleged that Stone was their father, Frank Spear, of North Reading, Mass., who abandoned them and his legal wife, Emma Spear, in 1892 and went to Providence, R. I., where he took the name of Stone. Emma Spear, they said, died in 1896.

COMMITTEE DIVIDED ON LAW ENFORCEMENT PROPOSALS

WASHINGTON, April 3.—(AP)—A decision on the legislative proposals of the Hoover law enforcement commission to strengthen dry enforcement was set for next Wednesday by the house judiciary committee after failure today to reach an agreement on the major recommendations in the program.

With the committee divided on the commission's bills to permit juryless trials before United States commissioners and to define misdemeanor violations of the prohibition laws, indications were that these measures would not be favorably reported to the house without radical changes.

Although several committee members expressed the opinion that these measures had practically died in committee, Chairman Graham said the group was willing to cooperate in formulating legislation to aid law enforcement.

"We refuse to rush action on measures that would result in unscientific legislation, just because somebody demands it," he added, however.

PENN. WILLING TO GIVE UP NEW HAVEN ROAD HOLDINGS

On Condition That the N. Y. C. Relinquish the Boston & Albany and That the Latter Road Be Included In An All New England System—P. F. Crowley of the N. Y. C. Declared the Road Was Unwilling to Surrender the B. & A. — Harvard Economist Expressed Opposition to Unification of the New England Railroads.

BOSTON, April 3—(AP)—The Pennsylvania railroad today indicated its willingness to give up its holdings in the New York, New Haven and Hartford and the Boston and Maine railroads, on condition that the New York Central relinquish the Boston and Albany and that that railroad be included in an all New England system.

This position was defined by W. W. Atterbury, president of the Pennsylvania system, appearing before the New England governors' railroad committee.

The unwillingness of the New York Central to surrender the Boston and Albany was voiced by its president, Patrick E. Crowley.

C. J. France, representing the Providence chamber of commerce, told the committee that inasmuch as the Pennsylvania had been adding to its holdings in the New Haven road, the governors' committee should be represented at hearings starting in Washington Saturday, relative to railroad ownership. At present, it would be impossible to bring about consolidation of the roads, he said, "because you have now no free hand with which to do it."

The governors' committee was criticized by ex-Mayor John F. Fitzgerald, of Boston, for not "coming out and telling the people" that the Pennsylvania was securing a stock ownership in the New Haven.

Speaking for the Pennsylvania, Atterbury said, he believed the connection of that road with the New Haven had benefited southern New England and that the New York Central's lease of the Boston and Albany had benefited northern New England.

Crowley said adequate transportation could best be supplied by the Boston and Albany continued affiliation with the New York Central.

"My opinion is that the Boston and Albany should remain with the New York Central as heretofore proposed by the Storrow committee and in conformity with the plan of the interstate commerce commission," he said.

Prof. William Z. Ripley of Harvard, noted economist, expressed opposition to unification of the New England roads.

The governors' railroad committee has been considering the railroad situation since the interstate commerce commission announced its trunk line plan.

The conclusion of the skipper's visit in Washington was marked by his admission as honorary member of the National Aeronautic association, the first European and first lighter-than-air pilot to be given the distinction.

Senator Hiram Bingham, Connecticut, president of the association, made the presentation which enrolled Dr. Eckener as the twelfth honorary member. Only five of the other honoraries, all Americans, are alive—Orville Wright, Glenn Curtiss, Thomas A. Edison, Colonel Charles A. Lindbergh, and Rear Admiral Richard E. Byrd.

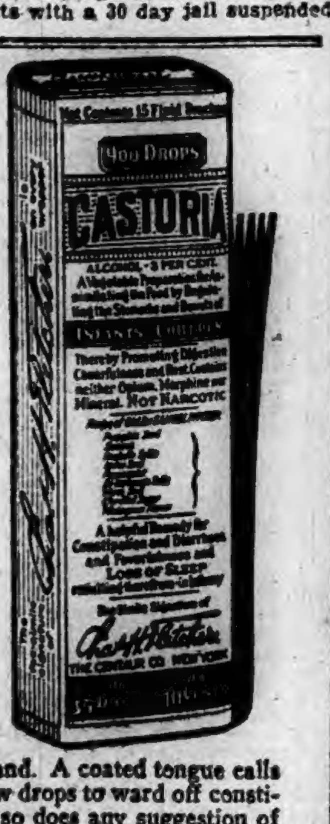
Restless Children



Children will fret, often for no apparent reason. But there's always one sure way to comfort a restless, fretful child. Castoria! Harmless as the recipe on the wrapper; mild and bland as it tastes. But its gentle action soothes a youngster more surely than some powerful medicine that is meant for the stronger systems of adults.

That's the beauty of this special children's remedy! It may be given the tiniest infant—as often as there is any need. In cases of colic, diarrhea, or similar disturbance, it is invaluable. But it has everyday uses all mothers should understand. A coated tongue calls for a few drops to ward off constipation; so does any suggestion of bad breath. Whenever children don't eat well, don't rest well, or have any little upset—this pure vegetable preparation is usually all that's needed to set everything to rights. Genuine Castoria has Chas. H. Fletcher's signature on the wrapper. Doctors prescribe it.

DANIELSON

MANY OPPOSE PLAN FOR TOWN TO BUY TRUCKS

(Special to The Bulletin.)

DANIELSON, April 3—It developed today that there is apt to be a very considerable debate in the talked of special town meeting to have the voters consider whether the town should purchase and operate its own motor trucks instead of hiring trucks to do road work. Proponents of the truck-buying pla nclaim that the town would be in a more advantageous position than at present and would save money by buying two or three small trucks, instead of hiring trucks at $15 a day.

On the other hand, there are those who have had much experience with trucks who dispute this. They point out that small trucks cannot do all the sorts of road work that the larger trucks that are hired do, especially as to honing and scraping roads. They also point out that the large trucks carry three yards of gravel to a load, whereas the small trucks carry only one yard. In other words, one large truck and one driver carries as much at one time as would three small trucks, requiring three drivers. It is further pointed out by some of those opposing the truck buying plan that the town does not keep hired trucks steadily employed. Last week was the first full week this year that a hired truck has ben at work. Considering the investment, wear and tear, insurance, driver's pay and other items of expense those who will oppose having the town buy trucks claim that the town is saving money by hiring.

The matter will likely be fully discussed at the special town meeting, the petition for which had not been filed up to late this afternoon.

"Sorry, but I'll have to take you along," the warden told them. "Sorry, but we can't go," one of the men replied; "we're already in jail." And such proved to be the case. PUTNAM, April 3—Rolling majestically over the rails of the Midland division of the New Haven railroad en route to New York and Washington, the crack flyer, "The Senator" slid into Putnam station at two o'clock today, took water and departed a few minutes later with orders to "hit the ball."

The small group of spectators who got a glimpse of the Senator were astonished with its striking appearance. Hauled by a giant engine that reflected the sun's rays from its glittering jet black body, the train was made up of several steel pullman coaches of luxurious design and construction. An observation car in the rear proudly displayed the train's shield and insignia which read, "Senator."

The "Yankee Clipper" the New Haven's fastest train which dethroned the Senator as a queen of the rails was slated to be detoured over the Midland division on its New York run from Boston, but before train time, wrecking crews at work on the clearing up of the derailment on the shore line west of East Lyme had opened one track and the train left on its regular route, snatching away the opportunity of those residing on the Midland, for a glimpse of the most famous train in the east.

Sent to Meriden School

Joseph Gothreau, 18, son of David Gothreau of this city was remanded to the Meriden State School for Boys this morning, from which institution he was paroled a few weeks ago after spending a year within its confines. Gothreau was arrested Wednesday evening by Sergt. A. J. Sponcey in connection with the theft of meal tickets from the Miller restaurant on Livery street a week ago. After questioning at the police station by Sergt. Sponcey, Gothreau admitted taking the tickets. He was questioned for information concerning numerous breaks in local stores which have occurred in the past month, but Sergt. Sponcey said this morning that he was satisfied that Gothreau was in no way implicated in this work. Upon the recommendation of local court authorities it was decided to re-commit Gothreau to the schol.

The case of Gothreau was cause for Judge M. H. Geissler to criticize the parole system of the state school which is undergoing an investigation. Judge Geissler expressed dislike for the parole methods which he said do not tend to improve the morals of a boy in any way, since by them he is allowed to return to his former environment and incidentally to the paths which were responsible for his faling into vice and being sent to the state institution. The magistrate cited the case of Gothreau, stating that he and other court officials had not been informed by the school officials of Gothreau's parole and learned of his discharge only today when he was presented in court on another charge.

Chief R. E. Thurston, Deputy Chief Dumas and the pumper company at the central fire station responded to a four call at 1:50 today for a grass fire on an open lot in the rear of 159 Walnut street. The flames were checked with a stream of water from the booster tank on the pumper, before damage to property was done. The property was owned by Joseph Schmanska of Walnut street.

INSANE WOMAN DIES FROM SELF-INFLICTED WOUNDS

(Special to The Bulletin)

PUTNAM, April 3—Stricken with violent insanity yesterday afternoon, Miss Annie Freudenthal, 54, of North Grosvenordale slashed her body in various places and died this morning at the State Hospital in Norwich from the effects of the wounds. She was rushed to the Norwich institution in the ambulance of the Day Kimball hospital and died there at 3:30 o'clock this morning.

Miss Freudenthal was a trained nurse and for a number of years was a nurse to the late Arthur S. Hardy, diplomat and author who died March 14 at his home in Woodstock hill.

There was no motive advanced today for the woman's tragic act. It was learned that she had suffered attacks of mental derangement and was committed to the state hospital for treatment. The superintendent of the institution is quoted as saying that she was discharged a few days ago and committed to the care of relatives, against his wishes and judgment.

Miss Freudenthal was born in Sweden, November 20, 1875, daughter of Eric and Alfrida (Ekstrom) Freudenthal. She is survived by several brothers and sisters.

TOLL ROAD IN CONNECTICUT

The proposal which is now before the New York legislature, and which may occupy a similar position before the general assembly of Connecticut, for a charter to construct a toll highway which is expected in time to extend from New York to Boston, is not a new one. It was advocated quite strongly last year, being brought at that time to the attention of the Connecticut legislature. It failed to get much attention, or support, at Hartford but lack of success there has not discouraged others in urging a similar move with the same object in view.

New York is expected to give its sanction to only such construction as would bring the road to the Connecticut line. From that point it rests with Connecticut and there is no reason to suppose that advantage would be taken of the right to go ahead in New York state unless Connecticut was favorably inclined.

Highway construction calls for a large outlay every year and annually there are new efforts made to relieve congestion by widening roads and removing handicaps. This section of the proposed road is at a point where there is heavy traffic, so much so that a second state highway has repeatedly been suggested in order to meet conditions and to relieve the crowding.

It is an unusual thing for private capital to ask to build highways in order to accommodate the requirements of the public, but such is done in the erection of bridges, and that was the method followed when highway construction was undertaken years ago. Toll roads were supposed to be things of the past, although evidences of them are still in existence, but in any such proposition today proper care is always taken to see that the state has an opportunity to acquire such enterprises when it desires.

The idea of having the proposed road follow the line of the New Haven railroad and to so build it that it will not be crossed by railroads or highways indicates a new and interesting feature. Connecticut hasn't warmed to such a proposition in the past, but the backers of this idea seem to think that such a big proposition should be left to private capital the same as railroad construction. It will probably be urged that those who wanted to use such a speedway could do so, relief would come to the state highway and the state would get a chance to devote more attention to the country roads.

CONN. AND TUBERCULOSIS

In the fight that has been made against tuberculosis, Connecticut has played an important part. For years it has maintained hospitals for the care of tubercular patients and they have given excellent results. Even though progress is being made in fighting the disease, and preventive measures are surrounding the public with greater protection, it is made apparent through the statement of the state tuberculosis commission that the provisions for taking care of the tuberculosis victims are insufficient.

While Connecticut has 860 beds in its sanatoria for tuberculosis sufferers it is disclosed by the commission that there are 330 others waiting a chance to get the benefit of hospital treatment who cannot be accommodated. This means in many cases that those whose cases might expect the most relief through early treatment are being obliged to wait for an uncertain period until others are discharged that room may be made for them.

This is, of course, a situation to which the state must and will give attention. It calls for increasing the equipment at the existing sanatoria or the establishment of additional ones. The results that are being obtained in the treatment of this disease, the relief that is afforded the sufferers and the protection that is given the general public are so valuable that the state cannot disregard the handicap which prevails or neglect to make the necessary provisions to overcome it.

The treatment of tuberculosis at sanatoria is no experiment. Connecticut was convinced of its merits and has received additional proof each year since joining in the fight to curtail the disease. The good work that has been done simply emphasizes the need of doing more. It is of the greatest importance that the benefits of hospital treatment should be secured in the earliest stages. That gives the best chance of successfully combating the disease and it is perfectly apparent that more public protection is assured when those who need and seek such treatment can find accommodations for them instead of being obliged to wait for long periods. The earlier the treatment the more certain and effective the results.

IN PALESTINE

At the time of the trouble in Palestine it was evident that there was a serious situation, but one which ought to yield to adjustments. The British commission has completed its investigation of the conditions there and has set them forth in a way which makes it apparent that there is something to be said on both sides, and therefore there is need for getting together in a manner that will eliminate any such clashes or ill feelings in the future. It is not the only territory where those of different views live together. If there is a will to meet the situation, the Jewish people and the Arabs should be able to devise a method of doing it, or to conform to such agreement as may be effected in their behalf.

It is the fear of the Arabs that they are going to be driven out of a country where they have reasons for believing they have a right to be. They object to the steps which threaten to put them under the control of those who are coming from other parts of the world. They do not like the regulations concerning the land, they are disturbed by the method of taxation and they are inclined to oppose whatever developments are undertaken that seem to handicap them to the advantage of the increasing Jewish population. They are suspicious and it has been impossible through such efforts as have been made to convince them that they are not going to be disturbed in their native land. They interpret every move as an act aimed directly at making it uncomfortable for them.

It is the object of the Zionists to make the most of their Palestine. They have great expectations there and they are putting reliance in the pledge made to them by the British. They are intent upon Jewish development and it is possible that they have not given thought to the irritation which their enthusiasm may have caused the Arabs. If so, it is apparent that there is an opportunity to cultivate a more tolerant attitude and to adopt measures that will remove the suspicion and unrest.

Bringing about peaceful relations in such a situation is not the easiest task that might be desired, and yet it must be realized that preventive measures to forestall any more outbreaks are unquestionably needed.

PENALTY OF A BAD PRACTICE

It is all well enough to be kindhearted and disposed to take a chance with your fellow man, but it doesn't always pay.

Many are those who have long since adopted the policy of refusing to yield to the appeals of those who seek a lift from the motorists. Undoubtedly there have been many instances where worthy persons have been ignored, but in such action there is the satisfaction of avoiding harm at the hands of such individuals.

There are those who will tell you if asked that they never refuse a request. Possibly they will always be able to say that they have never experienced any trouble therefrom but there is no telling how soon it will be their experience to stop for one of those highwaymen who has asked for and been given the privilege of holding them up, or shooting them on failure to hand over their money. That was the surprise party that was participated in by a motorist on the way to New York. His kind heartedness was rewarded by a gun in the ribs and soon after he knew that he had a couple of bullets in his anatomy. Why he didn't go the whole way and fork over his money after taking in the robber is a quandary. It is certain that he didn't expect any such thing, but he is like many another driver who has gone through the same experience. He put more trust in his fellow man than was justified. He refused to take a lesson from the price paid by others. Possibly he will do the same thing over again, but it is suspected that he will see no more of the thumb jerkers, and if others would do likewise they would be saved a lot of needless trouble. It is preferable to be wrong in the suspicion than to be made the target of a heartless robber when it can be easily avoided.

SPEED THE DAY

It can be readily understood that the marines would be happy if the period of their stay in Haiti were to be terminated tomorrow. That they cannot expect, although there are some who regard that as the thing to do in view of the report that has recently been made by the Hoover commission.

While it is the commission's opinion that the marines should be gotten out of the island republic as soon as possible, the members thereof know that it would be folly to undertake any such move right away. The commission points out that the Haitians have not been helped much by being taught to govern themselves. That they haven't gotten to the point of being able to take over the reins of their own government is perfectly evident, but whether it is because of the unwillingness to teach them or the lack of a desire to be shown seems to be answered by the fact that their efforts have been more in the way of obstruction than in helpful assistance.

Whether they will be in a position to actually carry on the government by the time this country is ready to leave them in charge remains to be seen. Much depends upon the Haitians. They must realize that they are being given the chance, those of them who are intellectually able to grasp it, and it will be watched with interest to see how good use they make of it.

Under such conditions the withdrawal of those who have been responsible for much good in the island must be gradual. If the Haitians themselves are prepared to do as much for their country as they should they are being given the opportunity to demonstrate it and the quicker they can prove it the happier this country will be. Nothing would please Uncle Sam more than to be able to admit that our marines could be called home tomorrow without any fear of what might result in Haiti.

REDWOODS HAVE TALES

Kay glanced from her [illegible] office toward the sinking sun, gradually beginning to dip its lowering circle into the blue [illegible] of Pacific San Francisco and [illegible] a charming silhouette in the distance.

The Sunrise Lumber company had its offices in an old house beside waters where [illegible] lumber barges and boats from Norway loaded with fragrant pine. Her gaze returned to snapshots taken of her employer's son in lumberman's garb, his handsome face intent on [illegible] in a huge cut redwood.

The telephone interrupted her thoughts. "Hello, Sunrise," came the voice, pleasant but perturbed. "Let me talk to the purchasing agent. Redwood City, camp No. 16, speaking."

"Sorry," Kay replied. "He's not here. I'm the assistant—at your service."

"Great guns!" groaned the voice. "I want to talk to somebody who knows tree cutting equipment, donkeys, cable—quien sabe? Get me your yard man."

"He's down at the waterfront." Then defiantly: "I know tree equipment and various kinds of donkeys."

"Do you know the brand of cable we've been using?"

"Wribbling's No. 166," returned Kay.

"Well, that's not what we want. One of that type cable just broke. We're in a mess. We want No. 109. We've used it for the larger redwoods. There's but one conveyance up here before next Tuesday, the 9 o'clock dinky due tomorrow morning, and I want that cable tomorrow!"

"Nine o'clock dinky and you want it delivered tomorrow. I shall see to it myself," and with a note of concise finality the little French telephone received a bang that was truly Irish.

Kay called Wribblings. But her spirits sank at the unanswered ringing. She crushed on an old soft hat, slipped into a thick woolly coat and jumped into her roadster. Deftly she drove to the wharf, where she slid her machine into the lower hold of the waiting ferry. An endless twenty minutes before the churning wheels of the boat stopped and then the Alameda Plus nosed her way up to the Frisco docks. Speeding along Market street, Kay stopped before the warehouse of Wribbling & Son.

Wribbling's watchman greeted her skeptically, but her company's prestige soon overruled any hesitancy and Kay trudged untiringly, finally stopping before No. 166's huge spools.

That night an engineer threw all reserve to the mountains. No comfortable place for a lady on the flat cars, so Kay coolly drowsed in his cabin while the dinky noisily snorted. A bright sun announcing day awakened Kay and at 9 o'clock the chugging engine came to a stop.

High towering redwoods. The girl held her breath in ecstasy, but quickly awakened from her reverie at the sight of a young man jumping easily over fallen logs.

"To whom am I indebted for this—er—prize package?" stammering as two brown eyes coolly gazed upon her smiling features. The voice over the telephone—her employer's son!

"You're indebted to Wribblings, the engineer, and the party who is acquainted with donkeys—oh—"

Kay's speech was brave, but at its close she dropped.

"I guess I'm hungry."

After a wonderful luncheon Kay heard familiar voices and her employer walked into her presence, accompanied by his son. The anxiety for the cable was explained, being due to the precarious position of the half-cut trees.

Three evenings later, by the old mill in Mill Valley, Kay's home, a man looked deep into the eyes of a maid.

"Kay, I know it's doing this up quickly, but you're a fast worker, too. You brought me a good line. Isn't there more attached to it?"

With a westerner's impetuosity he took a great deal for granted and Kay found words could not be uttered from lips under pressure of the moment. Mount Tamalpais remained [illegible] yet viewing all, as the jack of lumber and his queen found their hearts smitten with splinters from the skyscrapers of nature—the mighty redwoods.—Chicago News.

YOUR HEALTH

Fresh Air School Rooms

By Charles R. Grandy, M. D., Norfolk, Virginia.

(From Gorgas Memorial Institute)

In almost every large school you will find a number of children who are not able to keep up with their classes on account of frequent absences due to ill health. These children are perfectly normal from a mental standpoint, indeed some of them can be classed as very bright, but they cannot overcome the handicap due to frequent absence. The teacher in the regular class has not the time to give them the special attention which they require; so they become a burden on her and a handicap to the class.

As all of these children are physically unfit, the first thing needed is a good medical examination to determine where the trouble lies and how it can be corrected. After obtaining the consent and cooperation of the parents, each child should get a thorough health examination including a complete physical examination, various laboratory examinations, a skin tuberculin test, and possibly an x-ray examination. It is also very necessary to look into the child's manner of living, to get the full cooperation of the mother, and to correct the home conditions which are frequently responsible for the child's ill health. The first examination, however, is not the only thing the doctor should do, but the child should be sent to him regularly for inspection to see whether there is progress and if there is need of further treatment.

All over the country the schools have been trying to solve the problem of the physically sub-normal children by placing them in separate small classes where the teacher will be able to give them individual attention. These rooms are operated so as to give the children the best obtainable surroundings. First it is seen that they get a larger amount of fresh air by always keeping the windows open, from which circumstance these rooms have been named, Fresh Air Rooms. The temperature is also kept lower than in the ordinary school room, although not so low as to make them uncomfortable. An opportunity for extra rest is given by furnishing cots, and extra nourishment by furnishing well balanced lunches.

"Facing Difficulty"

SCRIPTURE: Memory Verse: "Be of good courage and the Lord will strengthen thine heart" (Psalm 27:14). Read: Psalm 27.

MEDITATION: One must have the mental and moral courage to face facts honestly and without flinching. One must see his antagonist squarely if he is to take his full measure. Fear to know facts often makes the facts seem more terrible than they are. Fear is a fog, that makes specters out of lamp posts. It is sometimes desirable that one should admit unpleasant facts to others. Confession gives outlet to strong emotion that otherwise turns in and may often accumulate dangerously. Better tell a friend your trouble than to break, in trying to cover it up and to carry it by yourself. True pride that will not burden another should not degenerate into false pride that will not admit difficulty. Courage to face facts alone and with others is the surest way to discover adequate resources with which to meet them.

PRAYER: O God, we desire above all else to be honest with Thee, with ourselves and with others. Give us sense and courage to look life in the face and to stand before facts without evasion. Deliver us from false pride and self-pity and give us the calm of those who put their trust in Thee, the living God. Amen.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Broadcasting and Telegraph Service

Mr. Editor: It was interest and pleasure that I noted the letters from Skeptical Merchant and Geo. E. Pitcher on Norwich being "on the air." Since I read the former, I myself have been interviewed—requested to give something "for the broadcast." Incidentally, I may say my solicitor did not receive anything.

With business conditions the way they are—wouldn't it be much more advisable if the Norwich chamber of commerce spent some $3,200 in trying to secure new industries? Or making efforts along the lines of municipal improvements?

Mr. Pitcher thinks as I do in regard to "hundreds of millions" listening in to the Norwich program. With all due respect to the chamber of commerce, WTIC is not listened to with such attention as they may have been led to think. And as Brother Pitcher said, those west of the Mississippi will be asleep by the time this program is to go on the air. Also, it might be interesting data for the chamber of commerce to have on hand—the entire population of the United States will be accurately given out within a short time and it might be a good thing to keep this information on file—I believe the estimated population at present is 123,000,000. Surely, even the chamber of commerce couldn't expect the entire United States to be listening in—even if it happened to be a good program.

And a little about historical facts. I for one know that Norwich need not expect such an unusual amount of trading activity from the tourists to repay in any way, shape or manner the $3,200 being outlayed. The Norwich chamber of commerce would secure much more tourist trade if it went about the securing of suitable tourist camp facilities and erected signs informing the tourist that such facilities were available.

As Brother Pitcher said, our telegraph service on Sundays is terrible. In an emergency we need speedy service and need it badly and we want it at all times. That's another thing the chamber of commerce might interest itself in, and let the broadcasting honors go to Graham McNamee and a few others who know their business a little better.

A Washington Bystander

By KIRKE L. SIMPSON
Associated Press Staff Writer

WASHINGTON, April 3—One lad who ought to have a very considerable personal interest in the Pennsylvania senatorial primary fight is Dave Reed, senior senator from that state.

Being a member of the London naval conference delegation, he has been out of the political news in these piping pre-election times at home; but it all has a great deal of significance for him, nevertheless.

Suppose Jim Davis did win out and ultimately was elected to the senate. That would give the smoky city of Pittsburg two senatorships, as both Reed and Davis hail from that noted steel center.

Despite an historic background of brotherly love, Pennsylvania afore time has shown a disinclination to put all its senatorial eggs in one municipal basket. It's an accepted axiom of state politics that neither Philadelphia nor Pittsburg can have both senatorships.

Technicality

Back in the days when that old master of Pennsylvania politics, Boies Penrose, and Philander Knox held down the two seats, they were set down in official records as Penrose of Philadelphia and Knox of Pittsburg.

As a matter of fact, the Knox ancentral home and place of his actual abode was at Valley Forge, near Philadelphia. Having started his political career in Pittsburg, however, Senator Knox maintained an apartment or something in that city to make good his politico-geographical location.

Senator Reed will not be up again until 1935. Assuming, however—and some Pennsylvanians in Washington were prompt to make that assumption—that Davis won out in the senatorial primary and subsequent election to capture the seat now held by Senator "Old Joe" Grundy, it might make things troublesome for Reed his next time at bat.

Muddle

All of which undoubtedly has its part in accounting for the extraordinary efforts made in Washington and in Pittsburg to smooth out the vexing muddle as to who is to be G. O. P. candidate for the senate from Pennsylvania in the fall.

Similarly difficult situations in Kentucky and New Jersey were attacked via diplomatic appointments for sitting senators. It is not to be doubted that administration stalwarts would have been glad to confer an overseas job, any job, on Secretary Jim in lieu of his senatorial aspirations. It is an entirely different question as to how he might have reacted to an offer.

BURGESS BEDTIME STORY

Why Some Ducks Were Left Behind

These menfolk seem to think that might
Is all that's needed to make right.
—Mrs. Quack.

Mrs. Quack had told Peter Rabbit that oil was the cause of some of her troubles on her long journey up from the Sunny South. Peter didn't even know what oil was, but of course he was curious to know all about it.

"It is something that is on the water—something man puts there," explained Mrs. Quack. "It doesn't mix with the water, but floats on top. If a Duck, or other bird that swims on the water, doesn't see it and gets into

"Why don't they wash the oil off?" Peter asked trouble, it is dreadful. Yes, sir, it is dreadful."

"Why is it dreadful?" persisted Peter.

"Because," replied Mrs. Quack, "it gets our feathers all matted together. Birds often get in such condition that they cannot fly. We had to leave two of our flock behind us two days ago." Mrs. Quack said this sadly.

"Do you mean you left them behind because they couldn't fly?" Peter asked. "That's it," replied Mrs. Quack. "They couldn't fly and they were sick besides. I think the oil made them sick. It gets worse and worse."

"But where does it all come from?" cried Peter.

"I don't know just where it all comes from," replied Mrs. Quack, "but a lot of it comes from big ships. Of course you don't know what a ship is. It is a great big boat that ever so many men can live on at one time. And it sails on the ocean. You don't know what the ocean is? It is a great body of water and the water is salt."

"I shouldn't like that," said Peter.

"Oh, that's all right," replied Mrs. Quack, "when you can fly to fresh water when you are thirsty and when you are hungry. There are some Ducks that live on fish and get all their food in the salt water. Of course, we Mallard Ducks get our food in fresh water. But when we are journeying we do sometimes spend some of our time on salt water; especially where the salt water runs way up into the land, as it does in many places. It was in one of these places that we found the oil two days ago. Two of the flock had become separated from us and got into the oil before they saw it. We missed them. When we found them we knew that they wouldn't be able to come on with us. I don't like to think what will happen to them."

"Why don't they wash the oil off?" Peter asked.

"Oil will not wash off," replied Mrs. Quack. "There is no way we can get it off. Once a bird has it in his or her feathers, it is there to stay. It is awful! And all the time it is getting worse. Man seems to be using more and more oil. It isn't always on the salt water that we find it. Sometimes we find it on the big rivers. It not only makes danger for us, but it kills the fish and it kills the water plants. The longer I live, the more I wonder that I'm alive. These two-legged creatures called men are the most selfish creatures in all the Great World. They seldom think of anybody but themselves."

"Farmer Brown's Boy thinks of other people," spoke up Peter.

"That's so," replied Mrs. Quack. "I wish there were more like him. I wonder if he'll bring us any corn. I certainly would like a good dinner of corn."

The next story: "Mrs. Quack Gets Her Corn."

A HISTORY OF CONNECTICUT INDUSTRY

Released by Manufacturers Association of Connecticut

G. F. Heublein & Bro., Hartford

The firm of G. F. Heublein & Bro., incorporated in the state of Connecticut in 1901, is the outgrowth of a small business started by Gilbert F. and Louis F. Heublein over a half century ago. As importers and exporters of fine liquors and wines they gradually extended their business to food specialties of the kind that appeal to the palates of the discriminating public. Among their activities was the operation of a hotel and probably no hotel ever enjoyed the enviable reputation for the excellence of its cuisine; due in no small degree to the fact that Gilbert F. Heublein himself is a master of culinary art.

About 25 years ago arrangements were made with the English concern of Brand & Co. for the introduction of A. 1. sauce in this country. This sauce was originated by Brand while he was chef to the royal household of King George the IV, and it was the king who suggested the name by commenting upon it as being A. 1.

Because of the fine quality, savory flavor and the reputation of the house sponsoring its introduction in the United States, the use of A. 1. sauce as a household condiment spread very rapidly. Today it is sold and used in every city and town in the country. No first class hotel, restaurant, club or dining car is without it. Since the advent of prohibition it has become the main business of the company.

About 15 years ago the demand reached such a magnitude that it was deemed advisable to establish a factory in this country and a modern plant was established in Hartford. The same formula that Brand used is being used today, only under a more exacting sanitary conditions.

The present officers are: Gilbert F. Heublein, president; Arthur C. Heublein, vice president; Jacob Baigley, treasurer; Kelsey F. Lingo, secretary.

IS it any wonder that your youngster is nauseated if he is suffering from worms, poisoned with their secretions and robbed of nourishment? Worms are much more common than most mothers think:

Wise mothers take no chances with these dangerous and disgusting childhood pests. Even if worms are only suspected they give the child

SUPT. GENTER REPORTS TO CONFERENCE ON NORWICH METHODIST DISTRICT

Rev. Myron E. Genter, superintendent of the Norwich district of the Methodist Episcopal church, presented his annual report Thursday at the New England southern conference in New London. The district superintendent's report follows:

Dear Crusaders with the Son of God:

Again and for the fifth time, I present the annual report of this district, confident that the churches have had splendid achievement, which will appear in the official statistics. My conviction has been this year as well as every other year, that the church is not for marking time but for making history.

The long distances of travel, totalling about 20,000 miles have not seemed tedious for there has been awareness of the presence of the Father; a comradeship with the Christ has been real, and the Holy Spirit has never failed as a guiding, strengthening, empowering friend.

The new system of Zion's Herald, our area religious weekly, in printing news letters from each district, presents some difficulties in preparing this report but we shall try to avoid needless repetition and yet conserve what is essential for the official journal of the conference.

Changes In Appointment

Soon after the close of the last conference, Rev. H. H. Conklin was sought for a pulpit in Jacksonville, Florida. He was transferred by Bishop Anderson, and Rev. J. Manly Shaw, son of a distinguished member of the New England conference, was transferred in from Indiana to fill the vacancy, at Baltic and Versailles and has given unusual leadership.

Last September, Rev. F. O. Burnett, student supply at Hockanum, was given appointment at Riverside, California, and the Rev. John Pearce, retired, was secured and has acceptably supplied this church.

There has been little sickness reported among our ministers, and this has helped the work to move steadily forward.

Spiritual Adventuring

In assembling information for this phase of church work, it becomes clear that many different methods prevail in evangelism. Some use the evening service throughout the year; some with specific message once a month, and several churches use personal workers over periods of time in addition to public meetings to win new disciples to Jesus Christ, as well as to build out characters of believers in large proportions.

In Hazardville, 24 laymen came forward at worship and were dedicated to such a task. In South Manchester, groups of adults deliberately sought adults and nearly a hundred were received into the membership recently.

The results as indicated for this report are as follows: There have been 225 preparatory members received by 27 churches. Thirty churches report receiving 255 persons into full membership and the seven leading are in the order named: South Manchester, Norwich Town, Uncasville, Danielson, Baltic, Hazardville and Moosup.

Twenty-four churches report a net gain in membership during the year, two-thirds as many report the same as last year and the remainder a slight loss.

The data on religious education shows several means used in addition to the regular church school on the Lord's day.

Several use the children's church, at worship, and some apart from it, on the Sunday morning. Several have special training classes during the week, as led by the pastor or others. Three report week day schools, one day a week. Ten churches conducted daily vacation Bible schools last summer.

Ninety-seven of our young people are in secondary schools or college. Seven churches report very happy inter-denominational relations with others in community federations.

Our church schools for the most part are well graded, and about one-half are departmentalized and doing good work.

The Epworth Leagues, as a rule, submit very encouraging reports. The two very active mid-winer institutes, with programs covering several weeks, and with visitations to as many churches, each averaged about 100 at each meeting, and this substitute may have much to do with the decrease during the summer when many young people find employment.

The Ladies' Aid societies have never done better work than during the last year. Our women's missionary societies seem to find a way of keeping the urge and setting the pace in this endeavor.

The camp meeting at Willimantic, last season was well up to the high standard of recent years, with morning classes, afternoon inspiration periods and evening messages and evangelism. The music provided is of very unusual order, the attendances, both week days and Sundays, are large and the finances show good balances after unusual upkeep items, running into hundreds of dollars have been paid. This place is a veritable religious shrine to hundreds of people in the summer time.

Worshipful observance of the Lenten period, for deepening of the spiritual life is increasing and actual reports of gains for the year will not be possible, because of accessions on Palm Sunday and Easter, which will not be celebrated until after this conference.

Church Property

To properly house the activities of the modern church, so as to enlist many new people and enrich the lives of all, these thousands of people, and adherents, requires much of money for repairs and improvements in addition to the growing budgets, for other purposes.

On repairs and improvements, the following entries may be itemized:

At Baltic, the church grounds have been greatly improved while at Versailles, a new pipe organ is being installed, and $500 of the cost is paid. The balance is provided for the completion.

Danielson has spent $350 in interior of vestry and gymnasium. East Blackstone has placed an electric pump in the parsonage and furnished a pastor's room.

East Glastonbury has painted the church and parsonage and repaired the church vestry and class rooms, at a cost of $1,052.

East Hampton has improved parsonage with new bath room at an expense of $425. East Hartford has painted the parsonage and made repairs at a cost of $250. Gales Ferry has renovated the church temple and renewed parts at a cost of $1,047. Also moving picture machine $150.

Glendale has shingled the roof, costing $300. Hazardville has placed new furnishings in parsonage, new floors, and new garage at a cost of $860. Hockanum has spent $1,000 on the church and Mapleville $100 on its organ.

The church at Millville secured pews and pulpit furniture from the Bridgeton church, through our conference trustees and complete renovation, repairs and labor cost was $350.

Moosup has painted church and parsonage and improved grounds, foundations and trees which cost $1,500 and is paid.

Mystic has paid $150 for repairs and new bath room at parsonage. North Grosvenordale has spent for repairs, heating plant, floors in vestry, the sum of $1,555 with $511 yet to provide.

Norwich Town, redecoration of temple within and repairs, $350.

Norwich, Trinity, repairs on parsonage, vestry and kitchen, new furnace, rebuilding organ and alterations, a total of $5,478, more than half of which is paid and the remainder provided.

Old Mystic has improved the parsonage at a cost of $165.

Portland, new chimney and building playground, $200. Putnam has redecorated the vestry at a cost of $250. New lights installed at Quarryville, cost $150. South Coventry spent on repairs at parsonage $100 and much labor donated. Stafford Springs has spent on roof, tower and other repairs of church, with furnishings for parsonage, $1,125. Thompsonville has spent on parsonage and church, $250. Tolland thoroughly renovated the parsonage, walls, floors and heating system at a cost of $600.

Uncasville has completed its new church building with a total valuation, including site, about $60,000. The total amount raised by this heroic people toward the cost has been $48,000 and the remainder will be taken care of over a period of years.

Westerly has improved its playground, deed to which was also secured this year and is free of debt, $150. Windsorville has provided a new furnace for the church and a friend gave the cost of a new well, artesian, making a total of $419.

Willimantic has spent $150 on repairs in its vestry.

This makes a total of $79,231 for repairs, improvements and construction during the year.

The district parsonage in Norwich has also had repairs and improvements, including new furnishings at a cost of $250.

East Hartford, reduction on church, $750; Gales Ferry, on parsonage, $100; Glendale, on church, $200; Thompsonville, on church, $1,300; Westerly, old current expense, $500; Mystic, on church debt, $1,500, as transferred from invested fund; New London, on church, $925; total paid on debts, $5,175.

General Finance

Most of our churches adopt a budget, and make an every member canvass to provide for the same. One pastor reports a "hit or miss plan". I notice that church usually misses. Last May 7-17 we secured the services of an expert, Rev. Dr. H. Reeves Calkins, who made an itinery of the district, speaking at eight different centers, and each church in close proximity sent representatives. This helped to stabilize our response when the stock market and depression in industry were handicaps. It helped pastors and laymen to hold steady and placed this district at the head of the area in gains for world service last October.

Benevolences

Twenty-nine churches report they will contribute more than last year for world service, and Attawaugan leads the smaller churches with a gain of more than 20 per cent. South Manchester leads the larger group, with about $1,000 increase last year. It may be interesting to note some methods used to secure the large interest in the world program. Returned missionaries have spoken in churches, projects in mission fields have been visualized and been adopted, the parish abroad has been chosen by, one; pageants, dramas, literature, sermons and addresses have been used but a new Pentecost is imperative to make interest abide and increase. The other benevolences according to reports received will be as usual

Forty-five churches have accepted the askings as their goals for the next year, three have exceeded these and the remainder have accepted slightly less, due to depression. We hope to reach these goals and believe God will have some "pretty ways of Providence", to aid if we do our best.

Gifts and Bequests

Hazardville has a new, beautiful large silk flag, as the gift of Mrs. William Bridge.

South Manchester benefits by the memorial gift of Mrs. A. L. Crowell, in honor of her brother, and the income on this, $10,000, is to be for the music of the church.

Uncasville was happily surprised as concluding of building the church when a friend, whose name is withheld, placed a beautiful, electrically controlled pipe organ, valued at not less than $2,500.

Voluntown benefits by income of $5,250 left by will of Mrs. Peabody of Westerly, and Vernon by lapsed annuity of $1,424 of estate of L. A. Merrill, account of the W. F. M. S., Vernon.

Willimantic is richer by $5,000 as a gift of Mrs. Eliza Barr. Winsorville received the gift of a reed organ for the temple, from South Winsdor Congregational church.

The pastors are frequently emphasizing the need of persons remembering the church as their spiritual mother, both by gift and will. Total of gifts and bequests is over $26,000.

Salaries of Pastors

Due to temporary depression which is abroad, and the short time employment of recent months, but more to lack of vision than anything else, the increase in salaries for pastors will not exceed $1,200 on the district. Revision at first quarterly conferences, makes it unwise to itemize here. The time has come when our laymen cannot hope to have highly trained spiritual leaders resident in the community, supervising the most vital interests of life, death and destiny, for less than the unschooled artisan of the factory. The demands of the age and the sheer cost of existence now demand an average salary of not less than $2,000 and house. The wealth is at hand, and churches cannot afford to withhold from the man of God, who directly ministers to the supreme interests of life. The minister must care for his household or "be worse than an infidel."

Church Literature

Replies to the questionaire indicate that 401 Zions Herald papers go into our homes; the Christian Advocate furnishes about 23 copies and the Epworth Herald, about one hundred. Many other periodicals of a religious nature are also taken.

UNFROCKED MINISTER SEEKS CONFERENCE REINSTATEMENT

NEW LONDON, April 3.—(AP)—The New England southern conference of the Methodist Episcopal church, meeting here for the 90th annual convention, today considered in an executive session the application of Guy Willis Holmes, of New Bedford, Mass. unfrocked by the church in 1926, for reinstatement.

While no announcement was made following the meeting, it was reported that Holmes' letter of application was placed on file.

The unfrocked minister was charged at the 1926 conference with immorality and conduct unbecoming a minister, his name being linked with that of Miss Antoinette Fortin, of New Bedford. He was tried while the conference sat at South Manchester and later the grand jury at Boston considered the case.

Holmes, in his letter to the conference, it is understood, said that he will institute legal action if his application is denied. He said he considered the action of the church in expelling him an injustice and desired to have his moral character cleared.

BUSINESS WOMEN'S CLUB FOR JUNIOR HIGH SCHOOL

The Business and Professional Women's club Thursday evening unanimously went on record as favorable to the junior high school plan advanced and recommended by the town school board. The affirmative vote followed a talk on the junior high school question by Edward J. Graham, superintendent of schools.

It was a special meeting held at the Church of the Good Shepherd—Universalist—for the purpose of hearing Supt. Graham explain the new school project. At 6:15 o'clock there was a delicious supper menu provided by the Ladies' Aid society of the church. Following the supper Miss Bernice E Willey, the president, called the club meeting to order and presented Mr. Graham. After Mr. Graham's talk there was a lively discussion of the school project which was followed by the unanimous vote in favor of the plan as outlined by Supt. Graham.

WESTERLY APARTMENT HOUSE DAMAGED BY FIRE

(Special to The Bulletin)

WESTERLY, April 4.—Fire of undetermined origin starting in the partition walls of the two-story wooden frame six-apartment house, 134-144 Canal street, was the cause of an alarm being sent in at 1 o'clock this morning from Box No. 71, Canal and Pleasant streets. Fire Chief George E. Egger and three pieces of apparatus responded and found smoke coming from the end apartment occupied by Mrs. Josephina Lupica at 134 Canal street.

The firemen raised ladders and cut holes in the outside walls from which the flames shot until put out by streams of water. Lines of booster hose were taken inside, holes cut in the walls and the flames extinguished. Several hundred dollars damage was done by fire, smoke and water. The recall was sounded about 2 a. m.

SPEAKS ON SUBJECT OF DIVINE PROVIDENCE

Rev. Charles N. Arbuckle of Newton Center, Mass., speaking Thursday night at the Central Baptist church in the series of services under the auspices of the Y. M. C. A. and the churches, discussed the subject of "Divine Providence" in an interesting way.

Referring to the words of Jesus when He said that no sparrow falleth to the ground without the Heavenly Father's knowledge, the speaker said that in this was a revealing hint on the question of divine providence. Jesus said "I know all about what is going to happen to you." This old world is a hazardous place to live in, but what a dead world it would be without hazards, but these are what break our lives and our hearts. This is a world of law and of moral freedom. Because you can help people, you can also hurt them. Because you can do wrong, you can do right. God doesn't will the sins of the world, but they became inevitable when he gave us moral freedom. He is not a capricious God, he is no despot, He never compels me or drive me, but he wins me to Christ. He has made His laws so that if we follow them the results are certain. Sometimes these laws seem to hurt unjustly, said the speaker, as he referred to cases of sudden death and calamity. In this world of hazards these things are likely to happen, Dr. Arbuckle declared, but Jesus offers us His infinite sympathy when he says "In this world ye shall have tribulation but be of good cheer I have overcome the world." If you could take all the suffering out of the world, all the hazards out of life, you would take out all character, all courage, patience, adventure, heroism, all art and music inspired by Christ. He was free to say "Father, into thy hands I commend my spirit" and when He said that He justified the world's fallen sparrows.

Rev. Alexander H. Abbott of the United Congregational church and Deacon C. Edward Smith took part in the service and Rev. Dr. Arbuckle announced that he would speak this (Friday) upon "The Meaning of Forgiveness." This meeting will close the series.

The collection was for the Chinese relief fund.

DENIES PERMISSION FOR PASTEURIZATION PLANT

The city and town zoning board has denied the application of Samuel A. Antzis and Philip H. Sheridan of this city for permission to establish a pasteurization plant, and milk bottling and distributing station, on land on West Thames street owned by John Tomarowich. The proposed location of the plant was near Uncas-on-Thames, the state tuberculosis sanatorium.

Antzis and Sheridan appeared before the board Wednesday, seeking permission to establish the milk station on the land, but considerable objection was voiced by officials of the Norwich inn and Norwich Golf club and Dr. Hugh B. Campbell, superintendent of Uncas-on-Thames. Dr. Campbell in objecting stated that such a plant in the vicinity of his institution would be a menace to the peace and well-being of the patients there. Mr. Antzis, it is understood, is considering an appeal to the superior court. The zoning board's decision, announced Thursday, follows:

After public hearing held in accordance with the law, at which hearing the appellants appeared and were heard, the board finds as follows:

That the application of the ordinances and regulations of the town of Norwich relating to zoning be adhered to and not waived in the matter of the proposed pasteurization plant and milk bottling and distributing station asked for by the appellants and which they desire to erect and maintain on land now owned by John Tomarowich and situated on the westerly side of West Thames street, town of Norwich.

Whereupon, it is decided and adjudged that the appeal of S. A. Antzis and Philip H. Sheridan be not granted, and that no variation or modification be made by this board in the application of any of the regulations or provisions of the ordinances of the town of Norwich, Conn., relating to the use, construction, alteration or erection of buildings or use of land insofar as they apply to the appeal of S. A. Antzis and Philip H. Sheridan and to the land now owned by John Tomarowich located on West Thames street, town of Norwich.

WATERBURY RECTOR GIVES LENTEN SERMON HERE

We must put into practice what we believe; also faith, if without works, is dead in itself, said Rev. Henry B. Todd, rector of Trinity church, Waterbury, Tuesday evening at Christ Episcopal church. Rev. Mr. Todd was the preacher at the final united lenten service held by Christ and Trinity churches. The leader of the service was Rev. Thomas Richey, the rector, assisted by Archdeacon J. Eldred Brown, rector of Trinity church.

We must realize faith is a process, said the preacher, which must be able to meet toils, temptations. The speaker likened the development of faith to the oak tree. He said that faith was a starting point and urged his audience to add to their faith, virtue, temperance, self-control, patience, godliness, brotherly kindness and charity. We must constantly add to our faith; we must move forward like the growth of the oak and make expression of our faith. There is that stirring within us to progress and make our religious relationship between us and God.

Rev. Mr. Richey announced that there would be no service at the church next Thursday evening but that on Friday evening Bishop E. Campion Acheson would be here to have charge of a confirmation service to be held at 7:30 o'clock.

He also made mention of the fact that the two churches would join in a service Good Friday afternoon, when his father, Rev. Mr. Richey, rector of St. John's church, Wilmington, Del. will be the speaker.

There was a large attendance at the service Thursday evening, previous to which a short organ recital was rendered by the organist, Arthur Hall.

BRUSH FIRE CALL TO ORCHARD ST. NEIGHBORHOOD

A bell alarm from box 221, Orchard and Beach streets, called out the fire department at 12:09 o'clock for a brush fire on property owned by Henry Sacadeles and located on Orchard street. The recall was sounded a few minutes after the alarm.

An hour earlier the firemen responded to a call to rescue a cat from the roof of the Central Baptist church. The animal was unable to make its way down to the street from the roof.

At 9:58 a. m., the firemen were called out for a brush fire on property owned by Mrs. Mary Sullivan and Jerry Lefleur on West Thames street.

Stomach Upset

Get at the real cause. That's what thousands of stomach sufferers are doing now. Instead of taking tonics or trying to patch up a poor digestion, they are attacking the real cause of the ailment—clogged liver and disordered bowels.

Dr. Edwards Olive Tablets help arouse the liver in a soothing, healing way. When the liver and bowels are performing their natural functions, people rarely suffer from indigestion and stomach troubles.

Have you a bad taste, coated tongue, poor appetite, a lazy, don't-care feeling, no ambition or energy, trouble with undigested foods? Try Olive Tablets, the substitute for calomel.

Dr. Edwards Olive Tablets are a purely vegetable compound. Know them by their olive color. They do the work without griping, cramps or pain. All druggists. 15c, 30c and 60c.

Take one or two at bedtime for quick relief. Eat what you like.

Prepare them NOW for vigorous hair at thirty!

The easiest way to care for a child's hair properly, is with Danderine. Put a little on the brush each time the hair is arranged. Then as you draw it through the strands, it supplies the natural oils removed from hair and scalp by washing with soap and water.

"Train" a child's hair with Danderine. See how this keeps it orderly, lustrous, clean. The natural curl is accentuated. A girl's waves "set" with it stay in longer; look more natural. And Danderine isn't sticky or oily: doesn't show.

When the use of Danderine becomes a daily habit in your home, longer, thicker, more abundant hair is sure to follow—for every member.

Danderine helps stop falling hair: dissolves every particle of dandruff crust: keeps the hair and scalp clean and healthy: changes dull, brittle, lifeless hair into hair that is sparkling, vigorous, easy to manage. Five million bottles used a year proves Danderine's effectiveness.

She was taken to a hospital, where it was stated that she would be a patient but a day or two.

PROMINENT COLORED MAN SAMUEL ROBINSON DEAD

(Special to The Bulletin)

He was about 52, and was prominent in the social and political activities of the colored race.

AUGUSTUS STOREY, U. S. C. G., DISAPPEARS STRANGELY

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, April 3—Augustus Storey, 38, a member of the U. S. Coast Guard and a chief petty officer of the crew of the destroyer Erickson, state pier, is missing and there are fears that the sailor has met with foul play. He is married, his wife and two children residing at 18 Lewis street. There is no logical reason, so far as an investigation has shown, why foul play should be conected with the disapaparance of the man. Storey, who has an excellent record in the federal service, was aboard the destroyer this morning at 10 o'clock, when he requested permission to go to his home to do some errand. The request was granted. When Storey did not return to the boat an inquiry was started and it was revealed that he had not been home. Because of Storey's excellent record as a service man it is hard to conceive anyone seeking injury to him, yet when he did not go to his home and no account of the man could be obtained, coast guard authorities requested assistance of the local police in seeking his whereabouts.

WOMEN AND SAILORS IN COURT ON USUAL CHARGE

Marian Lewis, 36, colored, residing at 260 Main street; Mary Coggins, 20, and colored, of the same address, and Carl Jacobs, Frederick Wolfe, J. J. Connell, John Hamby, A. E. McCloskey and Chester Marlowe, all white and sailors, members of the crew of the U. S. Coast Guard destroyer Fanning, state pier, were in the police court this morning. The Lewis woman answered to a charge of conducting a disorderly house and the other woman and the sailors were charged with frequenting. The Lewis woman, who has a long police court record on charges principally of conducting a disorderly house or soliciting, for she has been arrested 16 times, was fined $100 and costs and was sentenced to 60 days in jail. She filed notice of an appeal. The Coggins woman was fined $15 and costs; the sailors were given suspension of judgment. The arrest of the women and sailors was made last night when information was obtained by the police that a "free-and-easy" was in progress at the Main street house. A raiding squad, Sergeant Samuel Hick and Patrolmen Dennis Murphy and George Bruhns, went to the house and found the sailors and two Negresses in a room with indications that everything was arranged for a "good time." The police broke up the party by arresting the entire gang. The Lewis woman, until a few weeks ago, resided on Potter street. She vacated the premises March 2nd when she was tried in the police court on the same charge as that of today and when she was fined $100 and sentenced to jail for 30 days. At that time, the woman gave notice of appeal, but subsequently vacated it, paying the fine and serving the jail sentence.

Genaro Menghi, 8 Summer street, was charged with reckless driving. The case was continued to Saturday next. Menghi was arrested last Monday on Ocean avenue by Automobile Patrol Officer George Cockell.

Harold E. Palmer, 55 Vauxhall street, and Ralph L. Stout, 249 Broad street, were charged with fraud, but the charges were nolled. Palmer and Strout were arrested Dec. 2 last, upon complaint of a woman who had entrusted money with the men to invest. The acts of Palmer and Stout consisted the basis of the fraud charge. In court the following day the cases were continued until today. The complainant having been returned her money, the charges were dropped.

STATE WILLING TO LEAVE NESBIT IN CALIFORNIA

Noland Nesbit, former taxicab driver, who is under arrest at Los Angeles, Cal., charged by the New London police with conversion and forgery, will not be returned to New London for trial. This was decided today when State Attorney Arthur M. Brown and Prosecuting Attorney Max Boyer concurred in the belief that the expense attached to getting Nesbit to this city would be greater than the crime warranted. The Los Angeles police have been instructed to release the prisoner. Nesbit was arrested as the result of his fraudulent acts here many months ago. He resigned as taxi driver and purchased a second-hand auto on a conditional bill of sale. He then obtained a blank check of his former employer and forged the maker's name to it for $23, cashing the check at a local bank. Nesbit then drove from the city and state and did not make further payments on the car. Not until early in March was he located in Los Angeles, where he has been under arrest since.

Candidates For Police Force

When the young men who seek appointment to the supernumerary force of the New London police department take their mental examination tomorrow night at Jennings school it is believed that there will be nine or ten candidates for police work on hand. It is known that six have qualified as to taking the examination through their passing a physical examination and it is known that the examining physician, George P. Chaney, has examined three or four others since. Those who have passed the physical test are: Albert A. Powell, 242 Ledyard street; Carl R. Cunningham, 1 Bishop court; Edward Higgins, 79 Garfield avenue; Anthony B. Sullivan, 329 Broad street; Joseph T. Sullivan, 95 Lincoln avnue; Harold F. Aldrich, 42 Prest street.

Joseph T. Howarth has returned to his home in Providence, having visited for several months with his sister, Mrs. Richard Abell, 27 Nameaug avenue.

NIANTIC FREIGHT WRECK BLOCKS TRAFFIC FOUR HOURS

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, April 3.—All traffic on the New Haven railroad, between New Haven and Providence, was at a complete standstill for nearly four hours this afternoon, as the result of a train wreck near Niantic. The derailment occurred shortly after noon and the first train to move by the wreck was not until after 4 o'clock. The train wrecked was HW—2, east-bound, composed of more than 100 cars. When near the Niantic station and traveling at a speed of about 35 miles an hour a wheel on a box car broke, causing that car and two others to leave the tracks. Before the train could be brought to a stop, two of the derailed cars dropped on their sides and across both main line rails, causing traffic to be suspended in both directions. More than 300 feet of track and road-bed were ripped away by the derailed cars, the big damage being to the west-bound tracks. Wreckers from New Haven and Midway were sent to Niantic and shortly after 4 o'clock the east-bound rails were cleared and repairs made so that traffic could be resumed. The derailment caused the palatial train, Senator, west-bound, and the Knickerbocker Limited, both directions, to be run between Boston and New Haven via Putnam and Hartford.

Mrs. Horace Parker, and infant son, of Stonington; Mrs. Henry L. Bailey, Groton; Mrs. Paul Wickowski, 767 Montauk avenue, patients at Lawrence-Memorial hospital, were discharged today.

Arthur J. Messer has sold a house and lot, 18 Lewis street, to Mario Cannannelli.

Arrested In Salem

Michael Pherrick, Oakdale, was arrested in Salem by State Police Officer Frederick Wininger yesterday, charged with reckless driving. Pherrick will be given a hearing in the Salem justice court tomorrow afternoon.

Automobiles driven by Joseph Therrien, of Squire street, and N. E. Lubow, Montauk avenue, collided this afternoon and were damaged. As each driver blamed the other for the crash, alleging reckless driving, both Therrien and Lubow were arrested by Automobile Patrol Officer George Cockell.

Dog Or Cat Blamed

Mrs. Mary E. Hawkins, 294 Main street, occupying a tenement over the store of the National Economy company, communicated with the police early this morning, stating that she had heard a strange noise and believed a thief was in the store. Automobile Patrol Officer William Corcoran and Patrolman Cornelius Moriarty went to the store and found the rear entrance unlocked and a case of empty ginger ale bottles distributed on the steps. An investigation did not reveal that the store had been entered. The falling bottles, which Mrs. Hawkins heard, was undoubtedly caused by a prowling dog or cat.

An effort is being made by state police to trace Reed's movements since last Monday afternoon until the time when his body was found on a large rock between the plant of the Electric Boat company and the Portland Trawling company, Groton. THE NEW ENGLAND AGRICULTURAL SITUATION

(Written Specially for The Bulletin)

Most of us are born fault-finders. Even those not-congenitally infected are apt to catch the disease early and never get over it.

We think much more about the one obstruction on the walk against which we stub our toes than the miles of smooth going on either side. When we say that "life is just one dum thing after another," it isn't the good things of life we have in mind. It's the slivers we get in our fingers, the corns that come on our toes, the mosquito bites on our ankles, the three-score and ten little or big irritations which try our tempers.

When one becomes thoroughly imbued with the habit of looking for trouble, he is usually able to find it without any difficulty whatever.

When he gets started finding fault, he need never lack for subjects.

When he begins to weep over his own or his fellows' misfortunes he need be in no hurry to put up his handkerchief. He can keep right on shedding tears till the cows come home; in fact, till after they've been bedded down and have finished their last nightly cud.

All of which doesn't alter the blessed facts that the clouds don't rain forever; that the sun shines occasionally; that all your fingers aren't full of slivers all the time; that very few people actually starve to death—in short, that there are certainly as many things to be thankful for as there are to grouch over.

I've long had a suspicion that at least a small percentage of the grumbling which farmers are rather widely given to is due more to their own internal make-ups than to their external conditions. We won't for a second dispute the assertion that they don't get out of life all they'd like to or even all they'd ought to, as farmers. But I suspect that there are some, here and there, who wouldn't ever get all they consider their dues, even if they'd gone into other vocations.

For a long time now the Jeremiahs, the expounders of unrest and the prophets of woe, have held the front of the stage and filled the ears of the audience.

But there are Psalms of praise in the Good Book as well as Jeremiads of tribulation. If even we New England farmers would open our eyes wide enough, mightn't we find some compensations among our collection of deprivations?

Allen Raymond, making a comprehensive survey of New England conditions for The New York Herald-Tribune, sees and tells a number of things which New England farmers may justly take satisfaction in; even be proud of.

Some of our western friends, who farm sections or townships or whole counties, are inclined to deride the possibility of real farming on any such tucked-up patches as are at our disposal. It may be noted, incidentally, that the coming federal census orders any area classed as a "farm" if it, last year, produced as much as $250 worth of produce. And I'd like to have some rancher give a good and valid reason why it shouldn't be thus classed!

Mr. Raymond begins his summary of the agricultural situation in New England by remarking that "There is only one farming section of the United States from which no cry goes up for 'farm relief.' That is New England. Yet eight persons in every hundred throughout that section derive their livelihood from agriculture, and more people are moving to New England farms today than are moving away from them."

Then he goes on to bring out in plain black and white some of the good things which can be said about New England farms and farmers. A few of his statistics may be excellent eye-openers for some of our professional Jeremiahs.

For one instance: In the 15 years between 1910 and 1925 the aggregate value of farm lands, buildings and equipment in the six little states increased 26 per cent.

For another instance: In 1929 the crop values of all the United States increased $85,000,000 over 1928, and $54,500,000 of this increase came from the farms of New England. The six states have only one per cent of the cropping acreage of the nation, yet they contributed sixty-four per cent of the increased crop values of 1929.

For still other instances: Massachusetts corn-yields in 1929 averaged 44 bushels per acre, against an average for the "corn-belt" states of Iowa, Illinois and Nebraska of 34 bushels; Maine produced 220 bushels of potatoes to the acre against an average for the whole country of 121 bushels; Vermont has more dairy cows, per capita, than any other state in the country. The farmers of that one little state last year bought securities for investment in excess of $50,000,000. It reads almost like the famous "irony of fate" to note that a round million of these investments was in Kansas farm mortgages.

Says Mr. Raymond: "Nowhere in the country does the gospel of self-help, of 'grit and gumption' achieve any finer triumph than on New England's hills. New England's agriculture is far from being a tale that has been told, a legend of vanished bravery in the face of insuperable obstacles. It is flourishing and alive, fruitful and hopeful in 1930 as it was in 1630, and is setting records."

It is so small business "although the farms are small and getting smaller." The investment in it totals something over $1,000,000,000, and the value of the crops annually produced about $340,000,000, or a gross return of fully thirty per cent. That doesn't look like going to the dogs, does it?

Let me quote again from Mr. Raymond: "New England farmers in the past have gathered more dollars from a single acre than are gathered from forty acres in some agricultural regions, and they have been quicker to combine crops or switch them in response to changing market conditions than have been farmers in the one-crop areas."

There are still "abandoned farms," though it doesn't follow that one which has changed from corn and oats growing to timber raising has necessarily been abandoned. Such as they are the number is decreasing, not increasing. In 1927, 55,000 persons moved from farms to cities in New England, and 60,000 moved from cities to farms. Moreover occasional farmers are returning from the west, drawn by the desire to give their children the benefit of New England schools and by the lure of cheaper lands, closer to metropolitan markets.

One reason for the greater prosperity of New England farmers, Mr. Raymond ascribes to the fact which you and I have often talked over, i. e., the handiness of local markets. "They have unrivalled markets right on their doorsteps, a concentrated consuming public willing to pay top prices for quality eggs, potatoes, apples, vegetables, poultry, butter, milk and all the diversified farm produce which the region yields. New England now imports fifty per cent of its food products for man and beast, so there is no chance for over-production for the neighborhood."

Another reason why New England farmers attain greater proportional success than their competitors is that, while throughout the whole country only fifty-two per cent of the farms are owned outright by those who till them, ninety per cent of New England farmers own and work their own lands.

It is still true of human nature that most every man will plan more shrewdly and work harder for himself than he will for somebody else. The farmer who tills his own acres is apt to put into them more gumption and grit than any hired man is likely to. Nor is he hampered by hours. He can and does work when the work needs doing, not when he feels like it, nor with regard to "on" or "off" hours. Any man puts more "gimp" into the tillage of a crop which he hopes to make benefit himself than into one which simply pays wages, regardless of how it pans out. The average owner wants to get ahead; the average hired man is content merely to keep up with the procession.

"Uncle Ike" used to say that the farmer who said "Come, boys," and led the work in the field, usually got farther along than the one who said, "Go, boys," and trusted them to set the pace.

Size isn't the most important factor in farm success. A little farmer on a big farm isn't nearly so likely to win out as a big farmer on a small farm. It isn't how many acres one wanders over, but how well he tends to those which he tackles.

Mr. Raymond sums it up by saying that "New England farmers are succeeding today as in the past in getting a living from their lands by cultivating them intensely and intelligently."

"Intensely and intelligently": those two words mean more than any other two easily thought of in their relation to New England farming. There is scarcely a limit to which the two ideas may not be carried. Instead of there being any danger that they will be "run into the ground" by overuse, the chief drawback to present day farming on our sidehills and narrow valleys is that we are not using all the intelligence we have, nor showing all the intensity we're capable of.

Can't you make taxes and wages off your hundred acres? I know of a New England farmer who tried that sort of thing for several years—and got deeper and deeper in the Slough of Despond every year. Then he made a sharp turn, and devoted himself to seeing what he could do with ten acres, generously fertilized, intensely tilled, and put into crops for which his local market was clamoring. In one year he took in more dollars and made a bigger net profit than in five years from his former hundred acres.

Why should New England import abroad one-half of its food for man and beast? Perhaps it can buy bran and provender cheaper from the west than it can raise them.

But that isn't the case with vegetables and temperate zone fruits and poultry and dairy products.

THE FARMER.

ANNUAL REPORT OF
REV. MYRON E. GENTER

The mother of Rev. W. C. Darby on May 8 last departed from the lovely hills of Tolland to the higher, holier altitudes of the heavenly land.

Rev. Thomas Tyrie, who served so long on this district, stalwart ambassador of Christ, went to see the Saviour's face and abide with him in glory Nov. 17, 1929.

Mrs. Charles Smith, radiant saint and happy consort of our pastor at Uncasville, rather suddenly left the parsonage for a mansion at the end of life's road, on March 4th.

(b) Temporary suspenses—Rev. M. E. Osborne submitted to an operation for appendicitis last April, but has regained his full vigor again.

Beth, eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. T. A. Mosley, was taken suddenly ill, on Thanksgiving eve, and operated on at midnight successfully.

In East Hartford, the church has suffered much from the dreadful hail storm destroying whole fields, as well as from financial depression but loses more through the decease of its leading layman, Mr. John E. Lathrop.

(c) Joys—Rev. W. C. Darby, usually so deliberate about marriage, found his summer tour to Europe very productive in new acquaintances, and soon after his return, hastened over to Indiana, where he was united in marriage with Mrs. Edith D. Ford on Aug. 22 last.

On Sept. 10, a baby girl, Helen Muriel, came to the parsonage home at Moosup. The Tingleys are happy, but it is rumored the father does not have quite so much time for his scholarly pursuits.

Rev. J. Manly Shaw of Baltic did the wise thing on Aug. 13 last, when he took the full responsibilities of husband with Miss Lois Morrison Nutter of Newton Upper Falls, and made her the queen of his domain.

The father and mother of Rev. O. W. Bell, spent the month of November with him at Hazardville. In spite of the fact they came from California, we trust they found what Eugene Field says is true, that there is no place like New England to spend Thanksgiving day.

Pastor Carter and wife of Jewett City were gladdened last fall to learn that their son David, a graduate of Wesleyan, had chosen the ministry and entered on his theological training in Boston.

Rev. G. C. Capen received his degree of master of theology from B. U. S. T last April and Rev. H. C. Suter his degree of L. L. B. from American university last August.

Two ministers should have special mention. The first one at a time when most preachers retire, began building a house for the man of God. For scores of years, preachers in charge, at Gales Ferry, will have lovely home comforts because Jerome Greer and his devoted wife, labored with the loyal people to construct the modern parsonage.

Just across the Thames river, another minister who was entitled to retire a year ago, and rest from toil, held steadily to his task of building a house for God, as a brave sea captain brings his ship safely home. It must give deep satisfaction to Charles Smith, leading loyal Methodists, to have built this life-saving, character building church at Uncasville.

Kenneth M. Holmes will apply for admission to this conference on trial, is one of the finest young men who ever left this city, was trained in this church, graduated from Wesleyan, took his masters degree in Clark and is taking his theology at Boston School of Theology.

Anniversaries and Memorable Occasions

Thompsonville, from Sept. 29 to Oct. 6 celebrated its 100th anniversary with rally week program, including spiritual and festive occasions.

Our Methodist church at Wapping, united with the Congregational church there, as a part of the federation, which observed its 100th year of Christian conquest.

Norwich Town church reopened its temple for rededication with suitable services on June 5 last.

North Grosvernordale reopened its vestry with a special occasion when Judge Tourtellotte and the district superintendent made addresses.

Last August, East Blackstone, observed its Old Home day with the usual crowds. The pastor had a full church on Sunday and the chef lived up to his reputation with the chowder the day before.

Norwich Trinity had a high day for the rededication of its organ on March 2.

Uncasville dedicated its beautiful new church on Oct. 13 last, when Bishop J. W. Hamilton preached in the morning and afternoon, and the district superintendent at night. This church observed its centennial as a society in December when Rev. C. E. Spaulding was the preacher. Also the dedication of its pipe organ on Dec. 1, with the sermon by Rev. Joseph Cooper. Also the dedication of its altar on Feb. 9, with sermon by the pastor.

Other Items of Interest

Several churches have observed "church night" for a period of six weeks, and stressed the great objectives of the kingdom.

The community recreation activities at Hazardville involving all social and religious factors, has been very successful.

One supply pastor on joys and sorrows, "plenty of both" but spares you the elations and horrors undescribed.

"Everything quiet and peaceful" say some pastors, and there are times when an aggressive superintendent may thank God and take courage to hear nothing more than this.

One faithful pastor notes that this is one year of three in his ministry, when he has not reported a gain in membership. The most impressive thing about this is the 30 years when he did not miss giving a report of gain. God bless him.

The Stafford Springs pastor has suggested to his church an objective: a gain of 10 per cent in everything for the next year, and real Pentecost will enable that church and every other church to have such gains as would stagger the statisticians.

One strong, mature pastor says, "Just the same good world, to live in, to love in, and to serve Him in as it has always been."

Some Observations

Methodism needs now to make sharp discrimination and whole-hearted consecration, and with her millions of believers and adherents, break camp and go on the forward march again.

Our age requires and demands trained ministers who are undismayed at the changed social order and will be unafraid of any problem which may arise. Christ is equal to all which is now or ever can be in the realm of ethics and religion.

Culture is needful but conversion is imperative and indispensable in the conquering church of the present and future.

Religious education is vital and we need more of it than we have, but this cannot substitute for what our Lord Christ taught and practiced as the other part of the program to save the world. Spiritual sollicitude and passion to save people who have grown up and gone wrong, is part of the mission of the church and any denomination which ignores or abandons this task, is doomed. They must be sought and enlisted and built into the kingdom. We believe what the board of bishops has declared, "the restless multitudes are crying out for a living, loving God." We also believe what Washington Gladden has said, "Not until religion is manifested as the power that is able to subdue the kingdoms of this world, will it command the respectful attention of men."

It may be that once upon a time, the preacher was the dominant personality of the community, but if he is to succeed today, he must go hand in hand with the teacher, the social worker and the psychiatrist. This age of speed, high tension and indescribable anxiety—driving many to the breaking point as never before—demands the closest cooperation of all leaders in the social order.

We need now a laity, spiritually determined, with a mind set on lifting Christ up, and as the interests of the soul are the highest interests—these laymen to bring all of their business ability to the church which is doing the greatest work on earth.

Methodism did not hesitate and used to be vocal and challenging about prohibition. She declared long before the 18th amendment was adopted that "the liquor traffic can never be legalized without sin." It is not enough to have the amendment as part of the constitution. And not enough to hang out the flag, and talk one hundred per cent Americanism. It is not enough to be thankful that there was a blacksmith whose name was Hoover who named his son Herbert; and that he was elected president of this republic. Methodism of today is not worthy of her heritage, nor the fathers who dared so much for this cause, if she does not rise up in power and "help see this thing through."

The world service objectives as set forth by the commission are reasonable and the new project plans are wise. It only requires five cents a week from our millions of Methodists to carry this work easily. Let us stop whining and go to working.

A wistful world confronts the church of Christ. Stanley Jones in his last book well says he "never found the masses more eager or responsive to the Christian message." That world expects the church to provide for thrill, adventure, discovery, conquest and victories here and now. And perhaps before Methodism goes on the march again, it would be well to pause long and share those mystic gifts from our Lord who can impart life. We need the new Pentecost and the Holy Spirit to make life radiant, righteous and irresistible in His name. And we need this not simply for the larger experience for the believer, but that the church may well help carry out the implications of the gospel and there are some of these practically untouched yet, in spite of the passing of centuries.

In Conclusion

We have a deep gratitude for the abiding and loyal cooperation of the ministers and hundreds of officials and thousands of members of this district.

While the conditions of transportation do not permit me to "board" at the parsonages as was once the custom, the hospitality of the people of the manse is as whole hearted and delightful as ever in former generations, I am sure.

For health so good, that not a single appointment has had to be changed; for a multitude of friends scattered far and wide; for congenial colleagues in the cabinet; for cooperation of leaders of other communions; for joy which never fails with work well attempted; for peace which passeth all understanding; for gifts of the spirit, daily worth far more than gold; for the light never seen on land nor sea; for the hope which still clings fondly to the invisible and the eternal and with confidence that "the best is yet to be" for the district and for the world, we herewith submit this report for your acceptance.

Here's how the people have judged this question of VALUE

In the tire business, as in any other, production has a direct relation to costs.

It happens that Goodyear builds millions more tires than any other manufacturer, which ought to mean something to the man who buys tires.

We think it does: "More people ride on Goodyear Tires than on any other kind!"

We think this single towering fact — not to be overridden by any sales argument, however ingenious—says all that needs be said of Goodyear quality, Goodyear service, Goodyear price.

The next time you need a tire, and seek the most you can get for your money, remember how the people have judged this question of value.

The simplest and safest advice, is for you to do what an overwhelming percentage of your fellow-motorists are doing — go straight to the nearest Goodyear dealer!

LES CANADIENS BEAT BOSTON BRUINS TO TAKE POSSESSION OF STANLEY CUP

FORUM, Montreal, April 3—(AP)—The Stanley cup, professional hockey's most prized trophy, came back to the Dominion tonight when Les Canadiens defeated the courageous and hard-fighting Boston Bruins by a 4-3 score. This victory was the flying Frenchmen's second straight in the play-off for the world championship for they shut out the Bruins by 3-0 in Boston on Tuesday night.

This defeat, the first the Bruins suffered in Canada this season, was not accepted until every member of the club had fought himself almost to the breaking point. The colorful Frenchmen, by playing their defencemen on the blue line, turned back almost every Boston drive for two periods, during which they piled up a 4-1 lead.

Undaunted by these odds, the Bruins came out for the third and netted two more scores in eight minutes. During the remaining time, Boston played five forwards on the ice and, though they threatened many times, the fast back-checking of Les Canadiens prevented the Bostonians from caging the score that would have squared this most important game.

The Boston sextet, which broke almost all of professional hockey's records during the regular season, blames its failure to successfully defend the Stanley cup on the hard league championship series with the Montreal Maroons. Almost every member of the team was bruised and battered for the first clash with Les Canadiens.

Les Canadiens played an amazingly fast game during the first two periods, despite the fact that the Bruins were battling gamely. About half way through the opener, Bert McCaffrey left his defense post and was in front of the Boston net in time to slam Pete Lepine's assist inside. Lepine was on the starting end of another score a few minutes later, when Nick Wasnie broke through Goalie Tiny Thompson.

The Frenchmen had just as much success in the second, when the great Howie Morenz, who gave a marvelous exhibition of hockey in both of the [illegible] play-off games, netted a puck.

Sylvio Mantha, big defense player, was the other Canadian scorer.

A flying solo dash by Eddie Shore gave the Bruins their first score in the second session. He tried many times to add another but was unable to smash through the rock-like Canadiens' defense.

When the third opened, the Bruins put five forwards on, threw caution to the wind and ripped into their surprised rivals. Percy Galbraith scored the second Boston tally inside of six minutes and Dit Clapper netted the third [illegible] minutes later.

With only a few seconds remaining, Cooney Weiland, the National league's leading scorer, who went into an eclipse in this world's title play, led a stirring drive with Clapper and Bill [illegible] on his wings. When a wild jam in front of the Canadien's cage was ripped apart, the puck was found inside but the net-umpire ruled that Weiland had kicked it in.

Les Canadiens, who won the Stanley cup back in 1924, advanced to the final round by eliminating the Chicago Black Hawks and New York Rangers in the preliminary play-offs.

Though minus the Stanley cup, the [illegible] will carry out their plans for an [illegible] tour of British Columbia and California. They will depart for the west from this city tomorrow night.

MRS. ROCKNE DENIES THAT HER HUSBAND IS ILL

MIAMI BEACH, Fla., April 3—(AP)—Despite the progress of a physician from the Mayo clinic in Rochester, Minn., toward Miami, ostensibly at the request of Knute Rockne to examine the Notre Dame football coach, Mrs. Rockne asserted from their apartment here today that no such request had been made by her or her husband.

Rockne came here some time ago to recuperate from a leg ailment which had afflicted him during the fall and winter, since his arrival he has spent much of his time on the beach taking sun baths.

Recently, however, the ailment was aggravated, it was learned today, when he stood for approximately 30 minutes while making an address to a group of [illegible] school children. He has recovered from this setback, Mrs. Rockne said today, and is planning to return to their home in South Bend, Ind., in about a week.

While the reports of the physician's progress from Rochester were being made today, Mrs. Rockne said her husband was sunning himself on the beach and in good health except for a slight touch of asthma brought on by a cold.

A maid at the Rockne apartment, in absence of Mrs. Rockne and other members of the family earlier today, said that the football mentor was ill and that a physician had been called to give him a general examination. This was later corrected by Mrs. Rockne. The clerk of the hotel apartment where the family has spent the winter also reported that Mr. Rockne was ill but this was interpreted as referring to his general condition and not to a recent development. Both the maid and the clerk declined to give out definite information.

LOCAL BOYS APPEAR IN W-M FROSH LINEUP

Earl LaCroix and Johnny Greene, former Academy stars, both broke into the lineup when the William and Mary college freshmen of Williamsburg, Va., defeated Woodlawn academy in the season's opener.

Greene is batting in the clean-up position while LaCroix does the honors in second position. LaCroix had one hit in four tries, scored one run and made one error while Greene was up twice, collected one run, no hits and no errors. The Frosh scored all of their runs in a wild sixth inning when LaCroix contributed a hit and Greene was passed. Jack Marks, another local product, is on the squad but did not break into the lineup in this game. Greene is playing left field and LaCroix center.

KOP-WALKER BOUT IS FEATURE AT NEW LONDON

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, April 3—The show of the Eastern Athletic club at the Lyceum theatre tonight was attended by less than a capacity house resulting in a financial loss for the promoters. The feature bout between Eddie Shapiro of New York and Matty Owens of New Bedford, welterweights, proved a big disappointment although Shapiro, a rank fourth rater, was given the award. Owens proved an unworthy opponent.

The semi-final between Johnny Kop of Norwich and Eddie Walker of Fall River, Mass., proved to be the best bout of the evening. The battle started off in whirlwind fashion with Kop scoring a knock-down in the opening round. Walker regained his feet at the count of six and finished the round in distress. From that time on each round was a successor of the other with Kop doing the leading and carrying the fight to Walker. Kop carried the honors in every round but Walker proved to be a game and much absorbing youngster.

In one of the other six rounders Rene Peloquin of Danielson outpointed Buster Ellis of New Bedford.

In another six rounder Billy Burke of Westerly was defeated by Johnny Roberts of New Bedford. In the four round curtain raiser Al Brouillard of Danielson was given the decision on a technical knockout over Young Phillips of New London in the fourth round.

A. A. U. WRESTLING BOUTS WILL START TODAY

NEW YORK, April 3—(AP)—The finest wrestlers in the east have a final opportunity tomorrow and Saturday, to stave off the vaunted supremacy of the west in the national amateur athletic union championships, at the New York A. C.

Four champions of the 1929 grapple will be back to compete in the eight classes that have drawn 119 entries from 28 colleges and clubs. The rugged youngsters from Oklahoma Aggies, who swept the national collegiate championships at Penn State last week, have a full team entry of eight men, including newly crowned N. C. A. A. title-holders in the three top divisions—165 pounds, 175 and heavyweight classes. The New York A. C. and the topnotch college squads of the east, Cornell and Lehigh, also have full teams.

Most of the eastern and western institutions entered individual stars. Miami university, of Florida, listed four title seekers. Penn State, Rutgers, Tufts, Massachusetts Institute of Technology, Columbia, U. of Pennsylvania, and Mechanics Institute of Rochester, will provide the eastern collegiate opposition to the western aces of Oklahoma, Michigan State, Chicago and Cornell college of Iowa.

George R. Shoemaker, of Lehigh, probably will forfeit his 112 pound title at the weighing in and compete in the 118 pound division. Arlie Tomlinson, of the Oklahoma Aggies, who lost out in the 147 pound class at the N. C. A. A. meet will defend his A. A. U. championship along with John Eareckson, of Baltimore, in the 135 pound division and Kaare Krogh, of Chicago university, in the 175 pound bracket. The Aggies entered their N. C. A. A. champions, Jack Van Debber, Conrad Caldwell, and Earl McCreader, in the three top divisions.

MANY INQUIRIES ABOUT DUWELL RACE RECEIVED

A number of inquiries, relative to the A. A. U. National 10 Mile Championship Run, to be conducted in Norwich by the Duwell A. A. on Memorial day, May 30, have been received here during the past few days from various sections of the country. Several of the New York clubs as well as a number of individuals in that state, Pennsylvania, Maryland and Massachusetts have already made application for entry blanks. A communication was received Wednesday from the Boston Athletic association, the largest of its kind in New England, and for years sponsors of the national marathon championship, asking for full particulars regarding the run.

As the date of the event draws near it is expected that interest in Norwich will be aroused throughout the country inasmuch as the Rose of New England is mentioned every time that the national championship is. Among the many communications received to date are some from athletes who took part in Duwell races in years past. Each appears to be pleased that the championship is to be held in Norwich, mention being made in each letter that the writer found the hospitality here much warmer than elsewhere. The general feeling seems to be that the national run will go better in Norwich than it has elsewhere.

Interest locally, is also beginning to stir, a number of individuals having come forward with offers of assistance. Early in the week letters were sent by the Duwells to the various organizations asking for their cooperation in staging the mammoth event. In years past the various organizations of the city as well as individuals have cooperated through the donation of prizes and it is hoped that they will do as well this year. The first prize donation was made Wednesday by The Norwich Bulletin company.

One of the rules of the A. A. U. in regards to national championship races, is that the regulation National A. A. U. championship medals, gold, silver and bronze, be awarded to the first, second and third to finish, and the silver standard time medals to all athletes, except the first and second, who finish the race in 58 minutes, or better. It is the intention of the Duwells to offer a special set of prizes in addition to the regulation trophies. As previously mentioned the cost of conducting the national title run will be at least $1,000 and inasmuch as the bill of expense is a bit too large to be burdened by a single organization the size of the Duwell A. A., it is hoped that others throughout the city will assist.

The census taker starts his job.

"Ah, good morning, lady. I'm the census man."

"Is that so? Well, let me tell you I'm not interested in buying any censuses this morning. Already, I got a electric ice-box, a washing machine and a radio and I ain't buying nothing else until the instalments on them is paid."

"But, listen lady, you don't understand. I'm the census man and I just want to come in and ask you a few questions."

"That's all right, mister, that's what the other salesmen said and before I knew it I had bought one of his contraptions and I'm still paying for it. No, you ain't coming in because I ain't interested in buying anything today."

"Say, lady, I ain't selling anything. I'm working for the government and I want to ask you a few questions."

"Now, mister, you said aplenty. You go right back and tell the government that I ain't no bootlegger and neither me nor any of my family use liquor. Can't a woman have any peace at all without the government having to send men around to ask questions."

"Oh, lady, give me a break will you? I'm taking the census.

"And you listen to me, young feller, you ain't taking nothing around my house. Only the other day a feller came to the door and said he was a pole on how we stood on the prohibition question and before he was through taking the pole he had taken my pocketbook and pa's gold watch."

"But, lady, this is government business. I'm taking the census. You know, the census, that is, how many people there are in the United States and whether they own their own homes or not and things like that. Here, I'll show you my papers."

"Well, them papers look all right, but if you are selling anything I tell you right now you're wasting your time. All right, come in, but remember I got my eye on you and at the first suspicious move I'll call the police."

"How old am I? Well, go ahead and guess, if you're right I'll tell you. Am I the head of the family? Say, mister, who do you think 'as head of this family if I wasn't and if you don't believe me you can ask my husband and if he says no I'll crown him."

"Yes, there's me, Freddy, that's my husband, and the two young 'uns, James and Mary. Do they work? Well, I hope to tell you they do, you don't suppose I'm feeding 'em for nothing, do you? And do I work? Say, mister, if you followed me around every day I'd have you run ragged."

"Do I own the house? No. How much rent do I pay? Now, listen, mister, you are asking a lotta personal questions. I thought the government only wanted to know how many people there was and not how much rent they paid or what they had to eat."

"You can put down in that book that there are four people in this family and that the rent we pay is plenty for a dump like this. And don't you send no real estate agents around trying to sell me a house either."

"Oh, all right, I suppose you know your business, but if there ain't any other personal questions you better go 'cause this is house cleaning time and I ain't got no time to talk."

"Good day."

STREET DEVOTES PRACTICE SESSION TO BATTING

BRADENTOWN, Fla., April 3—(AP)—Satisfied with his pitching staff, which had been regarded as the weakest department of his team, Manager Gabby Street of the St. Louis Cardinals today devoted his attention to his batters. Although he said he was confident the team soon would start hitting, Street decided a little extra work would not be out of order.

The Cardinals had no game today, the contest scheduled with the Rochester club at St. Petersburg having been cancelled. The remainder of the games with Rochester will be played here because Street did not like the sandy playing field at St. Petersburg.

ERRORS HELP ATLANTA TO BEAT THE TIGERS

CUBS MAKE IT THREE STRAIGHT OVER ANGELS

LOS ANGELES, April 3.—(AP)—Another revision in the Chicago Cub infield lineup failed to slow down the National league champions today and they made it three straight over the Los Angeles Pacific Coast leaguers.

Lester Bell was back at third base, but Rogers Hornsby's heel was too painful to permit him to work, and Handy Clarence Bell played second. Charley Root hurled the full nine innings for Chicago, and was hit hard. He was good in the pinches, however, fanning five men to halt rallies. Riggs Stephenson continued his great hitting with a home run and a double.

THREE PITCHERS TO WORK SATURDAY

Three pitchers will work for the Academy in their opening game Saturday afternoon at the campus against the Richmond Radiators, according to an announcement by Coach Brigham after Thursday's practice. In making known the starting Wildcat lineup for tomorrow's battle, the local mentor named Chuck Lavarge, Boots Greene and Butsy Weisgraber to do the pitching in that order for the Red and White, each taking three innings.

The rest of the lineup to open the game was certain with but one position. Second base is still a hot fight between two hard-working boys, Jerry Fitzgerald and Speed Riordan and it may not be known until game-time who will get the call but the rest of the infield will see Alec Arico at first, Capt. Chubby Gibbs at short and Art Breen at third. Bud Fontaine will catch with Chet Berghinzo in left, Hack Pepin in center and Ed Flather in right field. Les Crowell will see much service and Coach Brigham has also decided to use Weisgraber in the pastures when he is not pitching. Butsy has been hitting the ball hard in practice and the coach intends to take advantage of his ability with the willow, duplicating the pitcher-outfielder performances of Lloyd Jarvis and Johnny Greene.

Thursday's practice ran from 1 o'clock until after 4 and consisted for the most part of batting. The first infield practice, a short but snappy affair, closed the afternoon's work. Fitzgerald and Riordan alternated at second with Arico, Gibbs and Breen at the other points.

The field was given much attention during the day and is now in pretty good condition. The regulars worked out in their new uniforms with the large numbers on the back, wildcat on the sleeve and light red and white stockings.

Indications are that this opening game will be one of the stiffest that an Academy nine has ever had to face. The Richmonds are out to avenge last year's defeat and also uphold the honor of the Industrial league. Andy Ketch, veteran right-hander, will work the first four innings and Lefty Lucier, leading pitcher in the Dusty loop last summer, will twirl the last five.

Nothing has been done as yet to secure a replacement for the Plainfield game, April 19 at Plainfield has not officially notified the Academy of the postponement. This game was automatically dropped when Plainfield decided to discontinue this sport.

Bill Clark worked the first five innings for Brooklyn and was then relieved by Johnny Morrison. Babe Herman and Del Bissonnette of the Dodgers were forced out of the game with Charley horses.

Score by innings:

NEW YORK, April 3.—(AP)—If the New York state athletic commission is willing, Larry Johnson, clouting Negro light-heavyweight from Chicago, will have his chance for revenge on Maxey Rosenbloom in Madison Square Garden April 30.

"When I started taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound I could hardly do my housework. I was so nervous and weak from Change of Life that I had to lie down very often. I heard about the Vegetable Compound through a pamphlet which was left at my door. I am doing all the housework for a family of four and it keeps me on my feet. I have taken six bottles and I have gained strength and flesh."—Minnie E. Hicks.

NEW STAR HAM

achieved by the revolutionary

"double-f" process of flavor-control

. . . FIXED* FLAVOR

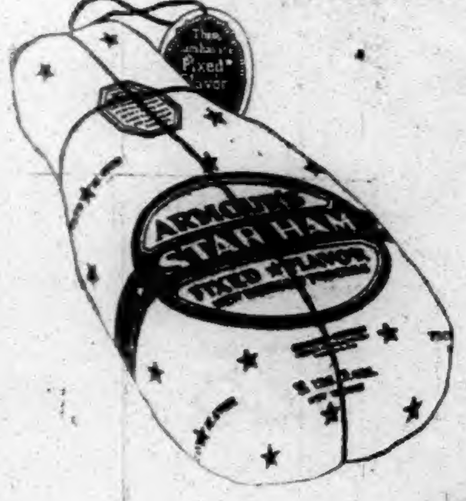
THERE'S a Star Ham in your dealer's ice-box today that is as new as this newspaper . . . as different from your previous conception of ham as oranges are from grapefruit. Armour's Star Ham has been born anew!

You probably thought it simply impossible to improve the flavor of Star Ham. It was tender, tasty, and tempting—all a ham could be. But Armour and Company, with the responsibility of leadership, wasn't satisfied to stop.

We have developed the "double-f" process of cure and smoke. "Double-f" means Fixed* Flavor, a scientific process of flavor-control, as changeless as the fixed stars. Every one who has tasted the result says "The new Star Ham is the best ever!"

Try a Star Ham for dinner tomorrow. Notice how pink and plump it is. Notice the nice proportion of lean to fat. Cook it in the regular way. We can predict your verdict. You will say "Star" to your dealer from now on. Armour and Company, Chicago.

A brand-new ham—delivered to you in a bright, new wrapper.



ARMOUR'S STAR HAM

...portant is the "double-f" process Fixed Flavor to the American ...ousewife, that Mr. F. Edson White, President of Armour and Company, will address the radio audience of the National Broadcasting Company's coast to coast network, for a few minutes tonight during the Armour Hour upon what Fixed* Flavor means to you.*

Tune in on the Armour Hour Friday Night from 9.30 till 10.

WHERE DO THEY ALL COME FROM?

You've noticed the Yellow and Red of SHELL appearing here, there and everywhere overnight. Where do all these stations come from? • • They don't come from anywhere. They've been right there all the while. SHELL hasn't simply bought thousands of new stations in one great sweeping gesture. • • The owners of these stations have changed to SHELL. • • Let that fact sink in. These stations have changed to SHELL because every day there are more thousands of car owners changing to SHELL. • • What makes a car owner change to SHELL? Because when he has tried it, he finds he likes it better. • • It's all as simple as that. More stations to serve the added motorists who become steady users of SHELL—every day—and more business for each dealer. • • We know why SHELL users stick to SHELL. So do the SHELL users. You'll find the answer when you, too, change to SHELL.

STOCK PRICES SHOWED SLIGHT RISE IN DISTINCTLY CAUTIOUS MARKET

NEW YORK, April 3.—(AP)—The stock market made partial recovery today from the set-back suffered late yesterday. Trading was in reduced volume, however, and save for feverish pool operations in a few specialties was distinctly cautious. Total sales were little more than 4,600,000 shares, about 700,000 less than yesterday's.

Considerable more selling had to be absorbed during the early hours of trading, and the list generally worked lower, but the market turned dull in the afternoon, and professional speculators for the rise were encouraged to resume wholesale bidding up of some of their favorites. The rally was not particularly impressive, however, the index of 90 leading shares showing a gain for the day of only about half a point, against a drop of more than 2 yesterday.

During the morning some commission houses advised their customers to await a further reaction, feeling that an over-extended position had been reached in steady rise of the past two weeks, and that a decline of more than one day would be required to correct it. By no means all observers shared this view, however. The more bullishly inclined were of the opinion that purchases for foreign account and by large investors and institutions had played a major part in the recent rise, and that the market's foundation remained secure. Also, it was felt in some quarters that no substantial reaction would be likely at this season when business is showing distinct signs of recovery.

The weekly brokers' loan statement, appearing after the close of the market, was fully as unfavorable as the monthly stock exchange tabulation had indicated yesterday. A gain for the week of $148,000,000 was the largest reported for any week since July, 1929. Undoubtedly a large portion of this gain represents borrowing by pools and other strong interests attracted by the comparatively reasonable rates for money, now so low that dividend yields in many cases will pay carrying charges. Furthermore, even with this increase, loans have gained only about half as fast as stock prices have since last November. Nevertheless, a considerable change in the character of buying is indicated.

Radio and the amusement group provided the high lights of the day's trading. Radio was bid up more than 2 points to a record price for the year at 58 1-4, compared to a low last November of 26, and a high record for the present stock of 114 3-4, reached before the autumn crash. The turnover in this stock was nearly 500,000 shares, or about 10 per cent of the day's total trading. Radio Keith was also a bull feature, rising 2 3-4 points to a new high for the movement at [illegible] 1-4. In less active trading General Theatres, Fox Film, Keith Albee, and Loews mounted about 4 to 6 points. Paramount and Warner Bros. gained about a point each.

J. I. Case jumped 8 points, then slipped back 5 1-2 from the top. Worthington Pump sold up 7 1-2, then reacted moderately. Electric Power and Light moved 4 points, but closed up only a point. Air Reduction, Allied Chemical, American Telephone, Columbian Carbon, and Western Union worked up about 2 to 5 points. U. S. Steel closed unchanged. Simmons rallied moderately in response to a favorable sales report.

Among shares closing lower were American Can, American Tobacco, American Smelting, Calumet and Arizona, and Westinghouse Electric, off about 2 to 3 points. Sloss Sheffield lost 3 points.

Credit conditions remained unchanged with call loans holding at 4 per cent. The weekly Federal Reserve statements showed that meeting the month-end money requirements had been helped by increases in rediscounting, and open market purchases of bills. The New York banks, however, were borrowing only $16,000,000 at the Federal Reserve, against $135,000,000 at this time last year. Foreign exchange rates were generally steady, with South American rates showing a firmer tone. Sterling cables held at $4.86 1-2.

The rally in stocks was helped by a sharp upturn in the grain markets. Wheat futures shot up about 2 1-2 to 3 cents a bushel, reflecting better export sales, and reports of extremely dry weather in the southwest. Corn mounted 1 1-2 to 2 cents. The cotton market also gave a good account of itself, futures closing about $1 a bale higher.

THE CURB MARKET

NEW YORK, April 3.—(AP)—Bullish forces made repeated efforts to bring about a general rally in today's curb market, but they made little headway except in a scattering of specialties in most of which there is a small floating supply. On the other hand, speculators for the decline found it just as difficult to bring out any appreciable volume of forced liquidation as trading showed a tendency to slow up on the declines. The day's sales ran well below those of yesterday.

Douglas Aircraft advanced nearly 2 points to a new high at 21 7-8, on the announcement that the company had received a government contract for 175 planes. North American Aviation crossed 11 to a new top, or more than double the year's low. Pilot Radio made a further moderate advance to new high ground in response to buying influenced by the first successful Bermuda flight made by the company's plane. Fokker, a recent strong spot, sold off about a point on profit-taking.

Niagara & Hudson was the active feature of the public utility group, crossing 20 to a new peak on persistent but unconfirmed rumors that it will be merged with Consolidated Gas of New York in a gigantic public utility corporation. American Superpower, Electric Bond & Share, Central States Electric issues and United Gas bowed to realizing sales.

Oils were rather mixed. Gulf, which fell 6 points yesterday, rallied 1 3-4 but Humble fell 2 1-4 and Standard Oil of Indiana yielded nearly a point. Indian Territorial withstood profit-taking fairly well.

Castle & Co. jumped 24 1-2 points on a few sales. Advances of 5 to 15 points also were registered by Ratheon, Root Refining, A. O. Smith and Welch Grape Juice but the turnover in each case was small. A sprinkling of specialties again moved into new high ground, the list including American Brown Boveri, Electric Household Products, Seton Leather, Sherwin-Williams and United Shoe Machinery.

Buying of the investment trust and holding company shares was rather selective in character. Eastern States "B" and Shenandoah common moved into new high ground and Goldman Sachs, which was heavy yesterday, rallied about a point.

BOND MARKET

NEW YORK, April 3.—(AP)—Stock option issues provided virtually all the action in today's bond market. Obligations without the speculative appeal of the convertible classification continued dull and in general there were only minor moves in the investment rails, utilities and industrials.

Considerable strength developed in the share privilege section during the final hour when the bonds of several amusement companies rose sharply. General Theatres Equipment 6, the best performer, moved between 131 and 144, closing at the latter figure for a net gain of 11 points. Loew's 6s advanced 2, Pathe 7s improved 5, while Warner Brothers Pictures 6s ruled firm. Shubert Theatre 7s proved to be an exception to the general trend, sagging nearly 3 points.

American Telephone convertible 4 1-2s, trading in a 6-point range, turned an early loss into an advance of 3 3-4, finishing at 182. International Telephone 4 1-2s gained 1 1-4. Railroad convertibles were less active and lower levels prevailed in New Haven 6s and Atchison 4 1-2s.

Scattering advances appeared in the high grade rails, notably Atchison General 4s, Nickel Plate 5 1-2s, Pennsylvania Gold 5s, and Pittsburgh & West Virginia 4 1-2s. These rose from nearly 1 to about 2 points on moderate turnovers, giving a better tone to the group.

Northern Ohio Traction & Light 6s, up 1 1-2 net, featured the full and firm utilities. Domestic industrials were quiet, but several foreign sugars sank to new lows on the announcement of a price reduction by the Cuban single selling agency.

United States government securities closed irregularly lower, but transactions were small and the largest decline was a drop of 6-32 of a point in the Treasury 3 3-8s.

The New York stock exchange announced the reinstatement of United States 2 per cent consols. These securities, in which no transactions have been made on the exchange since 1924, were stricken from the list April 1 on the assumption that interest had ceased, whereas they only became callable on that date. The bonds are outstanding to the amount of nearly $600,000,000 and most of them are deposited as the basis for national bank circulation.

Foreign obligations were slow. German Republic 7s, which are being watched in view of the reparations loan flotation now expected next month, eased a shade. Kreuger & Toll 5s, with warrants, traded actively, rising half a point.

Treasury Receipts

WASHINGTON, April 3—(AP)—Treasury receipts for April 1 were $5,019,633.30; expenditures $3,900,515.55; balance $362,586,032.40.

First quarter sales of Thompson Products, Inc., of Cleveland, manufacturers of parts for automobile and airplane engines, are larger than for any previous corresponding quarter in the company's history with the exception of the first quarter of last year, according to C. W. Thompson, president, who added that the profits for the quarter, to be announced in a couple of weeks, are expected to be in proportion to the sales figures.

Reports from the copper trade are to the effect that buying during the last few days has been better than for some time past. Foreign sales also have been better with the total for the month so far amounting to about 2,000,000 pounds.

A Man

If you are glad when you wake in the morning,
  Glad for the day that is only begun,
Glad for the rain if perchance it is raining,
  If it's not raining then glad for the sun.
Glad for the rest that you had in the nighttime,
  Glad for the tasks that are waiting for you,
You may not think you do much for your fellows
  Bound to the wheel, but we're thinking you do.

If when you're asked how you're feeling you answer,
  With your chin up, that you feel simply great,
If you don't grouch and don't worry and grumble
  And pull a long face when somebody is late,
If you forget your small aches and your ailments
  And your great griefs, turn your back on your woe,
Knowing how greatly a smile helps the world on,
  Take it from me you're a grand chap to know.

If you turn out of your path for a fellow
  Who has grown weak where he ought to be strong,
Not to bow down and swap sorrow for sorrow,
  But to lift him and help him along,
Then you are doing what's well worth the doing,
  Helping weave gladness into the Great Plan,
You are fulfilling the need of the world then,
  You are the world's chiefest treasure—a Man.

NEW YORK, April 3.—(AP)—Building permits issued throughout the country last month were 55 per cent greater than those of the previous month, S. W. Straus & Co. reported today. This increase compares with a loss of 2 per cent from January to February; 17 per cent from December to January; 19 per cent from November to December, and 23 per cent from October to November. The report, which covers 125 of the "key cities," states that the normal increase of March over February is 37 per cent.

The Waldorf System, Inc., New England chain lunch room organization, has started its expansion program planned for the current year by purchasing St. Clair's, Inc., which operates 10 restaurants in Boston and vicinity. The major portion of the expansion, James J. Curry, president, said, is to be concentrated in Greater New York.

The New York Federal Reserve bank's gold movement report for the week ending April 2, showed imports of $246,000 from Latin-American countries, and exports of $195,000 to England. There was no net change in the amount of earmarked gold. The daily statement covering transactions up to 3 p. m. today, showed no imports, exports or change in earmarked gold.

CHICAGO GRAIN MARKET

CHICAGO, April 3.—(AP)—Skyrocketing wheat prices today went 11 1-4c a bushel higher in some cases than wheat could be bought last week, with millions of acres of wheat lands southwest reported dry as ashes, and with drought news coming from the west and northwest as well. European demand for wheat showed sudden big expansion. Meanwhile, weather forecasts held out no hope of immediate moisture relief, and there were indications that hot wheather would increase danger of widespread severe crop damage.

Excited buying, especially on the part of previous speculative sellers, led to a wild close in the wheat market at the day's topmost point, 2 1-2-5 1-8c higher than yesterday's finish. Corn closed 1 1-2-2 1-4c up, oats 1-2c-1c advanced and provisions showing 2c-27c gain.

It was estimated that as much as 2,000,000 bushels of North American wheat were bought today for overseas shipment from Canada and the United States, mostly from Canada, but including at least some domestic hard winter grades. This was the first important change in a long while that has taken place in the apparent concerted policy of European countries to keep buying on a strictly hand-to-mouth basis. Alarm over crop conditions of Kansas and Oklahoma wheat in particular became acute today, however, and price jumps formed the rule from the start both at Liverpool and here, official Kansas and Oklahoma reports confirming word from other sources that the crop situation has become critical.

Special notice was taken today of dispatches from a leading Chicago field observer who said that to prevent serious damage 8,000,000 acres of wheat in western Kansas and portions of adjoining states must have soaking rains before hot weather sets in. He added that but little moisture was now left around the roots of wheat, that some fields were losing color, and that even with cool weather the damage would increase until rain was received. Adding to the force of consequent price upturns were reports that Argentine wheat offerings had dwindled to almost nothing, and that importing countries would require wheat shipments of 229,000,000 bushels before the end of July with dependence chiefly on wheat from Canada and the United States.

Corn and oats responded briskly to the sky[illegible] of the wheat market. General buying of corn future deliveries [illegible] hand, country [illegible] of corn to arrive were fairly [illegible]. Oats traders gave sharp attention to advices that the oats crop [illegible] as well as wheat was in much need of rain.

Provisions kept upward pace with the grain markets and also with hogs.

Closing indemnities: Wheat—May 113 1-2, 113 3-4; July 113 [illegible]; 118 3-8-1-2; September [illegible] 121 1-8-1-4. Corn—May [illegible]; July 88 3-8, 90 3-8-7-8; September [illegible] 91 1-2-3-8.

COUNTY HOME BUILDING PLANS FAIL TO SATISFY CHILD WELFARE ASSOCIATION

Through the luncheon and round table meeting to be held here next Tuesday at the Wauregan hotel by the Connecticut Child Welfare association, into which the Social Legislative society has been merged, there is interest in the annual report of the state Child Welfare association which was given at the annual meeting in Waterbury last week.

The report contains the opinion that New London county is 20 years behind the times because it has adopted the congregate plan instead of the cottage system in building the new county home for the care of children.

Resume of the Year.

Newspaper publicity has been greatly increased, feature stories and informative articles having appeared in papers throughout the state, and in organization bulletins etc.

The speaker's bureau has been active, more than 100 meetings having been addressed by members of the office staff during the past twelve months.

Child welfare meetings and conferences have been held in various parts of the state among them being the regional conference for the four valley towns, Ansonia, Derby, Shelton and Seymour and the New London county child welfare at Norwich meeting which drew a large attendance.

"The high spot in our publicity program this year has been the use of the radio as a means of public education. Through the operators of Station WDRC, New Haven, we have been able to present specialists in various phases of child welfare in instructive talks. We are also on the air each week in "True Stories of Connecticut Children" in which we tell of actual cases and explain the work of this and other organizations.

April 8th will be child welfare day for New London county. Under the auspices of this association the day will be devoted to the study of child welfare problems. Round tables will be led by Kenneth Messenger and Mrs. Edith Valet Cook and Miss Grace Abbott, chief of the United States Childrens' Bureau, Washington, D. C., will speak at luncheon. After luncheon there will be a demonstration of visiting teacher work. Miss Abbott will broadcast for us on the evening of April 8th, from Station WDRC, New Haven.

Last week 16 year old Jack Brown (not his real name) was fined $50 and costs in the city court of New Haven for damaging telephone company property. With a companion of the same age he cut 200 telephone wires, putting the instruments out of commission.

Four years ago our demonstration visiting teacher called the attention of the school authorities to this boy. Harassed by distressing home conditions and lacking proper guidance, he was heading rapidly toward delinquency.

This lad needed a helping hand at a critical time of life. Could our visiting teacher have stayed and worked with him it is highly probable that he would not have a court record today. But her demonstration period in New Haven was over and she was obliged to leave. Left to his own devices the boy became more and more disorderly. Today he is a real problem, and will not easily be won over from his delinquent ways.

This year through our efforts, visiting teachers have been added to the school staffs in Greenwich and Norwich and a three year demonstration is in process in Waterbury. Other cities are becoming interested in this trained specialist and are asking for information about her work with difficult and unadjusted children.

The association is financing a course of lectures which are being given at the Willimantic normal school by Miss Margaret Bridgers, visiting teacher attached to the public school staff in Norwich.

Our Toy Party

An innovation which we hope to make a yearly project was our toy theatre party held in December to secure toys for the children of families receiving "Widows' Aid from the State." Through the courtesy of C. J. Latta, manager of the Roger Sherman we were given the use of the theatre for a Saturday morning children's party. Toys were the tickets of admission and nearly 3000 were secured, and distributed.

1929 Session Of The Legislature

During the winter months we were kept busy with matters pertaining to the 1929 session of the legislature. From all parts of the state we received requests for information regarding proposed bills, time of entering, form in which they should be drawn up, etc. We drew up bills for a number of agencies and found means of entering those sent us by others.

Mr. Messenger asked our help in securing publicity on the need of an increased appropriation for the state bureau of child welfare. We responded by interviewing members of the legislature, sending material to papers throughout the state, and by appearing at committee hearings. (Seven new workers were added to the staff and an increased appropriation secured although the amount appropriated was smaller than the sum asked for.)

The same services were performed for the Catholic Diocesan Bureau, Mansfield, the Consumers League, the Humane Society, the League of Women Voters and others. We attended weekly meetings of the legislative committee and sent reports of their activities to the papers.

Forty-two talks on the Newton bill and bills before the Connecticut legislature were given. Resolutions to be sent to U. S. senators and congressmen regarding the Newton bill were drawn up for clubs and other organizations.

This association drew up and entered a bill concerning the adoption of minor children. We worked for the following legislation: Acts concerning a compilation of laws relating to education; providing for reimbursement of towns for school expenses of children dependent upon other towns; revising and codifying the laws relating to education; concerning licensed boarding homes for children; concerning inter-state placement of children in foster homes; concerning notice to bureau of child welfare by courts in cases of department children under four years of age; concerning the employment of minors and women in manufacturing and mercantile establishments; concerning adoption of minor children.

Field Notes

As a result of our work and that of others in the 1929 legislature, Richard K. Goodwin, a well trained social worker has been added to the staff of the state bureau of child welfare as a deputy in charge of probation work. Mr. Goodwin's time will be devoted to the service of the juvenile courts which he will visit frequently. Under his jurisdiction the quality of probation work throughout the state is expected to improve materially. We hope, with his help, to carry out, at least some of the recommendations of the Probation Survey made two years ago.

Acids In Stomach Cause Indigestion

Create Sourness, Gas and Pain. How to Treat.

Medical authorities state that nearly nine-tenths of the cases of stomach trouble, indigestion, sourness, burning, gas, bloating, nausea etc., are due to an excess of hydrochloric acid in the stomach. The delicate stomach lining is irritated, digestion is delayed and food sours, causing the disagreeable symptoms which every stomach sufferer knows so well.

Artificial digestants are not needed in such cases and may do real harm. Try laying aside all digestive aids and instead get from any druggist some Bisurated Magnesia and take a teaspoonful of powder or four tablets in water right after eating. This sweetens the stomach, prevents the formation of excess acid and there is no sourness, gas or pain. Bisurated Magnesia (in powder or tablet form—never liquid or milk) is harmless to the stomach, inexpensive to take and is the most efficient form of magnesia for stomach purposes. It is used by thousands of people who enjoy their meals with no more fear of indigestion.

COUNTY HOME PLANS FAIL TO SATISFY

the problem of state care of defective delinquents have been held recently under the joint auspices of the association and the Connecticut Mental Hygiene society and attended by the heads of institutions and others interested. It is hoped that by setting the best minds to work on the problem suitable methods of caring for these unfortunates may be evolved.

New London county has announced plans for the construction of a new county home. The institution is to be of the congregate type with two large dormitories, each built to accommodate 100 children.

According to C. C. Carstens, head of the Child Welfare League of America who was called into consulation on the matter by the officers of the association, this method of child care is just about 20 years behind the times.

New London is to be commended for its desire to provide a new county home but it is greatly to be regretted that the authorities have not chosen to employ the cottage system of institution or to build a small temporary home in which children may be cared for until foster homes are found for them.

Your grandmother and grandfather learned to work by doing the chores around the house and farm. Our child labor study will show you that the modern child works at tasks outside the home and often beyond his slender strength. This study is now finished and will be published and ready for distribution in the near future.

DON'T MISS THE PARTY GIRL

At PALACE, SATURDAY

Franklin Hardware Co.

After having made extensive alterations at their new store on Main and Franklin streets The Franklin Hardware Co. is opening up their new enlarged store Saturday morning. This new and larger store, which in addition to their Main street store, runs through and takes in the four store building on Franklin street, people of eastern Connecticut will find has one of the largest stocks of hardware, electrical equipment, plumbing supplies, paints and sporting goods anywhere in the state.

In announcing the opening of the new store of The Franklin Hardware Co., George J. Leven and P. T. Leven take pride in inviting their many friends to inspect the store and see for themselves what it has to offer in the line of merchandise.

Persons visiting the Franklin Hardware Co. store can either enter on Main street or on Franklin street. Many special bargains are being planned for the opening of the new store, some of these being listed in the advertisement appearing elsewhere in this paper.

The history of The Franklin Hardware Co. is one of steady growth. Coming to Norwich in 1923, in April, the management of this store has by quality service, built up a business which has made necessary the securing of larger quarters for their fast growing business. The same store policy is being continued in the new store, where it is expected that many more friends and supporters will be made during the coming years.

Palace Theatre

If a party girl ever paused in the mad whirl of being the life of a good time to ask herself, "What price party?" what would her answer be? Those who would know the answer should not fail to see the all-talking, singing and dancing picture "Party Girl," which comes to the Palace theatre tomorrow for a four day run and which stars such well known players as Douglas Fairbanks Jr., Marie Provost and Jeanett Loff.

Never before has anyone dared to produce such an expose of professional party life and the author of this film story knows his subject perfectly. In cities like New York and Chicago it is customary for large business concerns to employ beautiful women for the entertainment of their prospective customers who are visiting in contemplation of some commercial transaction. Parties are very frequent affairs and it is the duty of these charming and versatile girls to coerce the big buyers into giving the contracts to the particular firm which employs them. How this is done and the methods which are used are shown in "Party Girl" for the first time in the history of motion pictures.

The plot of "Party Girl" is in part as follows: John Rountree, a glass manufacturer, condemns party girls and refuses to use them. He starts an investigation with the aid of the district attorney.

JEANETT LOFF

Jay Rountree, the manufacturer's son, crashes one of the parties while attending a fraternity banquet at the same hotel. Leeda Cather, a former society girl who is wild and who needs a wealthy husband to relieve her financial situation, gets him drunk, takes him to her apartment and convinces him the next morning that he should marry her. This he does but is unhappy because of his sincere love for Ellen Powell, his father's secretary. There are tense moments and many thrills and at last the intervening hand of fate brings this unusual tale to a most surprising and satisfactory conclusion.

Today for the last times the Palace presents "Murder Will Out," a startling mystery thriller starring Jack Mulhall and Lila Lee and the tuneful musical show, "They Learned About Women," which features Van and Schenck, Bessie Love and other favorite players.

Broadway Theatre

General Robert E. Lee will face "Fighting" U. S. Grant and surrender his command of the Confederate armies for the last times today in the final showings of the Broadway's gigantic double feature bill "Only the Brave," with Gary Cooper, and the thrilling talkie-music-color version of that sensational mystery "The Phantom of the Opera." These two photoplays must make way for the Busy Bees' Special Trainload of Sweets which arrives tomorrow with Nancy Carroll, America's "Sweetie" presenting her newest and greatest treat, "Honey." The little redhead has an ideal role as a young Southern belle, who, financially embarrassed, leases her mansion to a wealthy New Yorker who demands a full staff of servants. Desperate at the possibility of losing the lease, Nancy assumes the role of housekeeper and cook, her brother, the inimitable Skeets Gallagher is transformed into a snappy but sassy butler, and gloomy ZaSu Pitts agrees to remain as housemaid. Little Mitzi Green, remembered as the snippy little miss of "The Marriage Playground" is ZaSu's daughter, with a flair for trouble that raises heck with the world in general. Harry Green, as a blundering detective, guarding the wealthy lessee's jewels, has the biggest scream role of his career. Haughty Jobyna Ralston is the wealthy dowager, Lillian Roth her charming and mischievous daughter, and Stanley Smith the interesting "prospect" on whom "Mama" has designs. "Honey" is rightly named for it is a "honey" of a picture, and wherever shown it has had the crowds "buzzin' around." The management has plenty of surprises for "Honey" patrons, among them a gigantic honey confection made by A. N. Alexander & Co., and now on display in their Franklin square window, and which will be awarded to some patron on Tuesday evening from the stage, and it is whispered by the "busy bees" that the manager has some of Nancy Carroll's autographed photographs, which will be given to some hundreds of lady patrons during the engagement. A dandy program of short featurettes has been booked to keep "Honey" company, although the feature itself packs enough entertainment value for an entire evening.

Burton's Agency Sells Another

Mr. John Vallin of this city has sold his property located at No. 269 Laurel Hill avenue to Walter and Mary Levitsky. The property consists of a seven room cottage containing all improvements and a two car garage.

The new owners will occupy the place.

The sale was negotiated through the real estate agency of Mrs. Rosa E. Burton.

Breed Theatre

A distinguished career on the Broadway musical stage paved the path for audible picture fame for J. Harold Murray, co-starred with Norma Terris, in "Cameo Kirby," the Fox Movietone romantic musical drama which will end its run at the Breed theatre Saturday night. Murray graduated from vaudeville to "The Passing Show of 1921" as juvenile lead. Then he joined the Winter Garden show with Eddie Cantor. Followed roles in "The Whirl of New York," "Springtime of Youth," "Caroline," "Vogues," "China Rose," "Captain Jinks," "Castles in the Air," and "Rio Rita." His first picture was "Married in Hollywood," the Fox Movieton romance in music by Oscar Straus.

When "Harmony at Home," Fox Movietone all-talking picture opens at the Breed theatre next week, for an engagement of four days, local picture goers will see a production which the reviewers throughout the land have acclaimed one of the most entertaining domestic comedy dramas ever brought to stage or screen. It was adapted from Harry Delf's successful stage play and its sound screen treatment has greatly enhanced its entertaining values.

The man who doesn't know a woman until after he marries her is very apt to regret the acquaintance.

Miss Mary J. Barry

On Wednesday morning, at 8:30 o'clock, the funeral of Miss Mary J. Barry was held from her late home, No. 92 Oakridge street, followed by a mass of requiem at 9 o'clock at St. Mary's Memorial church, celebrated by Rev. Arthur Sullivan. The musical program was in charge of Mrs. Michael J. Farrell, organist. At the recessional she played Chopin's Funeral March and at the offertory rendered Pie Jesu. Lead Kindly Light was played at the recessional. Burial was in the family plot at St. Joseph's cemetery where Rev. Father Sullivan conducted the committal service. The bearers were Hugh Coughlin, Joseph Delaney, Edward Gleason, James Ryan, Thomas Driscoll and Francis Barry. The services were largely attended with mourners present from Hartford, Providence, Portland, Southbridge and New York. The floral tributes were both numerous and beautiful, speaking a mute testimony of the high esteem in which the deceased was held in this vicinity. Undertakers Cummings and Ring had charge of the funeral arrangements.

Mrs. Michael Brien, of New York, has returned to her home, after spending a few days as guest of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Cloutier on North Main street.

The regular Lenten devotions were held Wednesday evening at St. Mary's Memorial church at 7:30 o'clock. Rev. Arthur Sullivan recited the rosary and offered benediction of the blessed sacrament. Rev. In spite of the warnings broadcasted about the dangers of starting fires at this season of the year, some careless person was the cause of a brush fire which broke out this week in the woods south of Hunter road and spread almost to the rear of St. Joseph's cemetery near the city line. The fire burned over a large area and destroyed many young trees.

Taftville householders are breathing easier now that April Fool's day is past. During the past few years this day has been celebrated with almost as much gusto as Halloween. There were very few pranks this year, and very little damage was done to property.

With the baseball season in the offing, there begins to be a gradual increase in those who aspire to play on the village teams this year, who are to be found "warming up" each evening on the Providence street grounds; and the number will grow when daylight saving time provides a longer light evening. One of the officials of a sporting organization stated this week that it was his opinion that there will be plenty of good local material to build up a good baseball team in the village this season.

North B street is being improved.

It has been announced that at the next meeting of the Men's club of the Taftville Congregational church, which will probably be the last get-together for the season, there is to be a supper served under the direction of a committee appointed at the last meeting. Plans are also being made to secure a prominent speaker from out of town.

METHODISTS AT CONFERENCE HEAR WHAT IS DONE IN WORLD SERVICE

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, April 3.—The second day of the New England Southern conference of the Methodist church opened with a devotional service, following which a check for $148.51 was presented from the board of pensions and relief, and a gavel, the gift of the New England Historical society, was presented to Bishop Frederick C. Leete in a neat little speech by Dr. Spaulding.

Rev. J. G. Bisbee was chosen to continue as statistician and Rev. Philip A. Ahern to continue as treasurer for another year. Rev. E. E. Story presented his report as superintendent of the New Bedford district, which included the merger at New Bedford, where the Howard church and the Pleasant street church will become St. Paul's church.

Rev. W. H. Easton spoke briefly in behalf of Morgan college, Baltimore, of whose faculty he is a member, and Rev. John M. Trout, in a brief address, presented the interests of the Massachusetts Federation of Churches.

World Service Programme

At 11 o'clock, "The World Service Programme" was taken up, with Dr. Ralph A. Ward, executive secretary of the World Service commission, and Rev. R. C. Raines of Providence as the speakers.

At 12, Bishop Leete spoke at the devotional period on the topic, "The Gospel of the Holy Spirit," which, he insisted, has a prominent place in the New Testament. He urged that the greatest need of the church in this present day is more vital religion and that this can only be realized as individual church members open their hearts to the spirit of God.

Afternoon Session

Rev. J. G. Rogers, field secretary for Zion's Herald, spoke at the afternoon session, occupying a few moments presenting evidence of the value of religious journalism and portraying the high rank of Zion's Herald as one of several good periodicals of this class.

Dr. J. S. Burnett of the board of Home Missions and Church Extension one of the boards which receives support from the "World Service" commission, was introduced as the first regular speaker of the afternoon programme. Dr. Burnett is a missionary laboring among the mountain whites of Tennessee. His unique and homely description of the conditions and surroundings in the life of these interesting people captivated the audience and provoked an occasional expression of mirth. He closed with a narrative from his personal experience which left a profound impression and caused his address to be referred to by the presiding officer as the spiritual climax of the day.

Dr. W. E. Hammaker of Youngstown Ohio, was the second speaker of the afternoon. His address was upon the subject, "World Service from the Standpoint of the Pastor."

Evening Session.

The world service program was brought to a conclusion with the evening session, when Rev. Dr. Ralph E. Diffendorfer, secretary of the board of foreign missions, was the first speaker. He said that this board receives a little more than 36 per cent. of the money paid for "World Service" each year. THREE NORWICH HOSPITALS GIVEN HIGHEST RATING

(Special to The Bulletin.)

WASHINGTON, April 3—Norwich State Hospital for Mental Diseases, Norwich State Tuberculosis sanatorium and William W. Backus hospital, Norwich, Conn., after careful investigation have received the highest endorsement of the council on medical education and hospitals of the American Medical association according to the journal list announced today.

There were nearly 300 births at the Backus hospital last year, a creditable record for the size of the hospital.

These Norwich hospitals by complying with the principles which the council deems necessary are awarded honor recognition and endorsed of superior standing.

The list of highest standing institutions contains the names of 6,665 hospitals and sanitoriums and omits entirely the names of 504 hospitals which after investigation were disapproved.

Since the hospital is becoming increasingly important for the care of the sick the main object of the present study is to lessen the time of hospitalization of the ill patient, to indirectly reduce the cost of sickness by raising the efficiency and to separate the fit from the unfit institutions.

SENATE VOTES FOR GOVT. OPERATION MUSCLE SHOALS

Passed, 45 to 23, Practically Same Measure As President Coolidge Pocket Vetoed Two Years Ago—Calls For Appointment of Three Men By the President to Operate the $150,000,000 Project of Experimentation On Fertilizer —Provides For Construction of a $34,000,000 Dam—Directors Would Have Authority to Sell Surplus Power Generated.

WASHINGTON, April 4.—(AP)—Once more the senate today voted to turn over the government's $150,000,000 nitrate and power project at Muscle Shoals, Alabama, to a government-controlled corporation for experimentation in fertilizer production.

It was the second time in the ten years' controversy over disposition of this gigantic war-time property that the resolution of Senator Norris, republican, Nebraska, for government operation has been approved. The vote was 45 to 23, with the republican regulars in opposition.

Two attempts to modify the resolution were rejected in the closing hours of the three-day debate. The measure was sent to the house in practically the same form as it was adopted by congress two years ago. President Coolidge pocket vetoed it then.

Considerable doubt covers the future of the Norris resolution in the house. Leaders there have given no assurance for its consideration. Likewise there is some uncertainty at the capitol over the attitude of President Hoover toward the proposal. It was opposed by administration leaders in the senate.

Senator Norris led the drive for his resolution in the senate. He successfully staved off every attempt at serious modification.

Senator Vandenberg, republican, Michigan, sought to strike out the provision allowing payments to the United States of Alabama and Tennessee from proceeds on the sale of surplus power. That lost on a tie vote, 33 to 33, with Vice-President Curtis absent.

Later Senator Walsh, democrat, Montana, announced he had voted under a misapprehension and changed his vote, which had made the record 34 to 32 against the Vandenberg proposal.

After assailing the general terms and principle of the bill, Senator Fess, republican, Ohio, sought to eliminate the provision for construction of a $34,000,000 dam on the Clinch river in Tennessee at Cove creek. This was turned back without a record vote.

Eighteen republicans voted with 26 democrats and the farmer labor senator, Shipstead of Minnesota, for the resolution, while two democrats, Steck of Iowa, and Tydings of Maryland, joined 21 republicans in opposition.

The Muscle Shoals project, erected during the war for the development of nitrogen to be used in manufacture of explosives, consists of a huge dam and two nitrate plants on the Tennessee river in Alabama.

The Norris resolution would put this under the control of a government corporation to be directed by three men named by the president with the advice and consent of the senate. The combined salaries of a general manager and two assistants would be fixed at $50,000 annually.

The corporation would be directed to operate the nitrate plants for the production of nitrogen and also to conduct elaborate experiments in the production of nitrogen.

The Cove Creek dam would be used as a reservoir for the Muscle Shoals power project.

The government corporation would have full power to sell all surplus power generated at the Muscle Shoals and Cove Creek dams with the stipulation that states and municipalities be given preference.

A new provision in this bill would allow Alabama five per cent of the proceeds from the sale of Muscle Shoals power and Tennessee five per cent of the proceeds from the gross returns on sale of power at Cove creek.

Senator Vandenberg severely denounced this proposal but Senator Norris defended it on the ground that it would compensate the states for taxes that would be paid if the property were privately operated.

No proposal was advanced during the debate for a lease of the Muscle Shoals to private industry.

PLAN REFERENDUM ON FOOD TAXES IN ENGLAND

LONDON, April 4—(AP)—Stanley Baldwin, conservative leader, at Albert Hall this afternoon carefully explained his plan for a referendum on food taxes, saying it was not his intention to submit the question of taxes on food at a general election.

There would be an imperial conference, he added, and if at that conference treaties or arrangements "whereby in exchange for substantial benefits to our manufacturing industries the dominions require some corresponding benefit for themselves in the way of foodstuffs—which they can so amply provide—and if to further that it will be necessary to put taxes on foreign foodstuffs in this country, then we are resolved if that be the outcome of the conference—after the next government comes into office—we will submit that treaty to the people of this country," he declared.

DIVORCE PETITION OF B. A. GRIMES DISMISSED

CANTON, Ohio, April 4—(AP)—Common Pleas Judge Harvey F. Ake today dismissed the divorce petition filed by Burleigh A. Grimes, Pittsburgh Pirate pitcher, against his wife, Mrs. Florence Ruth Grimes, after a hearing of two days.

Judge Ake held that Mrs. Grimes was not guilty of gross neglect of duty or extreme cruelty as the Pirates' twirler had charged in the petition. He held that testimony of witnesses had failed to show "a single word that reflected on the moral character of this wife."

Judge Ake said "the real reason for the divorce case can be found in a letter written by a girl living in Boston." The judge said the letter "clearly indicates that there was some intimacy between Grimes and this girl. This letter shows Grimes did not come into this court with clean hands."

The stills, alcohol and mash were seized in North White Plains and North Castle, where five of the prisoners were taken. Naval Conference Nearing The End

American Delegates Have Reserved Cabins to Return On the Leviathan April 22.

LONDON, April 4—(AP)—Havi[illegible] achieved their major objectives at [illegible] London conference in an Ame[illegible] British-Japanese naval agreeme[illegible] Henry L. Stimson and the re[illegible] American delegation toda[illegible]ed cabins on the Leviathan f[illegible]meward journey, April 22.

Hope for a five power [illegible]ent is being abandoned and the [illegible] is that the conference cannot last longer than that date. It is understood that the American-British-Japanese agreement will cover a five year period from the expiration of the Washington disarmament treaty in 1921.

Announcement that the Americans were preparing to buy their steamer tickets came during one of the tensest days of the conference.

France and Italy are as tightly deadlocked as ever over parity and Prime Minister MacDonald of Great Britain is making strenuous efforts to save the situation. And the Anglo-French security formula still eludes Foreign Secretary Henderson of Great Britain and Foreign Minister Briand, of France, who are diligently hunting for it.

Thus the whole trend of events points to a speedy windup of the parley with a three power pact as the main achievement and a five power agreement on such problems as humanization of submarine warfare and the technical questions of naval standardization and construction.

Queen Victoria Of Sweden Died In Rome

Had Long Been An Invalid [illegible]rom Bronchial Ailment—[illegible]den In Mourning.

[illegible]E, April 4.—(AP)—Queen Victoria [illegible]Sweden, long an invalid from a [illegible]onchial ailment, calmly and apparently painlessly died here today in the winter home that was her refuge every year from the rigorous climate of Sweden. She was 68 years old.

King Gustave, who returned from a trip to Naples yesterday, and Prince William were at her bedside. Though the queen's death had been foreseen for weeks, all present were deeply affected.

Aided by nurses, Doctor Munte clad the body in burial garments of black and laid it out on the bed, over which were strewn roses from the garden that the queen had loved and personally supervised. She used to say that it was the sight and perfume of flowers in sunny Italy that kept her alive.

As queen of Sweden, Victoria showed herself as a very proud, but kindly woman. She was universally beloved in Sweden and by all who knew her in Rome.

Only a few days ago she insisted on supervising the composition of a lunch basket for King Gustave, who was going out to examine new archaeological discoveries in the vicinity of Rome. Gasping for breath, she called for a secretary before she had half finished her task, dictated the rest of the royal menu and sank back to sleep.

A long threatened failure of the heart action came a little before 7 p. m., and she sank quietly into death.

Time Savers

The great American instinct is to save time—a lot of time—and then some more time. In the big affairs and the little affairs of life, time is the most valuable thing at our command.

Limited trains, automatic telephones, special editions of newspapers, 60 miles an hour autos, airplanes still faster—we have these things in answer to our demand for speed. And an equally important time saver in the lives of people today is advertising. Just as surely as any other modern service, the advertisements bridge hours and days for people who have wants to be filled.

Readers of advertisements are the same people who demand the utmost efficiency in communicaction, in business, in their daily life. They know that a few minutes' reading of the advertisements will tell them more about products, values and the intelligent spending of their money than they could discover in days by any other method.

And like other great time savers, advertisements save money and energy, as well. Read the advertising columns of The Bulletin regularly.

NOSE BROKEN, BOTH EYES BLACKENED AND KIDNAPED

NEW YORK, April 4.—(AP)—An aviator, with his nose broken, both eyes blackened and cuts on his head, charged today that J. Morgan Corbett, Boston social registerite and real estate operator, had him kidnaped and beaten in an effort to locate the latter's missing wife.

The aviator, James Quinn, 30, had three of Corbett's employes arrested as the men who, he said, lured him to a camp in the Bronx and then bound him and beat him.

Quinn, who maintained he knew nothing of Mrs. Corbett's disappearance, finally escaped and called police. The three men, Arthur Hamel, 29, of Haverhill, Mass.; Edward Kendal, 29, of North Reading, Mass., and Edward Klein, of Brooklyn, were arrested last night.

Their arraignment today on charges of kidnaping brought the information from Boston that Corbett had filed suit against his wife last November in East Cambridge, Mass., naming Quinn as co-respondent.

The three men were held in $1,500 bail each for a hearing next Wednesday.

SING SING CONVICT SHOT DEAD AFTER ESCAPING

OSSINING, N. Y., April 4.—(AP)—A Sing Sing prisoner was shot by a guard with a machine gun as he jumped into the Hudson river today after escaping from the prison by scaling two walls. His body was taken from the water 15 minutes later.

The prisoner, Alphonse Tarrello, 24, made his break for liberty from the midst of a large group of prisoners who were at recreation in the north end of the yard just before they were to be locked up for the night.

A 12-foot wall re-enforces the weakened 16-foot old one on the north. Despite repeated warnings by guards, Tarrello went over both in rapid succession. The guard at the water front said he also called out warnings before turning the fire of the machine gun upon Tarrello.

Witnesses said Tarrello swam a short distance before sinking from the effects of the bullet wounds.

Tarrello was sentenced from the Bronx, New York city, in September, 1927, to from seven and one-half to 15 years for robbery.

Senators Caraway and Robinson Indulged In Political Tilt—Latter Had Asked Raskob If He Intended to Resign Chairmanship of Democratic National Committee — Raskob Had Told the Committee of Contributions of $65,000 to Wet Organization During the Past Five Years —Conflict of Senators Amused the Witness.

WASHINGTON, April 4—(AP)—To the accompaniment of savage exchanges between members of the senate lobby committee, John J. Raskob, chairman of the democratic national committee, calmly testified today that he had contributed $65,000 during the last five years to the Association Against the Prohibition Amendment and that he was a director of the organization.

In a low, even tone the democratic chieftain smilingly replied to questions about his relations with the association. He said it attempted to obtain the election of congressmen favoring repeal or modification of the prohibition act. He added that he was not very active in the work of the association.

"I am largely in the position of being a contributor and a director," he explained.

Raskob appeared amused at the frequent clashes between members of the committee over questions propounded by Senator Robinson, of Indiana, the only republican present.

Other members who attended the hearing were Chairman Caraway of Arkansas, and Senator Walsh, of Montana, both dry democrats. Senators Blaine, of Wisconsin, and Borah, of Idaho, republicans, were absent.

After the hearing, Robinson announced he would call Josephus Daniels, democrat, secretary of the navy in the Wilson cabinet, for questioning on Tuesday concerning an editorial attacking Raskob published recently in his North Carolina newspaper, the Raleigh News and Observer.

Other witnesses expected next week are Henry H. Curran, of New York, president of the Association Against the Prohibition Amendment, and William H. Stayton, of Washington, chairman of the board of directors.

The most heated argument, which produced an uproar in the packed committee room, came when Robinson asked Raskob if he intended to resign his position as democratic chairman.

"I object to that," Walsh snapped.

After a sharp exchange between the two senators, the question went unanswered.

After the hearing was over, Raskob told newspapermen he had no objection to answering the question and added that he did not intend to resign.

The dispute started when Robinson read an editorial from the News and Observer, which criticized Raskob for his connection with the Association Against the Prohibition Amendment.

The editorial, as read by Robinson, said the relation was "so injurious to the democratic party as to put its future in jeopardy" and added that "no man should remain at the head of the committee whose actions and money constitute a party peril."

"I mention this," Robinson said, "because it is a serious charge from a prominent member of your party."

"The question whether he is a democrat hasn't anything to do with this," Caraway commented.

"The point is," began Robinson.

"I know the point," Caraway interrupted, "everybody knows the point."

"The point is," Robinson resumed, "whether Mr. Raskob has taken his present position and left the republican party because he could influence legislation better as chairman of the democratic national committee."

"No," Caraway retorted, "he said he wanted to get in an honest party."

Thirty minutes before the hearing opened the room was virtually filled with persons eager to witness the questioning of the democratic chieftain and when Chairman Caraway pounded for order there was not a vacant space available.

Scores of persons stood in the aisles and around the wall and many were turned away. It was the largest crowd by far that has attended a lobby hearing since they started more than five months ago.

Among those present was F. Scott McBride, general superintendent of the Anti-Saloon league, who may be asked to appear before the committee.

Replying evenly to the question put to him by the committee, Raskob maintained an unruffled composure throughout the hearing in the marked contrast to members of the committee.

At times when the verbal battle between committee members became heated the audience roared with laughter. One of the occasions, Caraway admonished.

"This is Senator Robinson's affair Don't laugh at him."

At the outset of the hearing Senator Walsh asked Raskob if he had attempted to persuade any one connected with the democratic national committee to support the policies of the Association Against the Prohibition Amendment.

"I have been quite careful," Raskob replied, "not to mix my personal feeling in the matter of this prohibition question with the affairs of the democratic national committee. I feel that as chairman of the committee I certainly have no right to attempt in any way to commit the democratic party on either side of this liquor question."

DANIELS TO TESTIFY BEFORE COMMITTEE NEXT TUESDAY

RALEIGH, N. C., April 4.—(AP)—Josephus Daniels, editor of the Raleigh News and Observer, and former secretary, today wired acceptance to senator Robinson of Indiana, to a request that he testify before the senate lobby committee next Tuesday concerning a recent editorial in which he declared that John J. Raskob "should pay his debts to the democratic party and resign as chairman of the executive committee."

In the editorial, Daniels contended that Raskob was more interested in "breaking down the 18th amendment than in the democratic party," and that as long as he was affiliated with the democratic party "millions of voters would look on it as a wet party."

FLIERS BURNED TO DEATH NEAR ROOSEVELT FIELD

ROOSEVELT FIELD, N. Y., April 4—(AP)—Plunging to a fiery landing behind a hill near here, a Bach tri-motored monoplane tonight carried to their death T. Worden Hunter, president of the Bach Aircraft company, and R. W. McAllister, pilot, both of Los Angeles.

Field attendants who rushed to the rescue drew forth the two charred bodies only after flames had reduced the plane to a mass of cinders and twisted bits of metal. Terrific heat forced them to stand idle spectators of the conflagration until the flames subsided sufficiently to permit them to approach.

Witnesses saw the plane circle over the field in order to make a landing into the wind, which was rough. Flying over the plant of the Texas company, on Commerce avenue, Garden City, the ship suddenly plunged from a height of 200 feet.

Employes of the Texas company, with hand extinguishers, were the first to reach the scene, but the blistering heat of the fire prevented them from attempting any move to save the men, who occupied the two pilots' seats of the craft.

Only the three motors of the plane were spared distortion or destruction by the flames.

JUSTICE DEPT. WATCHING PROPOSED STEEL MERGER

WASHINGTON, April 4—(AP)—Representative Laguardia, republican, New York, said today after a visit to the justice department, that the proposed merger of the Bethlehem Steel corporation and the Youngstown Sheet & Tpbe company "was being watched" by the department.

Laguardia added that no merger in recent years had excited so much interest or called forth so much propaganda as this one.

"The Guaranty Trust company of New York," he said, "is sending out telegrams today to stockholders in the Youngstown company advising the merger and urging the signing of proxies. Youngstown stock was selling on the New York exchange today, I am advised, at 146 and with proxy at 170."

NEW YORK, April 4—(AP)—John Erskine, president of the Author's club today announced the executive board of the club has voted to admit women to full membership.

The only woman ever to receive honorary membership in the club was Harriet Beecher Stowe, whose name appears on the list with those of Arnold, Lowell, Whittier, Holmes, Stevenson, Mark Twain, and others.

The first woman to be nominated for membership under the new ruling was Miss Ida Tarbell, who was unanimously accepted.

C. OF C. GETS ASSURANCE THAT NEW ROAD WILL BE BUILT

(Special to The Bulletin)

WILLIMANTIC, April 4—Assurance that attention to the building of a new state road from Willimantic to Lebanon via Mountain street and Village Hill, has been given a committee of the chamber of commerce by John A. MacDonald, state highway commissioner.

While the last session of legislature included the new road in the state trunk line system, it is known that some of these projects do not receive attention for a number of years owing to the annual pressure of highway construction experienced by the department. As a result of the conference, however, Commissioner MacDonald stated that a survey of the Lebanon-Willimantic route would be made during the first part of August and that the actual construction would be done in about two years if it is possible to do so. The fact that the survey would be made next summer is regarded as a satisfactory progress as a start of the project which is fostered by the local chamber and representatives from Lebanon.

The chamber committee comprised Mayor Walter R. King, ex-Mayor Charles A. Gates and Town Clerk Frank P. Fenton. They were accompanied to Hartford by County Commissioner Elisha Waterman and Representative C. L. Pitcher of Lebanon.

The proposed road will begin at the Willimantic city line on Mountain street and end near the Baptist church in Lebanon. It will shorten the good highway distance between Lebanon and Willimantic to approximately six miles. The distance at present by way of Hyde's corner, Franklin or Columbia is approximately from 10 to 12 miles.

Commissioner MacDonald expressed himself as impressed by the arguments placed before him by the committeemen and promised to co-operate with the representatives in the building of the road at the earliest possible date. The department is confronted with the problem of building new highways throughout various parts of Connecticut. Some of these projects were authorized as far back as six years ago. As fast as funds are available these requirements are being met.

ROCKVILLE YOUTH ARRESTED ON CHARGE OF THEFT

(Special to The Bulletin)

WILLIMANTIC, April 4.—A display of soiled bills and several jewelry trinkets led to the arrest of William Wolfenden, 21, of 33 School street, Rockville, early this morning, after an investigation by Captain of Police Frank W. McLean and County Detective Rowe H. Wheeler of this city. Wolfenden, who was taken into custody in Rockville about 1:30 o'clock this morning, will be charged in the court there Saturday morning with entering the former dwelling of Mrs. Sarah Lewis, deceased, and the theft of a sum of money and two bank notes.

Wolfenden's undoing came about during a trip to this city late Thursday afternoon with his 13-year-old brother Edwin. They are former residents of the city. The pair visited the store of Frank Melo on West Main street and there Wolfenden succeeded in having a number of soiled bills changed. In another place he exhibited the trinkets. He told a peculiar story of being in the apartment of Mrs. Lewis, which is just below the one occupied by himself and relatives in Rockville. Mrs. Lewis had died just previously at the town farm in Rockville and Wolfenden said that he found the bed in the apartment covered with blood with a coffin and a revolver in evidence. He tipped the bed over and discovered $700. The allegation is that he took money in bills, two bank books in which entries for about $700 had been made and jewelry which was not valuable. The woman's death occurred last March.

After changing the bills here Wolfenden and his young brother hitch-hiked to South Manchester where they boarded a trolley for Rockville. Meanwhile the authorities here had received a complaint and were busily investigating, so that when the pair left the trolley car they were placed into custody on the strength of information given the Rockville department by the local investigators. The Stafford Springs state police barracks were also working upon the case. After his arrest Wolfenden changed his story and told Police Captain Stephen Tobin of Rockville that he had obtained but $32 in bills. He was for a time thought to be implicated in a $2,500 robbery perpetrated in Rockville a few nights ago. Wolfenden, who is married and the father of several children, moved to Rockville some time ago, his father and brothers going there only last Monday to reside.

A fine of $100 and costs was imposed in police court this morning in the case of Daniel Wack of Elm street, charged with the manufacture of intoxicating liquor. Two other counts of keeping with intent to sell and reputation were nolled upon recommendation of Prosecuting Attorney Harry S. Gaucher.

Wack pleaded not guilty to all three counts, stating that he had not sold any liquor since his last arrest here. He said that the contents of the barrel found working in the rear of the stove at his home was beer mash and he reiterated his story to the officers that he was making the beer for himself and friends at Easter time.

Two samples of the mash were analyzed at Storrs and found to contain 8.88 per cent and 8.54 per cent alcohol. The Wack house was raided recently by Captain Frank W. McLean and Policemen Leo Piche and Ralph Burchnall who found about 50 gallons of mash. The raiding officers and Chief of Police Thomas F. Grady testified for the prosecution.

ADDITIONAL MATTER TO BE CONSIDERED AT MEETING

(Special to The Bulletin)

WILLIMANTIC, April 4.—An additional clause, asking for a vote on the levy of an additional tax on the grand list of 1929, has been inserted in the call of a special town meeting to be held at the town hall next Wednesday evening, April 9. The Taxpayers' Protective association, which secured a petition for a special town meeting, today, officially disclaimed any responsibility for the first clause just mentioned. The petition of the association called for action on three matters, all of which have been properly inserted in the warning and which cover three votes; first in relation to an audit of the accounts of the town, second, the naming of an accountant to do the work, and third, an appropriation for this work. The amount of $10,000 is mentioned in the warning as a suitable appropriation. The insertion of the first clause asking for an additional levy is a move on the part of the selectmen to give the taxpayers an opportunity of increasing the previously voted 8 mill tax to an amount sufficient to meet the budget expenditures during the ensuing year. The alternative is for the selectmen to levy a rate bill which is similar to an additional tax and which is in accordance with a power vested in the selectmen by one of its legislature.

In the solitude of his home on West Main street, Oscar O. Tanner, first democratic mayor of Willimantic, who served two terms, 1898-'99 and 1904-'05 observed his 72nd birthday today. Although suffering periodical attacks of rheumatism the old friend of John L. Sullivan, probably the greatest of boxers, is in general good health. Ex-Mayor Tanner received a number of old friends during the day. Several telephone calls and greeting cards also expressed congratulations. Mr. Tanner was born in this city, April 4, 1858, and with the exception of a few years spent as manager of the Boyle Brother's Credit Exchange in Boston, Mass., he has resided here. He is well remembered as an ardent lover of sports. He was manager of Willimantic's famous baseball team of the Connecticut state league in 1894 and was affiliated with the late Mayor Daniel P. Dunn in conducting baseball here during the years from 1901 to 1905. The late John L. Sullivan, outstanding ringmaster of fistiana, called on Mr. Tanner here on a number of occasions and among the latter's most prized possessions of a large and valuable collection of oddities and antiques is a cane presented him by the famous boxer.

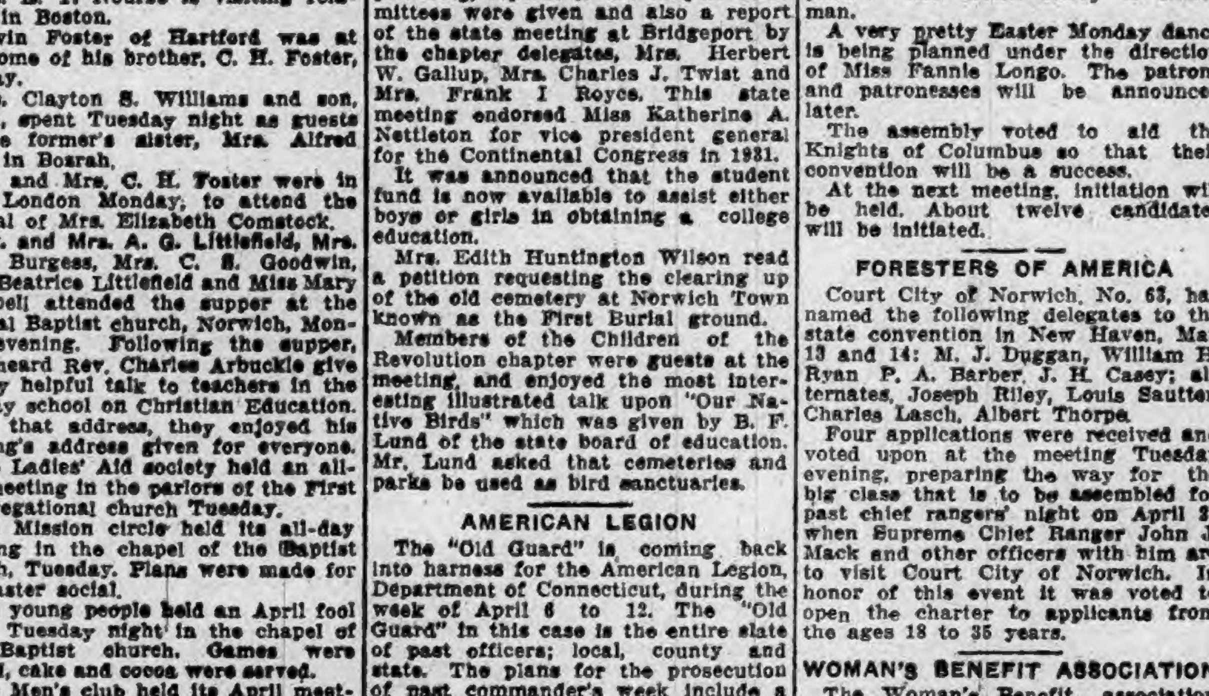
TRANSPORTING A GIANT OF THE FOREST TO NEW HOME



Transplanting an elm tree 53 inches in diameter and nearly a hundred feet in length is no simple matter, but that is what has been done during the past two weeks in Abington at the beautiful country estate of Mrs. T. Morris Murray.

Mrs. Murray is a lover of natural beauty and is especially fond of elms because of their massive proportions. Sighting the giant elm in a swamp land in the Pomfret Landing section of the town, Mrs. Murray fancied the tree and induced the owner to part with it. Doubtlessly the price paid for the specimen was but a fractional part of the cost of removing it. Before many days had passed a group of New York nurserymen were at work in the Pomfret Landing forest, equipped with specially designed apparatus, preparing the tree for removal.

The transplanting of an elm sapling entails hours of painstaking work and one may easily conceive the magnitude of the undertaking that brought the grand-dad of the Pomfret forest to the Abington "Gwen Careg Farm" of Mrs. Murray. Only skilled workmen took part in the project. The elm grows its roots in a wide circle, but not very deep in the earth, and it is without a main "tap" root. Hence the job of the movers was to cut a circular "cake" of earth about 20 feet in diameter and about three to four feet deep. This done, the tree was mounted on a special trailer and moved with the aid of a caterpillar tractor and large trucks. The spectacular achievement shown in the log of the journey, was the fording of Cotton river brook, a tributary of the Quinebaug river between Pomfret Landing and Abington. There were no bridges strong enough to bear up the vast weight of the giant tree and so a special staging had to be constructed.

The tree was more than a month in reaching the Murray estate. It was on the state road between Pomfret and Abington for eleven days, moving only about 800 feet a day. Workmen were preparing it for transplanting today. Within a month the august forest giant will appear exalted among the tree citizenry of the Abington estate though it had sprung up to its lofty heights in the spot where it will soon repose.

DANIELSON

DEFORREST FOUND GUILTY OF BURGLARY AND JAILED

(Special to The Bulletin)

DANIELSON, April 4—Within about a dozen hours after he had broken into the store of Steve Tampas on Furnace street, opposite one of the mills of Powdrell and Alexander, last night, Orvila DeForrest found himself in a cell at Brooklyn jail to remain for six months.

A clever piece of detective work by Chief John McFarland resulted in the prompt apprehension and prosecution of DeForrest. The break at the Tampas store was not discovered until it was opened for business this morning. The place was checked over for losses, and it was apparent that about $3.00 in money had been taken and some cigars and cigarettes. Entrance had been gained from the rear of the building, through a window, after DeForrest had walked across the brook that runs near the building, getting over on a narrow plank.

Questioned by Chief McFarland, Tampas said that a small man had come to the store early last evening, inquired at what time the place was closed and as to whether anyone slept in the building. He was told that no one slept there and that the place closed at 8 o'clock.

With this information Chief McFarland ran some prospects over in his mind and decided that he would like to interview DeForrest. He picked the suspect up in the business section about 4:30 this morning, took him to the police station and questioned him at length. DeForrest persistently denied all knowledge of the affair. Then the chief brought in Tampas, who identified DeForrest as the man who asked him the questions mentioned. Persistent hammering away by the chief finally brought a confession from DeForrest, who exonerated a companion that had been picked up with him from any complicity in the break.

Within an hour after his confession DeForrest had been presented before Judge W. Fenner Woodward and sentenced to serve six months in jail. The prisoner is 34 years old.

FUNERAL

Mrs. Annie L. McQuesen

This afternoon at 2 o'clock at the Nazarene church on Academy street funeral services were conducted by the pastor, Rev. A. E. Gallup, for Mrs. Annie L. McQuesen. During the service Mrs. Leon Brown and Mrs. K. A. Darbie sang two hymns. Burial was in Westfield cemetery, members of the Kamelia, the woman's branch of the Ku Klux Klan conducting the ritualistic burial service. The bearers were Kent A. Darbie, Percy Hammond, Arthur Borden and Henry E. Anderson.

Killingly Hen Doing Well

That East Killingly hen that hibernated for eight months under a great mound of hay at the Otis Chase farm in East Killingly has drawn about as much publicity as a movie star or trans-Atlantic flyer. The story not only won headlines in some of the big city dailies, but also became a subject for radio broadcast, and the publicity was continuing today. Meanwhile, the liberated hen is going splendidly, but will be watched when haying time comes around next summer.

Sunday being Conference Sunday, there are to be no services at the Danielson Methodist Episcopal church, though there will be a session of the church school at 11:45 a. m. Saturday afternoon cars are to leave the church at 3:30 for New London, conveying those who are to attend the Young People's rally, to be held at the Mohican hotel as a feature of Conference week. Robert Smith and Miss Ruth Fiske have charge of the arrangements.

Excepting in temporary cases, there appears to have been a decrease in unemployment in Killingly during the past ten days. This applies in other than the cases of textile workers. Better weather has made possible the undertaking of numbers of outdoor projects that have provided employment to both those who are skilled workmen of one sort and another as well as unskilled workers.

It is unlikely that there will be any organized Clean-up week campaign in Danielson this year. However, Danielson will get its annual clean-up, in fact the work is already underway. Numbers of lawns and yards are being cleared of debris that has accumulated during the winter season. Paper-hangers and painters report a fine demand for their services, some of them having a surplus of jobs on hand.

When the case of Ethel Wood of Attawaugan came up for consideration today, Attorney Arthur G. Bill was agreeable not to prosecute the charge that she had failed to grant half the traveled right of way when her automobile was in collision with one driven by Hiram Warren of East Killingly at Attawaugan yesterday, she agreeing to pay for the damage done to Warren's car.

State Officer John Murphy continued to investigate breaks at summer cottages on the shores of Alexander's lake, and today was seeking to establish who the owners of the cottages are and what may be missing from them. Only the owners can determine the losses after carefully checking up. The cases of the boys involved will come before the town court on Saturday of next week. Meanwhile they are at liberty under bond.

Closing exercises of the Killingly-Brooklyn evening school are planned for Thursday evening of next week at the high school building, where sessions have been regularly held since early last fall. Of the twenty-one students, several of them married women seeking to familiarize themselves with the English language, nearly all will have a part in the program that is being arranged. Miss Mary Potter of the state department of adult education will be present at the exercises to address those attending. Supt. W. E. Parker will present certificates to those who have completed the course, and they will also receive pins for perfect attendance from the D. A. R. Five such pins will be given out.

All deposits made this week in our savings department will draw interest of five per cent. annually from April 1. Save regularly and watch your account grow. The Danielson Trust Co.—Adv.

Savings deposits received today draw interest from the first at the rate of 5 per cent. The Windham County National bank.—Adv.

President Obadiah Butler of the Con-necticut Mills company and Mrs. Butler plan an extended trip in southern states during a leave of absence that Mr. Butler has from his regular routine of work.

Robert K. Bard has been assigned to take the enumeration of population in the town of Brooklyn.

Mrs. Nellie Seaver of Willimantic, a former resident here, is the guest of Miss Ellen F. Darbie of North Main street.

Members of the Ladies' Sewing society of St. Alban's church held a meeting in the parish house this afternoon.

The Danielson Rod and Gun club has arranged eight trap shooting events to run from mid-April to November on certain specified dates. Numbers of devotees of this sport will participate.

Ira A. Warren, who has been making a business census in Killingly, said this morning that the work is practically complete. Mr. Warren will now take up work on the population census in the northwestern section of the town.

Upwards of a score of members of the Danielson Methodist Episcopal church are expected to be in New London Sunday to be present at services held in connection with the annual Southern New England conference.

James R. Walsh will begin the annual collection of town taxes on April 21, and will be regularly engaged with the work for a month.

W. S. JOHNSON DIES IN FLORIDA FROM INFECTION

(Special to The Bulletin)

PUTNAM, April 4—William S Johnson, retired manufacturer, and well known resident of this city, died early this morning at the Tampa hospital in Tampa, Fla., as the result of infection contracted a few days ago. Mr. Johnson was the father of Mrs. John A. MacDonald, wife of the state highway commissioner. He was in his 76th year.

Favored all of his life with almost perfect health Mr. Johnson early in January became ill with an infection which developed uremic poisoning. He was treated by physicians but when the malady attained serious proportions Thursday he was removed to the hospital, and died this morning at 5 o'clock before an operation could be performed.

Mr. Johnson's service of more than a quarter of a century to the city of Putnam brought at its close today a high tribute from his associates and friends who characterized his death as a distinct loss to the city.

Mr. Johnson was born in West Thompson, April 20, 1854, the son of George and Jane Wilkes Johnson. Completing his education in the schools he came to Putnam where he entered partnership with the late E. T. Whittemore and engaged in the manufacture of shoes. In late years Mr. Johnson acquired the interests of his partner and established the firm of W. S. Johnson and Co.

On Dec. 31, 1892 he married Miss Lillian Taylor of Winchendon, Mass. One daughter, Ethel M. Johnson, now Mrs. John A. MacDonald, was born of this union.

In 1893 Mr. Johnson built a large factory on Truesdell street where he continued his industry until his retirement in 1916. Shortly after he became interested in the Putnam Coal and Wood company and for a number of years was president of the corporation. He always held a fondness for the south and for the past twelve years has been wintering at his home in Tampa, Fla.

Politically Mr. Johnson was affiliated with the republican party and was active in its cause, but aside from a term with the board of relief has never held public office. His fraternal associations were with the Putnam lodge of Elks, Quinebaug lodge of Masons and the Israel Putnam lodge of Odd Fellows.

Besides his daughter, Mr. Johnson is survived by three grandchildren, William, Donald and Duncan MacDonald, all of Hartford.

threading their way into the Chicago Loop, save 1,540,000 steps and 140,000 minutes daily, it is estimated, by use of a new pedestrian bridge linking the train level floor of the Northwestern station and the Daily News plaza. The span, about 100 feet long eliminates a dangerous street crossing and permits speeded traffic. It is asserted to be the first bridge built specifically to introduce greater safety into commuting.

PUTNAM

QUARTETTE OF WOONSOCKET BOYS APPREHENDED HERE

(Special to The Bulletin)

PUTNAM, April 4—Trans-Atlantic ocean flights and English channel swimming are fast giving way to the latest school boy sport which appears to be enjoying quite a following among the youths of the Rhode Island city of Woonsocket, police find.

It all began when four youngsters recently played hookey from school, hopped a freight out of Woonsocket, hitch-hiked from Putnam to Danielson and returned safely escaping the police. They boasted about their feat and on Wednesday the boast was an inducement for Peter Gotheaty, 9, Stanley Koback, 12, Edward Kognt, 12, and Raymond Riche, 12, all of Third avenue, Woonsocket to band together for the purpose of surpassing the "record" established by their associates. Accordingly with a wealth of ambition they left school Wednesday afternoon and took passage on a empty freight car out of Woonsocket. It reached Putnam sometime Thursday after dark. Taken with fright, hunger and cold the boys decided to do the right thing and return to their little world in Woonsocket.

Getting on the Providence pike road they soon learned that obtaining rides from passing automobiles after dusk was no easy matter. They took shelter in the Whittlesey barn in East Putnam where they passed the night. They were taken into custody this morning by Captain A. J. Dubreuil who found them with large appetites and eager to eat. Mrs. John J. Jarvis, mother of the late Captain W. J. Jarvis set a meal before the quartette that was fit for a king and found that the boys needed no inducement to eat. Captain Dubreuil conferred with Woonsocket police officials and not many hours passed before parents of the four arrived here to claim their sons who failed to set a new record for seeing the world

The boys asserted that the only handicap they worked under was the fact that they could not get rest in a barn when the mercury remained below the moderate mark.

MRS. WHEELER CELEBRATES HER 91ST BIRTHDAY

(Special to The Bulletin.)

PUTNAM, April 4—The latest Putnam resident to cross the ninety-first milestone of life is Mrs. Eliza Talbot Wheeler, an aunt of Chauncey C. Talbot, well known Putnam business man, whose birthday anniversary was yesterday.

Mrs. Wheeler celebrated her 91st, at her residence at the home of Mrs. W. J. Sherman on 20 Fremont street where she was host to a number of friends who called during the day. The event in Mrs. Wheeler's life was brightened by the shower of greeting cards from friends all over the state, and the host of beautiful flowers which she received. During the afternoon a party of friends called on Mrs. Wheeler and presented her with a birthday cake brilliantly illuminated with candles.

Mrs. Wheeler was born in Union, but spent many years of her life in this city and in Norwich where she is well known. Despite her advanced years Mrs. Wheeler is in possession of her faculties and she enjoys fairly good health.

Putnam harbors another over ninety besides Mrs. Wheeler. She is Miss Lovan Dixon of Ring street who is 95 years old.

Over on Putnam Heights at the home of Selectman Clarence, lives Mrs. Julia Clark Place, who is 100 years old and incidentally Putnam's oldest citizen. Mrs. Place became 100 on March 6.

Miss Gertrude C. Warner entertain-ed the teachers of the Israel Putnam school at afternoon tea in the Kindergarten room on Friday in honor of Miss Mildred S. Torrey whose engagement to James A. Danielson of Danielson was announced.

A menu consisting of grenadined orange salad, cheese sandwiches, violet cakes and coffee was served. Among the table decorations were bouquets of paper violets to which cards were attached, bearing the two names. At the close of the tea these bouquets were presented to the guests and thus the engagement of Miss Torrey and Mr. Danielson was revealed.

Miss Torrey is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Torrey of East Putnam and is a popular teacher in the Israel Putnam school.

There was a large gathering at the Masonic Temple Thursday evening where the observance of past masters night was held. Following a dinner served at the Masonic club, the Masons retired to the lodge rooms on Grove street for the initiation exercises of two newly admitted members. The offices were all filled by past masters of the lodge.

That elusive 12th can of alcohol thrown out of a rum transport a week ago last Thursday evening by Socrates George, Southbridge racketeer was discovered yesterday afternoon on the Providence turnpike road by Captain of Police A. J. Dubreuil. The can containing five gallons of "shine" alcohol suffered no ill effects from the jolt it received after being tossed from the car. It was in plain sight in the vicinity of the Prentice filling station and for a week people casually overlooked the container as "just an old can." George who owned the liquor and was successful in tosing it out of the rumble seat of the transport before Officer Joseph Page became aware of his actions, is now being held by secret service authorities on a charge of owning and keeping and passing bogus money. He is confined at the Providence county jail awaiting a hearing before United States commissioners at Providence on April 11.

Lester Arnold, 12 year old Chapman street boy miraculously escaped serious injury today while riding his bicycle on South Main street. Arnold was in company with another boy and were riding in a zig zag manner up the street. Suddenly they shifted their course and darted across to the sidewalk directly in the path of a grocery truck owned by E. W. Mullan and being operated by Wilfred Sharpe. Sharpe swerved sharply to the left of the street, hurdled the curbing and crashed into the side of the home of Timothy Hannifan on South Main street, missing the boy by inches. Some damage was caused to the truck and a brick base wall of the house was punctured by the impact of the car crashing against it. Sharpe was uninjured.

Sunday April 6, will be the second anniversary of the ruthless killing of State Trooper Irving H. Nelson of the Danielson barracks, at Pomfret by Roland G. Lalone and Albert J. Raymond, Worcester "ice box" bandits. Although two years have slipped by since Officer Nelson met his tragic fate at the Green corners in Pomfret, the barbarism of the act has left an indelible mark in the memories of Windham county residents, which will never be forgotten. Lalone and Raymond, adjudged murderers of the beloved policeman are still at Wethersfield state prison, in the second year of life sentences. Lalone, the most notorious of the pair because of his sensational prison break early in February, is back in Wethersfield with another notch carved in his belt, which represents the life of a Florida policeman who died like Officer Nelson in the pursuance of his duties.

JEWETT CITY

MR. AND MRS. T. B. DUGGAN TO MAKE THEIR HOME IN SOUTH

Mr. and Mrs. T. B. Duggan leave today (Saturday) for their new home in Charlotte, North Carolina, where they will live with their son, William. Mr. Duggan, coming here a boy in his 'teens, has a term of service in the employ of the Ashland Cotton Co. hardly to be equalled by any man who has devoted his life to one branch of the cotton industry. Beginning at 50 cents a day, a boy behind the spinning frames, Mr. Duggan resigned as the overseer of spinning for the same company, where around a half century ago he commenced as a doffer. William Duggan, the younger son, now with a big group of southern mills, was a former superintendent of the Ashland Cotton Co. It is with sincere regret that the townspeople in general will learn of the decision of Mr. Duggan and his good wife, to make their home in the southland.

NO GOLD EXCAVATED BUT PINT BOTTLE DUG UP

During the five months when the state engineers were drilling here to locate the depth and extent of Griswold's underlying rock formation, this being the first work to be done on the big bridge, many went each day to see the cores which were taken from the hollow drill. A small flurry of extra interest was furnished one day when the long power drills ran through a pyrites deposit. The drill operator told a number of interested juvenile observers that it was gold, and they did the rest. One day this week, when an old stump was pulled away, the workmen unearthed a perfectly good pint of real old stuff. The excitement incident to the discovery of gold was as nothing when the shovel man had visions that a possible bootlegger's cache was to be revealed. Strict search, however, failed to locate a duplicate as the big scoop was nosed about with great care, lest damage should be done by possible breakage to another jug of the precious beverage.

Ida Romaine, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Philip Romaine, has returned home from the Backus hospital.

WATER COMPANY MAKING IMPORTANT IMPROVEMENTS

The Jewett City Water company is tackling the big job of opening the state highway in 60 places, at points on Main street. Prior to the building of the new cement highway over Main street in the borough, it is proposed to change all connections with the water main in that area from iron to brass pipe. This arrangement will eliminate to a large extent the liability of emergency work for clogged residence connections. The water company is also carrying on the work of installing water meters for every consumer in the system. Such an arrangement, it is believed, will go a long ways toward controlling water waste during the low water stages of summer.

BAPTIST CHURCH MEETING PLANS FOR YEAR'S EXPENSES

The first quarterly meeting of the Baptist church for 1930 was held in the vestry on the evening of April 2. Arthur M. Brown of the board of trustees presided. The treasurer, Edwin M. Gray reported all bills that had been received, including $104 for insurance, as paid, with a balance of $9 in the treasury. On the note of indebtedness, $617 has been paid, leaving a balance due of $83. There is available in hand to meet this, at the discretion of the trustees, $65 in the Abbie Champlin fund. A forecast of anticipated income for the year's expenses was reported as follows: From 68 pledgers, $1,771.60; from 24 other persons who use envelopes, a probable income of $424.20; from loose collections, $150; making a total of $2,345.80. Additional pledges to missions were reported of $373. Possible projected repairs, including painting of the parsonage, together with possible outstanding obligations, were discussed and plans devised whereby it is hoped that by the Easter season financial provision can be made to cover these needs.

CHEVROLET

It's wise to choose a SIX!

It is wise to choose a six-cylinder motor—the only way to get six-cylinder smoothness. Six-cylinder smoothness takes out vibration and roughness. This saves motor, chassis, body, passengers, and the driver.

The Chevrolet is a six. Yet it sells at a price that anyone can afford to pay. And it lasts longer, because of fine materials, oversize parts, and a big, smooth, 50-horsepower six-cylinder engine that always "takes it easy."

With all its six-cylinder smoothness and power the New Chevrolet Six saves gasoline and oil, through modern efficiency—overhead valves—high compression power—improved carburetor—long-wearing pistons—crankcase ventilation—air cleaner. Thus Chevrolet brings truly modern transportation within reach of all who can afford any car. Chevrolet economy also means sincerity in manufacture. To illustrate:

Chevrolet valves are adjustable—to save replacing. Chevrolet molded brake lining greatly reduces brake upkeep. The rear axle inspection plate on the Chevrolet means accessibility. The whole car is full of such evidence that true economy comes from advancement and refinement.

There are four extra-long, chrome-vanadium springs controlled by hydraulic shock absorbers. They are mounted lengthwise, in the direction of car travel, with self-adjusting spring shackles to maintain quietness.

With modern low suspension and extra wheelbase, the Chevrolet Six has good proportions. The impressive front view is distinguished by the genuine honeycomb radiator. The gasoline tank is in the rear for safety and finer appearance.

Chevrolet beauty instantly says "Body by Fisher"—style, comfort, safety—Fisher composite steel-and-wood construction—non-glare windshield—adjustable driver's seat—deeper cushions—greater leg room—clearer vision—finer fabrics and fitments.

There is just as much extra value throughout. BY ANY STANDARD the Chevrolet Six is the wisest choice in the low-price field . . . with its six-cylinder valve-in-head motor . . . with full scientific equipment . . . with Body by Fisher . . . with four long semi-elliptic springs, long wheelbase, low suspension, rear mounted gasoline tank, honeycomb radiator and all the other features of this day and age.

STREAM POLLUTION

Connecticut has been displaying much interest and getting some results in the effort that is being made against stream pollution. It hasn't stopped it and it will be a long time before enough relief is provided to permit the streams to purify themselves, but it is moving in the right direction and through slow, persistent effort will more than counteract the normal increase in pollution.

In view of what is being done here, it is interesting to note that Michigan is doing the same and doing it well, if we can judge by reports. It was only last year that Michigan created a new stream control commission, but it was given the necessary authority to get results and it appears to be doing so.

It is disclosed that in the brief time that the commission has been at work seven important cities of the state have established sewage disposal plants, and in 23 others land has been purchased and engineers are at work on plans for disposal plants for those communities. How hopefully the outcome is viewed by the Detroit News is disclosed in the statement that "At one time the question of curbing water pollution in this state appeared almost hopeless. Many of our rivers and lakes were nothing more than open sewers, reeking with filth, devoid of all fish and aquatic life and a threatened menace to health. This is now gradually changing and it is not too much to hope that eventually we will approach close to that point where our waters will have regained their former purity."

Although not as old a state, it would appear that conditions in some instances had gotten to be as bad in the rivers of Michigan as they have in Connecticut. From the manner in which that state has gone after its problems there would seem to be no question about the outcome. Having been provided with all the authority that is required to accomplish what is desired and needed, the commission is apparently doing its part and in its activities it would appear to be getting the necessary cooperation of the municipalities and industries which are responsible for the pollution. Thus what Michigan is doing impresses, not solely because it is getting results in so many instances, but because it is being accomplished in such a short period of time.

SAFETY FOR CHILDREN

Those who have been engaged in efforts to promote greater safety in the highways, by teaching children the importance of keeping out of the streets and looking to see if vehicles are approaching before crossing, know that it is necessary to keep persistently after the youngsters and send home their warnings frequently. Even though it doesn't accomplish all the protection that is desired, it keeps the thought alive, and that is what is so much needed. It is necessary that the children should have a thought, even during their play, about the consequences of their carelessness.

The city of Indianapolis is one of the larger cities where much faith is placed in the practice of instructing the children to safeguard themselves. Organizations have joined hands in promoting safety work in all the schools of the city. In the past the chief attention has been devoted to the elementary schools, but this year it has been extended to take in the high schools. It is conceivable that high school pupils can show an improper amount of thought in this respect, and that they might be inclined to resent the idea that they needed to be warned to look out for themselves, but it is being found that there is much interest being developed in this effort to save the lives of the school children.

The results of such educational efforts cannot fail to be beneficial. By constant efforts it is inevitable that the habitually heedless child is sooner or later going to be impressed by the safety instructions and guided by the good example and warnings which are bound to come from more thoughtful and careful companions. With the thought of safety firmly planted in the minds of the school children, there are bound to be certain leaders who will shoulder the responsibility of looking after the more reckless.

When we stop to consider the large number of persons killed by automobiles and the many children whose lives are wiped out because of the failure to exercise a bit of care, it can be appreciated that it is time well spent when efforts are directed to securing greater thought for personal safety on the part of all, and particularly the children who are so wrapped up in their play or errand that they fail to comprehend the constant peril.

MAKING A FINISHED JOB

Uncle Sam has had several experiences with disturbing conditions in Nicaragua, times when it has been necessary to send marines there for the maintenance or restoration of peace. Some years ago it was able to pacify the country and put the government on a better footing. With that accomplished, the marines were withdrawn. That seemed to have been the signal for which certain ones were waiting. It was not long before revolutionary tactics were underway and the country faced a disastrous situation.

Our marines have now been in Nicaragua a sufficient time to make that republic understand the benefits of peaceful conditions, a constitutional government and an unimpeded development of its commercial activities. From time to time it has been considered advisable to recall a certain number of the marines and last month almost a half of the force left. There yet remain close to 1,000 marines who are helping to police the country and also training the Nicaraguans as a military force in that republic.

This country has had no other object in going into Nicaragua than to be of service to that republic and to guard it against the devastating conditions which never fail to accompany revolutions. Repeatedly has it been disclosed that Nicaragua has recognized and appreciated the good work that has been accomplished as the result of the request made to this government to intervene.

When the last of the marines will be called home is uncertain. It is quite evident that their stay there is not proving unpleasant to the government or to the people. The desire in such instances is to see that a good job is done. There are always those who are clamoring for the recall of the marines and there are those who are insisting that they should be kept there until it is certain that there would not be a return to former conditions upon their departure. Whatever is an influence for good in Nicaragua, that government should not be anxious to see go. Neither this country nor Nicaragua would welcome the idea of returning the marines there as the result of a premature withdrawal. It is far better that a thorough job should be done before the instructors are brought home.

BRINGING SOUTH AMERICA NEARER

It was only a few years ago that it was necessary to send a cablegram by way of Europe if it were desired to communicate in that manner with South American cities.

It was in the same way that it was necessary to proceed if a person wished to obtain a first class passage to ports on the South American coast.

Since those days important changes have been made. There are now excellent shipping facilities between the two continents, passenger, mail and freight service having undergone great improvements. It is possible today to get fairly rapid transportation by water, to get quick mail service by airplane and now it has been demonstrated that the important cities in the South American countries are in such close touch as to be reached by telephone. The inauguration of this service by President Hoover in his communications with the presidents of Chile and Uruguay marks an important advancement in the methods of communicating with those countries.

It has long been contended that the continents of the western hemisphere should have closer relationships. In recognition of the fact that they were not, but ought to be, in closer touch, special efforts have been made to bring it about. The war gave it a boost, but since then efforts for better trade relations have made excellent progress until we are no longer dependent upon others to relay our communications. We can talk to South America even as we can talk to Europe. We can fly to South America even as we can fly to Europe and, through the developments being made from year to year, we are steadily reducing the distance that has hitherto existed between the United States and the republics of South America. It is bound to be mutually advantageous in every way, a promoter of better understanding and closer business contact.

COSGRAVE'S RETURN

In the Irish Free State as in France it appears impossible to get along without the head of the government whose administration on one vote failed to get the proper support. France saw the Tardieu government go down only to find it necessary to recall him as premier. In Ireland, President Cosgrave of the Free State lacked a few votes of the necessary number to carry through the government measure, but it was only a very short time before the dail reelected him.

The Free State has shown by the vote in the dail that it is not ready to put the chief opposition leader at the head of the government. President Cosgrave has been in office for about eight years and has so administered the office as to gain the confidence of the people. He has established a record in the office, which was hardly to be expected in view of the conditions and many parties in the Free State, but it can undoubtedly be attributed to the masterly way in which he has directed the government and the accomplishments which stand to his credit.

That he has done much for the Free State in spite of the opposition he had encountered is fully understood. It was not to be expected that he would have ironed out all of its difficulties and solved all of its problems in such a period of years, but he has made a record that will stand scrutiny and there is no better evidence of that than the manner in which the members of the dail stood by him when it came to electing a head of the government. The fact that he has done much is recognized and the vote of restoration means that it is desired that he should do more. There is no willingness to see the constructive work he has carried on torn down and cast aside.

EDITORIAL NOTES

If Georgia has 30,000 adults in illiteracy schools it is doing more than some other states.

Just because you can gaze into the sky and see something you had never noticed before doesn't mean that it is a new planet.

The man on the corner says: If everyone could only hear the other fellow's comment when failing to give common traffic signals!

Something more to worry about: A western professor believes that the shape of shoulder blades furnishes a clue to the expectation of life.

Those Norwich votes in the Digest poll give the impression that the city is wet, and that has no reference to our reservoir equipment either.

THE MAN WHO TALKS

Has there ever been a time in the history of organized Christianity when so many of its features have demanded special attention as to day? So much so that the question of making so many outward observances at the expense of quiet study and meditation is very frequently being raised. To hold meetings for the purpose of worship and extending the cause of Christianity has already been done because they are of fundamental importance. But when we look over the weekly calendar of many of our churches we wonder what time the people have for quiet meditation. How much good literature do they have time to read? How much deep thinking do they give to the great fundamentals without which we shall soon become mentally and morally barren. Has not the time fully come for demanding more time for quiet thinking?

One of the great orators of Massachusetts many years ago had just returned to his home after an extended tour of public speaking in the Western states, when a committee from an adjoining town awaited upon him with the urgent request that he deliver a course of lectures in their home town upon a given subject. When they had made their request he replied a bit curtly: "Gentlemen, you must give me time to fill up!" And he certainly was dead right in making this request. No matter how big a reservoir is, if it is constantly giving forth without a corresponding intake, sooner or later it is going to run dry. Precisely the same law holds good in the intellectual field; if one is constantly imparting knowledge the reservoir will run dry unless he demands time for the exhausted mind to fill up again to the brim.

The man whose business in life is along intellectual lines must resist the outside urge to become a sort of jack-of-all-trades, not because these things are necessarily wrong, but because his vocation is along more important lines. It may be all right for the mental worker to make a cedar chest for his wife, if he does it at his leisure and for recreation, but he mustn't be at the beck and call of every woman who wants a cedar chest for that is not his main business. If he has qualified himself for a learned profession, that is the one important thing in life that he must do, and he must let nothing swerve him from that main purpose. A certain high school principal out of the goodness of his heart offered his services as janitor for a term to save money for the town. Was it appreciated? Not on your sweet life! Another principal was hired.

Isn't it a glorious thing that man is an insatiable animal? Not that he is never satisfied, but that he has a mind that will be forever searching after things to be sought. This has been suggested by the recent addition of a ninth planet to our solar system, whose orbit is so far removed from that of Neptune that its distance has not yet been determined. We can get some idea of its distance from our planet when it is reported that its light has just appeared on the earth, and light travels somewhere around 100,000,000 miles per second. When such amazing distances are brought to our notice we feel our utter inability to grasp them, and we feel like the psalmist when he asked this question: "Lord, what is man, that thou art mindful of him or the son of man that thou visitest him?"

A group of men were recently discussing on the steps of the national capitol the personel of the senate, when two of that august body passed by. "What is the secret of those men's success?" one of their number asked. This was the answer given to their question: "Both of those men have brains, and know how to use them." This reply seemed to meet with the approval of the whole group. It is generally recognized as a law of nature that if any great outstanding gift which the Creator has given to man is used properly there is always a noticeable return. We are always rewarded if we make a wise use of our native talents; and we are correspondingly punished if we either neglect or abuse them. Nature is generous in rewarding and merciless in punishing. It is just as true in America today as it was in Judea that "God is never mocked, that whatsoever a man soweth that shall he also reap."

The above paragraph is a reminder of what one may see on the streets of Washington—any day, or in any other city for that matter. The man approaching us with quick step, piercing eyes and erect form is Justice Oliver Wendell Holmes. The pleasant look upon his face is due to the fact that his fellow companions on the supreme bench have just celebrated his 89th birthday. Here is a man who many years ago established a great reputation as chief justice of the supreme court of Massachusetts. He inherited great talent from his father, but he rose to fame not on inherited mental capital, but by making a long and proper use of his own native ability. It is a fact of physiology that nothing is more conducive to a long life than using the faculties we have reasonably. Such a career emphasizes this saying: "To him that hath shall be given."

Washington presents many sights along this line that ought to be an inspiration to any ambitious boy. Elihu Root, another octogenarian of worldwide reputation, whom some writers pronounce one of the greatest secretary's of state that we have ever had, may frequently be seen in public; a splendid example of a man who has attained advanced years by making a right use of every God-given faculty. As these words are written there arises that splendid specimen of good health united with wonderful vigor of mind and heart till he was into the nineties, Chauncey M. Depew, so long at the head of The New York Central railroad. Here was a man who, by living the right sort of life and using his great talents that God had given him, lived to an extreme old age. Where there is the desire even smaller men, "can make their lives sublime."

These men to whom attention has been drawn are products of the American university. They had all the advantages of a liberal education. But it happens now and then that a great spirit comes into this world that is denied the opportunity of a college education. But when the right sort of stuff is there even this handicap cannot keep them from attaining immortality. A good illustration of this is the grand old wizard of Menlo Park whose mastery of electricity has made him one of the greatest—if not the greatest—inventors of all time. He is now an old man but is working with youthful enthusiasm to make rubber culture a possibility on our own continent. Does it not seem that these men with mighty projects to perform are under a special providence because their deeds are a blessing to the entire human family?

The basking shark of subarctic waters and the carchardon of tropical waters near Australia and New Zealand are among the largest known fish. Both grow to a length of about 45 feet.

These Tables Give All Population Censuses of All New London County Towns

The subjoined tables give the population of all towns in New London county for all official censuses up to the one now being taken. The census of 1790 was somewhat imperfect; of New London county it stated: "The return from this county is so blended that the number in each town cannot be ascertained. The aggregate is 33,000."

In many cases, apparent losses are explained by the setting off of new towns out of the old ones. The towns set off since 1756, with the dates of their incorporation and the names of the towns they were taken from, are as follows: Bozrah, 1786, from Norwich; East Lyme, 1839, from Lyme and Waterford; Franklin, 1786, from Norwich; Griswold, 1815, from Preston; Ledyard, 1836, from Groton; Lisbon, 1786, from Norwich; Montville, 1786, from New London; North Stonington, 1807, from Stonington; Old Lyme, 1855, from Lyme; Salem, 1819, from Colchester, Lyme and Montville; Sprague, 1861, from Lisbon and Franklin; Waterford, 1801, from New London.

A Washington Bystander

By KIRKE L. SIMPSON
Associated Press Staff Writer

WASHINGTON, April 4—Time has been when the job of white house medicine man has been a stepping-stone to higher preferment.

The case of the late Maj.-Gen. Leonard Wood is outstanding. As an army doctor, a contract surgeon as they call them in those days before the army medicos got military rank and title, he served a hitch as medical-military aide to President McKinley.

That's how come he met up with one Theodore Roosevelt, and from that came history, including the Rough Rider command that ultimately led Wood almost to the presidency itself.

Later on, in President Wilson's time, Dr. Cary Grayson got to be a nationally-known figure, also an admiral-doctor, through a white house assignment.

Still later, Dr. Sawyer, of President Harding's home town of Marion, Ohio, got to be a general officer of the medical reserve by the same route. He promptly clad his diminutive figure in military trappings and was a familiar sight about Washington for a year or two.

Boone

Dr. Sawyer, however, turned to veterans' hospitalization work at the request of his long time friend, the president, so white house doctoring shifted to other shoulders as a regular thing.

And that was when Joel Thompson Boone, navy doctor from Pennsylvania came in. He has been in ever since, and is a mighty important factor in white house internal economy to this good day.

It's his job to keep President Hoover physically fit. About the only form of physical exercise for which Mr. Hoover discloses a complex is fishing. Medicine-balling every morning has been forced on him by command of his medicine man, who can be a tyrant on occasion.

Battlefield Doctor

Yet Doc Boone, a small man, slenderly erect, dark, with steady, serious eyes and no political ambitions that anybody has yet heard of, is a very game man. He did not get his war cross for tending marine brigade wounded under shell fire at Belleau Wood for nothing.

He is very popular with a legion of newspaper men who have walked the white house beat. Hardly a one of 'em but has been vaccinated or otherwise medicated by Doc Boone. He has pioneer blood in his veins, that of Daniel Boone.

YOUR HEALTH

Parrot Fever

By Dr. H. S. Mustard, Department of Health, Nashville, Tenn.

(From Gorgas Memorial Institute)

The newspapers have been devoting considerable space to a disease described as "parrot fever." "Mysterious, death-dealing, dread malady," are some of the descriptive phrases used in connection with the disease. Those who own parrots are eyeing askance these erstwhile boon companions, death-dealing, dread malady," are good to eat. Far be it from us to eulogize or even to defend parrots. At best, they are noisy brutes, frequently ribald and insulting, and always they pack a mean beak, capable of taking three or four ounces of flesh or the end of a finger from the unwary. But be all of this as it may, if you are one of these people who has put up with a parrot for years, and if the children like the rascal, there is no real reason for alarm. Psittacosis, or "parrot fever," does not just "spring up." It is essentially a "catching" disease, and can no more arise spontaneously than can typhoid fever or a good cotton crop. It is only where the parrot has been recently imported, or where one of our naturalized parrots has been in contact with one recently imported, that the disease occurs. This means only that some of our immigrant parrots have proven themselves undesirable aliens, presenting us with a disease of their native country.

After all, there have been only a few cases and fewer deaths. It is nothing new to science; and though somewhat of an enigma, it has not been considered enough of a human problem to justify any extensive research in the past. Of course, it's good stuff from a newspaper standpoint, being both news and mystery. There is waiting a public, not one in a thousand of whom ever heard of psittacosis. Somebody dies of this "new" disease, and it becomes news. Add to this news element the appeal of the parrot. This bird, with his bright plumage, smacks of tropical countries and romance, of sandy beaches and a surging surf, of the black eye patches and wooden legs of pirates. And nobody ever has understood just why parrots talk. Aren't these the ingredients of public interest? Surely they are, and we have no quarrel with the newspapers or the interested public, but—have you had your child immunized against diphtheria? Now, there's a disease that is a worthy foeman for any man's steel. It has no raucous parrot ambassador as his psittacosis; it has no bright plumage or romance; it seldom gets its name in the paper. But for silent, drab, tireless energy, it represents the highest degree of efficiency. Where parrot fever kills one, diphtheria kills tens of thousands. Naturally, the latter is not news; it has been going on for too long a time, and everybody knows it.

By all means, read about parrot fever. Use it as small talk when the conversation drags at social functions. Tell of parrots you have met, but—have you had your child immunized against diphtheria?

Ask your doctor.

SUNDAY MORNING TALK

The Privilege of Prayer

Prayer truly is a wonderful privilege, and one that we fear is not appreciated by the majority of Christians. If we had more praying Christians, we would have more working Christians.

It truly is a wonderful privilege to be able to talk with our maker, to tell Him our troubles and distresses, and ask His help and guidance, which we know we shall receive if we but trust Him fully. If we would but go to Him more often with the things which perplex and trouble us, casting all our care on Him and leaving it there, not taking part of it away with us, but taking Him at His word, trusting Him to straighten things out for us, and make things right, how much happier we would all be, and how many more happy hearts there would be in this world.

"Oh, what peace we often forfeit,
Oh, what needless pain we bear,
All because we do not carry
Everything to God in prayer."

Don't we sometimes forget to ask Him to keep us in the right way, to guide our footsteps along the path of life, and then trust Him fully? Would not our feet slip less often if we would do this? Prayer produces faith, the more we pray the stronger is our faith in God, and then we turn more readily to our maker in praise and thanksgiving as well as for guidance.

When we come to God by way of prayer, we come to one who knows our lives, our very thoughts and deeds. While earthly friends may misunderstand us He knows all about us, and it is a blessed privilege to come to Him by way of prayer and know that He will hear us, that He is able to answer our prayer and do for us all that He has promised. Jesus said, "All things, whatsoever we shall ask in prayer, believing, ye shall receive." It has always been a great joy to me to know that we can come to God at all times. We do not have to be shut in our closet or alone in our room in order to talk with Him. Our heart can cry out to Him and a little prayer be offered as the impulse comes to us, while we are busy about our work. God's ear is always open to hear us, no matter where we may be. We are commanded to "pray without ceasing," and prayer is the only way to keep close to God. If we give up praying our feet will be sure to slip and our hold on Him will be lost. But we should not only pray for ourselves; we should pray for others also. There is not much danger of losing our own souls if we have a deep interest in the souls of others. One of the great drawbacks today is that we do not have a deep enough yearning for the souls of the unsaved.

THE GARDEN

By REX REED

Quarantining For Pests

Recently there appeared in the newspapers of our state the information that Connecticut was in line for state wide quarantine because of the Japanese beetle.

The plant bulb and nursery quarantine problem and one over which the grower has virtually no control whatever is a most serious one indeed. Originally conceived to benefit the grower, and received with favorable approval of all concerned, the benefit like many another piece of legislation has proved a hindrance instead of a help to the very cause it was intended to help. With the growth of federal legislation and organization created to administer the laws, the idea of public service seems to be lost sight of entirely. As the quarantines increased they aimed to prevent the entry into our country of foreign pests; to prevent the movement of pests from one state to another; and to check the movement of plants from place to place within the states. This of course would be the inevitable way to curb the spread of pests, but last year growers of dahlias, gladiolus, delphiniums, hollyhocks, and other bulbs and plants were virtually encircled and forbidden to ship their plants within their own territory in order to stamp out the corn borer, and the edict has gone forth that all corn land of last year must be turned before April 15th or suffer the penalty of the law. This procedure is certainly paternalism with a vengance. There is but one way out of this dilemma and that is for the federal board to give to the subject of a quarantine in any state careful and serious consideration whether the quarantine is justified by reason of the good it may do or unjustified by the harm it may do. But there is no provision in the federal quarantine statute whereby such consideration can be given. A change in the law should be made whereby the secretary of agriculture should be made to show before putting the quarantine into effect that the benefits outweigh the damages.

Now, here is the situation as it was revealed to me last year: Said a nursery man to whom I had presented the argument of necessary cooperation on the part of all nursery and bulb growers, "The quarantine in Jersey against the Japanese beetle has been a good thing for me; it has been a good thing for all New England!" This, I admit, is the natural attitude to take, but one naturally very destructive to public interests. It is just this; my gardens and my neighbor's gardens, though the most wonderful gardens in the world, are shut out of the markets of the states and of the world. We can not ship out a single flower grown in our territory because of the quarantine while every other garden in the country pours its products into our territory. There is certainly nothing fair in that. Let us set up an interstate tariff wall of any character whatever and a protest that would out howl the fanatics would be heard from every section of our country. Nurserymen and plant and bulb growers in all sections of our country must continue to buy and sell, Japanese bettle or no Japanese beetle, because bills must be paid. Our great and immediate task is so to adjust ourselves to the quarantine requirements of the hour that we may so distribute our stock as to lessen the shock of things verbotten as much as possible. Perhaps we may be able soon to bring science to our aid. Right now they are trying out in the experiment stations in New York and New Jersey the effects of electricity upon the larvae of the Japanese bettle. It has been found that the larvae or grubs of the pest are killed without injury to the plants. Everybody who loves shrubs and flowers should be brought to see that quarantine, as quarantine laws now are, should be changed as speedily as possibley because they are really destructive of that which they seek to preserve and encourage. Flowers are for the beautification of the home, the public garden, the last resting place of our beloved ones. The flower nursery business in our country runs into the hundreds of millions of dollars. Aside from the financial consideration it is one of the greatest refining resources in the world. Wear a flower, grow a rose, a dahlia, a gladiolus, or a bed of pansies, and be happy.

"For Others' Sake"

SCRIPTURE: Memory Verse: "For their sakes I sanctify myself" (John 17:19).

Read: John 17:12-23.

MEDITATION: "For their sakes" might be called Jesus' motto. "For their sakes" was part of the "joy set before him," when "he endured the cross." "For their sakes" will carry man and women through hardships otherwise difficult, if not impossible, to handle. This world is full of people who need girding for their own battles. They need the help that comes from associating with glowing souls. They need the aspect of good cheer. Mrs. Alice Freeman Palmer, who knew much hardship, had a way of radiating courage and cheer which gave others support. After her death a farmer's wife, who used to be cheered and comforted by meeting her at Boxford Station, wrote: "Even her pictures speak, I cut one from a Boston paper. It is framed on the wall over my table. I often look at it and promise 'I will be a better woman, Mrs. Palmer, because you have lived.'" This trouble of mine that is so hard to bear—can I not carry it bravely today for the sake of those near me who need my courage?

PRAYER: We stand in awe, O Lord, of the inevitable power of our daily lives for good and for ill. Make us to be the instruments of grace and truth and grant that none may remember us as the beginning of their sin. Amen.

Stories That Recall Others

Common or Garden Variety

Little Teddy had a turtle, bought in the city, of which he was duly proud and which was the admiration of the neighborhood youngsters. Joe, the older boy next door, a nature student, asked Teddy just what kind of a turtle it was. The young owner was secretly stumped, but he replied with a fair show of confidence: "Why, it's a store turtle!"

Couldn't Be Done

Joan had just made a report on the dealings between George Washington and Lafayette in a history recitation period in one of the schools. At one time in her speech she used the expression, "Lafayette said to George Washington."

The teacher asked for criticism on the report. Jack raised his hand and said in all solemnity: "Lafayette couldn't have said anything to Washington. Lafayette is a city."

BURGESS BEDTIME STORY

Mrs. Quack Gets Her Corn

Judge not all men by just a few;
'Twould be unfair this thing to do.
—Farmer Brown's Boy.

Peter Rabbit would like to have talked all night with Mrs. Quack at the Smiling Pool, but Mrs. Quack was tired and presently she rejoined the other Ducks and Peter was left alone. Now, Peter is a good-hearted little fellow. He remembered what Mrs. Quack had said about wishing that she might have a dinner of corn. He remembered it and he wished with all his might that he could tell Farmer Brown's Boy that Mr. and Mrs. Quack and their friends had arrived and wanted some corn. But he couldn't. Of course not. There wasn't any way for him to tell Farmer Brown's Boy.

Peter was so excited by the return of the Quacks that he decided not to go home that night. Of course, he should have been home by daylight. He should have been over in the dear Old Briar-patch. But he wasn't. He was still over there in the alder swamp on the edge of the Smiling Pool where the Laughing Brook comes in. Mr. and Mrs. Quack and their six friends were awake very early in the morning. Peter could hear them talking together in low tones. He couldn't hear what they were saying, but he could tell that they were deciding on something very important.

After a while Mrs. Quack swam over near Peter. "Good morning, Peter," said she. "I have some news for you."

"What is it?" cried Peter eagerly.

"We have decided to stay here to rest for another day," replied Mrs. Quack. "We were going on, but Mr. Quack and I are very fond of the Smiling Pool, so we have decided to stay another day. You see, it is very quiet and nice here, and then, too, we can easily get to the Big River where the wild rice grows."

"I am glad you are going to stay," cried Peter. "I do wish Farmer Brown's Boy would bring some corn over here for you."

Suddenly Mrs. Quack lifted her head high and sat very still listening. "I hear a dog," said she. "I hear a dog barking. I have never heard that dog before when I have been here."

Peter cocked his ears and listened. Then he grinned. "That's a new dog," said he. "That's a new dog living at Farmer Brown's. He isn't a bit like Bowser the Hound. He's little and quick. I have to watch out when he's around. If you'll excuse me, I guess I'll go and see where he is."

So Peter Rabbit hopped along up through the alders and finally poked

"I hear a dog," said she. "I hear a dog barking" across the Green Meadows. Flip the Terrier was racing about just for the fun of running and all the time barking. Back of him was Farmer Brown's Boy and at the heels of Farmer Brown's Boy trotted Bowser the Hound.

"I wish," thought Peter, "that I could get Farmer Brown's Boy over here to the Smiling Pool. If he could once see those Ducks, I know he would get some corn for them. I know what I'll do. I'll go back and tell Mrs. Quack to fly over to the Big River. If she and her friends will do that, Farmer Brown's Boy will be sure to see them."

So Peter hurried back to the Smiling Pool. "Farmer Brown's Boy and that dog I told you about and Bowser the Hound are coming!" cried Peter. He hadn't intended to frighten Mrs. Quack, but this is just what he did do. Mrs. Quack at once gave the alarm signal and took to the air. All the other Ducks followed. They headed straight for the Big River.

Peter stared after them for a moment. Then he scampered back to a hiding place in the alder swamp. For a long time nothing happened. Then Farmer Brown's Boy suddenly appeared on the bank of the Smiling Pool. He began throwing corn out into the water. Peter grinned. He knew then that Farmer Brown's Boy had seen Mrs. Quack and her friends when they flew to the Big River. So it was that when they returned at dusk that night they had their dinner of corn.

EXONERATION FOR LABBE IN CORONER'S FINDING

In a finding given out Friday by Coroner Edward G. Something went wrong with the engine in the machine and Mr. Mills, lighting a match started to explore beneath the hood. The flame from the match set fire to the carburator and the cab started to blaze.

An oral call to the fire department brought out Engine No. 2, and Deputy Chief D. J. Brennan. The flames were extinguished with three gallons of chemical.

JUDGMENT IS GIVEN FOR COLCHESTER DEFENDANT

Judgment in favor of the defendant is given by Judge Christopher L. Avery of the superior court in a suit in which Hyman Berman of Colchester sought to recover $500 damages to his automobile from Dwight H. Marvin of Colchester.

An automobile owned by Berman and operated by Marvin, backed out of a garage driveway in Colchester several months ago and was struck by another machine. Counter suits were filed by Berman and the operator of the other car at the time and were subsequently settled. A dispute as to the partial liability of Marvin arose and in an amended complaint to his original suit Berman sought damages from Marvin. Testimony was heard in the matter by Judge Avery in the superior court in New London two weeks ago, at which time he reserved decision.

SPLENDID FASHION SHOW GIVEN AT SILBERMAN'S

What the women will wear this spring in the line of apparel, millinery, shoes and jewelry, in order to keep in step with Dame Fashion, was exhibited at the fashion show sponsored by Silberman's Furniture store, which was held Friday evening at the store, 37-41 Main street, with an official attendance of 1,200, who acclaimed it one of the best ever held in this city. Eight Norwich stores cooperated with Silberman's in staging the delightful event, which, incidentally, noted the second anniversary of Silberman's entrance into the business field of Norwich. An added feature of the show was an elaborate programme of entertainment.

Latest and smart dresses, coats, shawls and the like, with the last thing in millinery, shoes and jewelry, were shown by a group of live models furnished by the stores cooperating. The mannequins gracefully sported their wares amid a beautiful setting on the first floor of the store, an elevated platform, a spotlight loaned by the Palace theatre and palms arranged by Hawkins being used. Music was furnished by the Happy Boys during the show, which was witnessed by an admiring and enthusiastic gathering.

Pupils of Miss Helena Crandall, teacher of dancing, supplied a part of the entertainment programme and were very well received in their graceful and intricate dance numbers, Theresa Fumignaro, 5 years old, and Miss Crandall being accorded especial applause. The numbers rendered were Kaleenka by Phyllis Curland, Swedish Doll by Vera Kowalchik, Columbine by Paul Smith, Elizabeth Smith and Walter Crandall; Gavotte, Betty Spaulding; Dorothy by Theresa Fumignaro, 5; Mary Had a Little Lamb, Marie Fitzgerald; My Lady Go a-Walking, Dorothy Hubbard, Murial Trachtenberg and Marion Rubin; Easter Rabbits, Marybelle Ward, Priscilla Goodale; Bell Hop, Walter Crandall; Fashionette, Miss Helena Crandall.

A group of selections furnished by the Happy Boys, stringed instruments, was a big feature, the numbers including Happy Days, Should I, Sweet Sue, Hand Me Down My Walking Cane, and Don't Sing Oloha. The members of the orchestra comprise Arthur, Otto and Albert Berberick, Joseph Goodrow and Eli Jacobson. Al. Perrin, colored comedian, accompanied by the Happy Boys, pleased in song, dance and monologue. The Ideal Radio orchestra also gave an acceptable program of the latest dance selections.

Herbert Ferguson acted as master of ceremonies and Herman Sharpe, manager of Silberman's, officiated as host of the evening. The entire arrangements of the affair were in charge of A. W. Silverberg.

The stores and models participating in the show were as follows: Eagle's Clothing Co., Misses Helene Crawford, Edith Somers and Wara Warcomski; Mandell's, Misses Fay Hill and Miriam Sullivan; Porteous & Mitchell's, Misses Mary Pickering and Mary Winters; Caron's Specialty shop, Misses Esther Bonin, Louise Laramee and Beatrice Caron; Barney's, Misses Virginia Freeman and Evon Allard. Collins' furnished millinery; Ferguson's jewelry, and the Model Booterie shoes.

The reception committee comprised Mrs. Elizabeth Drew, Mrs. Iola Bjurstrom, Mrs. Della Chartier, Mrs. Maud Moody, Mrs. Edward Brennan, Miss Margaret Leone, Mrs. Leroy Hubbard and Mrs. Goldie Freeman.

ENDEAVORING TO FIND POISONER OF DOGS

Announcement was made Friday by Humane Agent Frederick H. Wyant that the Connecticut Humane society is offering a reward of $25 for the apprehension of and conviction of the person or persons responsible for the poisoning of dogs and cats which has aroused the residents of the Bean Hill and Yantic sections of the town and also the residents of Bozrah the past few weeks. For about a month there have been cases of poisoned cats and dogs in those sections and veterinarians who have been called to attend the animals give the cause as strychnine. Timely administration of proper relief saved a few of the unfortunate animals but many other animals died.

Such inhumane acts are not only inexcusable, but will not be tolerated, said Mr. Wyant Friday evening. The authorities are putting forth every effort to track down those responsible. The $25 reward is offered in the hope that anyone who can throw light on the matter will come forward with information which will enable the authorities to arrest and properly punish those responsible for the poisonings.

Mr. Wyant said that there is a state law against such acts. Quoting Chapter 61 of the public acts of 1929, he pointed out that any person who shall negligently or maliciously place any poison or poisoned food in any public place, or in any place accessible to any dog, game or fur-bearing animals, is liable to not more than $50 fine or three months imprisonment or both, for the first offense. For each subsequent offense the penalty runs from $200 to $500 fine or a year in prison, or both.

Mr. Wyant said that the person or persons responsible are not known, despite the fact that certain people have been mentioned as being responsible for the poisoning of the animals.

CENSUS ENUMERATORS ARE MAKING GOOD PROGRESS

Census enumerators, who have been at work since Wednesday, report making good progress. Each enumerator will keep at work in the section of the city or town assigned to him and then turn in his completed lists to Supervisor Otto B. Robinson in Willimantic.

The following are the questions to be asked in taking the population census this year:

Your name? Your relationship to the family (whether the head of the family, wife, son, daughter, or uncle, etc.)? Whether your home is owned or rented? The estimated value of your home, if owned, or the monthly rental, if rented? Is there a radio in your home? Do you live on a farm? What is your sex? What is your color or race? What was your age at last birthday? Are you married, single, widowed or divorced? What was your age at first marriage? (For married persons only.) Have you attended school or college any time since September 1, 1929? Are you able to read and write? Where were you born? Where was your father born? Where was your mother born?

What is your native language? (For foreign born persons only.) In what year did you immigrate to the United States? (Foreign born.) Are you naturalized? (For foreign born.) Are you able to speak English? If you are a gainful worker, what is your occupation? In what industry are you employed? Are you an employer, employe, or working on your own account? Were you actually at work yesterday? Are you a veteran of the United States military or naval forces, and if so, in what war or expedition did you serve?

If you answered 'no' to question whether you were at work yesterday, you will be asked whether you have a job and are merely temporarily out of work, or whether you have no job at all. If you have a job, you will be asked: How many weeks since you have worked on your present job? Why were you not at work yesterday(or on the last regular working day)? Did you lose a day's pay by not being at work? How many days did you work last week? How many days in a full-time week? If you have no job at all, you wil be asked: Are you able to work? Are you looking for a job? For how many weeks have you been without a job? Reason for being out of a job, or for losing your last job?

"Party Girl" Cake Puzzles.

Is it real or not is the puzzling question which a mammoth cake on display in the window of a store in the Steiner building raises among those who stop to look at the mountainous product of the baker's art. It glistens in its covering of white icing and a dozen little kewpie dolls around it indicate they are ready to join the "Party Girl" at the Palace theatre.

CLERGYMEN AT M. E. CONFERENCE NEW LONDON, SUED BY EX-MINISTER

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, April 4.—Guy Willis Holmes, of East Greenwich and New Bedford, Mass., expelled as minister of the Methodist church, today brought suit for $30,000 damages, alleging libel, against three members of the Southern New England conference of the Methodist Episcopal church, now in session in New London. Papers in the action were served today on the defendants, Revs. H. H. Critchlow, Willimantic; Robert L. Roberts, Taunton, Mass., and William L. Ward, North Carver, Mass., by Deputy Sheriff Nelson I. Brown at the conference in New London. Holmes was unfrocked at the conference in South Manchester three years ago for conduct unbecoming a minister, the result of Holmes' alleged behavior with a waitress at New Bedford.

Prior to March 26, 1926, Holmes claims to have enjoyed a good reputation and was looked up to as a man of high morals and integrity. On that day two of the defendants, Roberts and Critchlow made statements at a public gathering that defamed the character of the former minister, the statements alleging an immoral act with Antoinette Fortin, at a Boston hotel. The clergymen reiterated these statements at a gathering at South Manchester and Rev. Ward republished them at New Haven. Holmes claims that the statements were intended to stamp him as an immoral man, unfit to follow his calling as a preacher of the gospel. Holmes further claims that the statements of Critchlow, Roberts and Ward were malicious and false and impeded him with parishioners of plaintiff, also with ministers of the gospel, who might be instrumental in assigning Holmes to churches within the jurisdiction of the conference. The statements caused other members of the clergy to refrain and refuse to make any engagements with the plaintiff which resulted in pecuniary loss to him.

Holmes claims that because of the alleged false statements, he became ill, was held up to scorn and in contempt in his community and was deprived of his means of livelihood.

HOLMES CLAIMS JURY FREED HIM OF CHARGES

NEW LONDON, April 4.— (AP) — Holmes' suit is returnable at the May term of the New London county superior court. Holmes petitioned the conference yesterday to reinstate him, but no action was taken by the delegates. His suit today was in answer to a threat to clear his name in court of the charges of immoral conduct with a New Bedford waitress which resulted in his unfrocking.

He charged in his suit that the Rev. Critchlow and Roberts made a public statement on March 26, 1926, accusing him of an immoral act with Antoinette Fortin at a Boston hotel, and that they had these statements published in South Manchester, Conn., and New Haven.

A conference of the church at South Manchester unfrocked him three years ago. The former minister, who is married and has five children, was found not guilty of a statutory offense by a Boston jury.

"In the last analysis," Holmes said, "my case will be an answer to the question whether in America a man can be accused of a crime under the guise of ecclesiastical privilege. Is the church more competent to find out the facts that a state court? I was tried in Boston under the same charges pressed by the conference and found innocent. Has the church the right to blast my career on charges that a criminal court with all its machinery of investigation found me innocent of in one vote by a jury that had been out only 20 minutes?"

He has thrice appealed to the conference for reinstatement.

He previously filed two other civil suits. One is for $150,000 damages against the Revs. Critchlow and Roberts, and Rev. Raymond H. Hibbard, of Osterville, Mass., charging a conspiracy to injure him in his calling, and the other is for $250,000 against the conference alleging a breach of contract.

AUTOPSY SHOWS ROBINSON DIED FROM HEMORRHAGE

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, April 4.—As a result of the sudden death last night at Home Memorial hospital of Samuel Robinson, colored, long a leader among the Negroes and who had resided for several years at 30 Shapley street and conducted a second-hand store on Hempstead street, Medical Examiner Charles Kaufman late this afternoon conducted an autopsy to definitely determine the cause of death. Robinson was not taken ill at home but was stricken at 25 Douglass street, a Negro resort and was taken to the hospital, without being attended by a physician. The autopsy revealed that Robinson died from hemorrhage. It is known that Robinson was possessed of wealth, although he did not own real estate. A will has been found. So far as can be determined Robinson did not have any near relatives.

CHAPPELL PETITION HEARING SET FOR APRIL 9

City Manager William A. Holt has assigned next Wednesday evening at 7 o'clock in the municipal building as the time and place to hold a hearing on the petition of William S. Chappell, Green street, that that thoroughfare be made a two-way street instead of a oneway street, between Golden and Pearl streets. It is known that the petition is advanced to satisfy special business interests on the street and is only signed by five property owners. It is understood that the petition will not be given serious consideration because of the fact that those interested in the making of the street a two-way thoroughfare are screened behind it and not those that will be directly benefitted through business reasons.

Harold Andrioli, 232 Shaw street, reported to the police tonight that his bicycle had been stolen from in front of his residence.

Arthur McCarthy, 1 Farnsworth street, reported tonight to the police that while he was driving on Main street this evening the windshield of his auto was shattered either by a revolver bullet or an air rifle bullet.

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Broadway Theatre.

If you can imagine a demure southern belle with an Irish brogue that you can cut with a knife, you've a faint idea of the brand new character that Nancy Carroll, our old "Sweetie," adopts in her newest and sweetest talkie "Honey," which opens at the Broadway today. Born to the purple as Olivia Dangerfield, of the "Virginia Dangerfields, suh," her family encounters financial difficulties, and she is forced to lease her palatial mansion to some "nouveau riche," from New York. The haughty madame leases the house with a full servant staff, but to Nancy's dismay the staff walks out and leaves her flat. Desperate, Nancy assumes the role of housekeeper and cook, her brother, "Skeets" Gallagher, is recruited as a capable, but sassy butler, and the "upstairs maid." ZaSu Pitts, dolorous as ever, agrees to stay if she can keep her daughter, little Mitzi Green, of "The Marriage Playground," with her, and Mitzi in action would ruin the peace conference itself. Jabyna Howland, stately and domineering, is the wealthy widow, and lovely Lillian Roth, her charming daughter. Harry Green is a scream as a thirsty detective, hired to guard the widow's jewels, and Stanley Smith, romantic hit of "Sweetie," again attempts to capture Nancy's heart. Comedy runs riot through the action of the farce, which is packed with laughs from beginning to end. Many song hits are featured in "Honey," of the "whistley" variety, which are already popular via radio and records. Billed as "sweeter than Sweetie," Nancy's newest production surpasses all her others in pure entertainment value. Surrounding "Honey" is a corking program of talking featurettes, including George Fawcett and his famous dog in "The One-Man Reunion," Frances Williams and Her Yacht Club Boys in "Hitting the High C's," Taylor Holmes & Co., in a roaring comedy, "He Loved the Ladies," and the latest Paramount Sound News. All patrons of "Honey" have an opportunity to be awarded the original "Honey," a delicious honey confection made specially for this engagement and now on display in a Franklin square window. Autographed photos of the delectable Nancy are in store for the lady patrons, at performances to be announced. Today, at the matinee the kiddies will witness the second chapter of the new sound-serial, "Tarzan the Tiger," from the pen of Edgar Rice Burroughs, and portraying wild perils amid ferocious animals and natives in the African jungle.

Palace Theatre.

Since the famous Earl Carroll bathtub episode the very thought of any kind of an immersion seems to indicate that there are wild and wicked things happening. No doubt bathtubs at parties are a bit risque for well-behaved people but they mean nothing in the life of a professional party girl. What is a professional party girl? Well, if you don't know, you'd better drop around to the Palace theatre today where the Warner Brothers are presenting "Party Girl" and see for yourself. It may be a bit surprising if you haven't already heard how some of the big business deals in New York are put across and the importance of these girls (there are many) in them.

"Party Girl" which features Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., and Marie Prevost, is a most daring revelation of business methods used by many of the country's largest firms. How beautiful girls are used to inveigle business men into giving their patronage to a certain establishment, and the lengths to which they must sometimes go is fully revealed in this amazing and daring story.

Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., is cast as Jay Routree, the young son of a glass manufacturer. One evening while attending a fraternity banquet he breaks into a "party" which is being held at the same hotel. Leeda Cather, a former society girl, now bankrupt and in need of a wealthy husband to relieve the situation, gets Jay drunk, takes him to her apartment and the next morning convinces him that the honorable thing to do is to marry her.

Being a gentleman he consents to this but only against his wishes and much to the sorrow of his father and his sweetheart, Ellen Powell, whom he loves greatly. Ellen's faith in him and her trust are not sufficient to withstand this great trial and she becomes a party girl and starts a career which almost results in her destruction. However, affairs are righted and the picture ends bringing happiness to the deserving.

"Party Girl" should be seen by all the truth seekers and by all those who enjoy fine acting and lots of talking, singing and dancing. One of the special features is the famous Biltmore orchestra which provides music for the singing and dancing and introduces two beautiful numbers, "Oh How I Adore You" and "Farewell."

IVORY SALT

More and more Women buy bread this way . .

First they make the test-by-toasting to prove several facts . . .

1

Housewives everywhere saw the famous test-by-toasting in public demonstrations . . .

Housewives learn that since Wonder Bread makes better toast, it is best for their every household need.

Slo-baked Wonder Bread has replaced other breads in more than ten million American homes. This largely through the results of the famous test-by-toasting.

Women saw this demonstration—that shows Wonder Bread's superior qualities in baking and ingredients—at stores and home institutes everywhere.

Then they bought Wonder Bread and made the test at home. Invariably the results were the same. Wonder Bread made better toast . . . hence was best for every bread need.

So this bread quickly found its way to their tables . . . where families praised its true bread flavor and delicate texture.

Why does the fact that Wonder Bread makes better toast prove it a better bread? Because only from a scientifically perfect bread can you make perfect toast.

Thus the better toast you get is due to the super-quality ingredients and the exclusive slo-baking process . . . which eliminates all excess moisture and gives you bread of fine, delicate texture.

The test is simplicity itself. Just take a slice of Wonder Bread and a slice of any other bread. Place both in your toaster.

See which slice is toasted first. Which is an even, golden brown from edge to edge? Which is crisper, with a new delicate toast flavor and a delightful aroma?

We have won ten million women with this test. If you find the result of your test-by-toasting convincing, we believe you will want only Wonder Bread hereafter. Your grocer has it fresh twice daily.

2

They made the same test at home. Saw for themselves how scientifically perfect Wonder Bread makes better toast . . .

So housewives decided that since Wonder Bread made better toast, it was the ideal bread for every home use.

WESTERLY

EPISANIO'S BED BURNED IN EARLY MORNING FIRE

(Special to The Bulletin)

WESTERLY, R. I., April 4.— The origin of the early Friday morning blaze in the six-family apartment house, 134-146 Canal street, where the Westerly firemen were given credit for a timely check of a most threatening blaze, was thought by Chief Egger to be mice or rats on a pantry shelf in a room adjoining the kitchen. On the top shelf was a box of matches which he found had been watersoaked. The tenement is occupied by Mrs. Josephina Lupica. A boarder, sleeping in a rear chamber, Joseph Sylvestri, was awakened by the smoke and noting that a fire was eating its way up in the partition, rushed out and pulled in the fire alarm from Box No. 71. The other occupant of the tenement was a small boy, John Lupica. There were no electric wires in the building nor a chimney near the place where the fire started. The first bedroom which the fire entered was that of another boarder, E.aro Episanio, who has been a patient at the Westerly hospital, suffering from a bullet wound alleged to have been fired at him by Giuseppi Serruto of Stillman avenue, Pawcatuck, while the men had a quarrel on the Stillmanville bridge on the morning of March 24th. It was expected that Episanio would be discharged from the Westerly hospital this week or next and then would return to his boarding place. His bed was destroyed by the blaze and the bed clothing thrown out of the window by the firemen. Some of the flames, it was found, had nearly burned through floor joists and even into the partition wall of the adjoining tenement, 136 Canal street, occupied by Pietro Culotta.

THINK MISCHIEVOUS BOYS STARTED PAWCATUCK FIRE

A fire in the grass and brush lots at the end of William street, near Burdick avenue in Pawcatuck, attributed to boys who desired to have the fire alarm sounded and see the firemen in action, was the cause of the whistle fire alarm signal No. 56, William and Field streets, being sounded at 4:30 p. m. Friday. Members of Pawcatuck Fire Co. No. 1 responded and used brooms in putting out the fire and were successful without the use of the booster tank or hydrant streams. There was no property in immediate danger from the flames and the recall sounded at 4:55.

A fire started shortly before noon off Narragansett and Newton avenues near the residence of Fire Chief George E. Egger, when burning brush and grass threatened buildings in the vicinity. A telephone call was sent to the Central fire station and Chief Egger with Driver Henry Cottrell and men went out with the Seagraves motor pumper.

Mrs. Emma P. Keller, wife of Frank Keller, residing at 25 Newton avenue, became exhausted while fighting the blaze and fell down an embankment. Dr. John Champlin was called to attend her and directed her removal to her home, where she was put to bed. Neighbors attempted to check the spread of the blaze before calling for help from the firemen. With the aid of brooms, pails of water and a fire stream from the booster tank hose, the fire was put out before any destruction of property resulted. The truck returned to the fire station about 12:30 p. m.

Judge Oliver H. Williams, Friday morning in the Third District court, disposed of business as follows:

Under legal conditions the auto should have stopped within fifty feet when going 20 miles per hour. With the foot brake it went 70 feet and with the emergency on three tests 80, 78 and 78 feet. The accused testified that he had driven for five years and was proceeding from Tufts college in Massachusetts. He was fined $15 and costs.

In the Festival of the States, held for a week at St. Petersburg, Fla., recently, to quote a St. Petersburg paper: "The famous old Nutmeg state was well represented by the Connecticut float in the parade. Hundreds of choice pink roses on the Connecticut entry, developed a float of extreme beauty. Hovering over the foreground, a majestic butterly typifying beauty, spoke of the many beauty spots of Connecticut, the lovely Connecticut river valley, the noted Thames river, where annually the famous regatta between Harvard and Yale takes place and the many industries contributing to the beauty of the world in its manufacture of cotton and silk materials, clocks and brass work. Miss Connecticut, Miss Madeline L. Wilson of Stamford, Conn., was the first to enter the float. She had a brilliant gold head-dress, many colored wings of the butterfly, and her skirt was of chiffon panels in rainbow colors. Miss Wilson represented the Queen of Connecticut summer beauties. Her attendants in dainty organdy frocks of blue, yellow, pink and green, and wearing picture hats, were prettily suggestive of garden parties and afternoon teas. Doris Carson, Mildred Jonsberg, Victoria Bedford and Betty Webster were Miss Connecticut's attendants." This parade has always been held on a Friday, but due to rain, for the first time in 18 years, it was held Saturday. There were 75 floats in the parade, with 17 states represented. Connecticut was number 3 in the parade. Many of the floats cost $100, and other even more than that sum.

Mr. and Mrs. H. H. Park called on friends in New London Thursday.

Here's a golf story, sworn and attested to by the participants: Egbert Brix of Seattle, Wash., drove off the third tee for the longest hole on the course, 405 yards. The ball sliced out of bounds, hit the concrete highway, bounced to the top of an automobile, teetered on the car's top, rolled off under the rear wheel where it was pinched in such a manner as to cause it to leap into the air, fly across a ditch and land on the objective green, where it rolled within four feet of the cup.

A HISTORY OF CONNECTICUT INDUSTRY

Released by Manufacturers Association of Connecticut

The Horton Manufacturing Company, Bristol.

Everett Horton, an old-fashioned Yankee mechanic, of Bristol, invented a tubular telescopic fishing rod that he put into the form of a cane so that he might go fishing on Sundays without offense to his wife, and Puritanical neighbors.

In 1888, the late Charles S. Treadway, a Bristol banker, interested Charles F. Pope of New York and the late Frank G. Hayward in purchasing the patent on this fishing rod, and from this small beginning developed the Horton Manufacturing company, with world wide distribution of fishing tackle and golf shafts.

In 1916 the B. F. Meek & Sons company of oLuisville, Kentucky, makers of the famous Meek and blue grass reels, was acquired and moved to Bristol. Still later, in 1919, the company purchased the E. J. Martin Sons company of Rockville, makers of the world famous Kingfisher silk fishing lines. The plant is still operated at Rockville.

In recent years, the Bristol steel golf shaft was developed. This shaft made it possible for the first time in the history of golf for players to have absolutely uniform, properly balanced clubs, and has resulted in a tremendously increased interest in the game.

The officers of the company are: C. F. Pope, chairman of the board; C. T. Treadway, president; C. R. Riley, vice president; H. C. Lagerblade, vice president; T. G. Treadway, secretary; M. C. Treadway, treasurer; H. L. Judd, assistant treasurer.

After marriage a man stops paying his wife compliments and begins to pay her bills.

Bessie the Drunkard's Lone Child

Out in the dark night all sadly I roam,
I have no kind mother or no pleasant home,
No one cares for me, no one would cry
Even if poor little Bessie would die.
Barefooted and tired I have wandered all day
Asking for work I am too small they do say.
On the damp ground I must now lay my head,
Father is a drunkard and mother is dead.

Chorus:
Mother, oh why did you leave me alone,
No one to love me, no friend or a home
Dark grows the night and the storm rages wild
God pity Bessie the drunkard's lone child.

Then all our trials and troubles begun,
Mother grew sadder and paler each day
Baby and I were too hungry to play.
Slowly they faded; one fine summer's night
Found their dear faces all silent and white.
Then as the big tears they did roll down she said:
"Father is a drunkard and mother is dead."

Oh if the temperance men only could find
Poor wretched father and speak very kind
If they coud keep him from drinking, why then
We would be, so very happy again.
Is it too late men of temperance please try
Or poor little Bessie will soon starve and die.
On the damp ground I must now lay my head
Father is a drunkard and mother is dead.

Cleaning and Dusty

How I cleaned and dusted,
Just the other day—
Brushing table covers,
Laying things away,
Filling flower vases,
Setting china where,
But for bits of beauty
All the room seemed bare.

How I cleaned and dusted,
Window sills and books;
But I quite neglected
Many corner nooks!
And beneath the sofa
Lay a fleck of dirt;
And my kitchen pantry—
Actually it hurt!

How I cleaned and dusted,
That my guests might see
Only surface brightness,
And think well of me!
But I learned a lesson,
Each disordered shelf
Made me think a little
Lightly of myself!

Beginning Again

Every day is a fresh beginning,
Every morn is the world made new;
You who are weary of sorrow and sinning,
Here is a beautiful hope for you—
A hope for me and a hope for you.

All the paste things are past and over,
The tasks are done and the tears are shed;
Yesterday's errors let yesterday cover;
Yesterday's wounds, which smarted and bled,
Are healed with the healing which night has shed.

Yesterday now is a part of forever,
Bound up in a sheaf, which God holds tight;
With glad days and sad days and bad days which never Shall visit us more with their bloom and their blith,
Their fullness of sunshine or sorrowful night.

Let them go, since we cannot relieve them,
Cannot undo, and cannot atone;
God in his mercy, receive, forgive them;
Only the new days are our own,
Today is ours, and today alone.

Here are the skies all burnished brightly,
Here is the spent earth all reborn,
Here are the tired limbs springing lightly
To face the sun and to share with the morn.
In the chrism of dew and the cool of dawn.

Every day is a fresh beginning:
Listen, my soul, to the glad refrain,
And, spite of old sorrow and older sinning,
And puzzles forecasted and possible pain,
Take heart with the day, and begin again.

WHAT ROBIN SAID.

Old Winter encountered the Robin, and lo!
To scare him, he shook his mantle of snow;
But Robin, quite bravely sought shelter, and said:
"I came here to stay! You're going instead.
I'll wait here contented till you warm up a bit;
You stingy, old tyrant—and then I'll be 'It'!"

STREETS.

No love have I for great streets,
Where splendor smites the eye,
For Regent streets or State streets,
Or those that pose as high;
No pompously sedate streets,
Or streets of moneyed might,
Nor sordidly elate streets
That only live at night.

I sing a song of Main streets,
Of streets that know the dawns,
Of pleasant little plain streets,
With flowers on the lawns;
No streets that strive for show,
Just placid little plain streets,
Where neighbors say "Hello!"

House-Cleaning Time.

I scoured each closet and room in my house,
From attic to cellar with care;
Washed every panel, the baseboards and floors
And brushed cobwebs down, everywhere.
I rubbed every tabletop until it shone,
The sofa—each rung of a chair—
I brushed down the ceilings, shook out every rug
And dusted and polished each stair.

And when I had finished and sat down to view
My work with a housekeeper's pride,
I prayed, "Now, dear Lord, please help me to give My heart a house-cleaning inside—
Please help me to sweep away hatred and scorn
That in the dark corners may hide—
And to brush all the cobwebs of bitterness down
And let naught but love there abide."

A HELP WHEN CLEANING

Dear Social Corner Friends: What a grand day! How beautiful spring days really are! Of course we have had no really hot days but they are on the way.

Most of us have to clean house in these spring days. Here in my home town I can telephone and get a man from the "Church house", (a man who is out of work), and pay but 35 cents an hour, to do any kind of cleaning. These men do not have to give anything back to the "Church house," but keep it all. They spend it for food or what they need and go back there and sleep. I offered to give a dinner to the man I had, and he said I did not need to, or pay car fare.

If any of you have such a place it is best to save your strength and let a man do the heavy work.

Balsam Fir: What a nice name. Your nice letter made me think of the fir balsam I got when up in Maine. I had enough to make 8 pillows and that was 3 1-2 years ago. It is beautiful to put in pillows. I like it best of anything. I would like to hear from "Balsam Fir." My mother and grandparents, and back further, were born in Maine, and many of the cousins live there now. Where is Dry Mills? Am glad you set out pine trees every year. You are helping Maine to keep beautiful fir balsam.

Let me close with a good recipe.

Eskimo Rarebit: Mix one cup of cream, one cup grated cheese, 1 tablespoon butter, one teaspoon mustard, salt and pepper. After cooking this add six sardines (boned and mashed), two well beaten eggs. Serve on toasted bread or crackers.

I have used this recipe many times, and it is fine. I hope you all try this, and let us hear if you like it. It is a good Lenten dish.

SUMAC'S TRAVELING SPELL

Dear Editor and Sisters: I want to thank all those who sent me cards on my birthday. I feel very guilty as I have sent none for the past year. I shall have to start in again. It really is nice to know people remember us even though we are growing old. Last Thursday I went to the fashion show at Norwich and as I received material for four dresses for my birthday I should be able to have them all made in the most up-to-date style. I do detest the high waist line on a stout person, style or no style.

I have another spell of traveling the last two weeks. I have been to two grange meetings, a whist party, a chicken pie supper and whist, a turkey supper, the fashion show and spent the evening with one of our neighbors. This reckless life is aging me terribly

I have my ceilings whitened and now have no excuse for not starting to paper and I suppose the sooner I start the sooner I finish. I have loads of sewing to do and mending is always two jumps ahead of me. I must be getting to be one of those middle-aged people By Jingo wrote about.

I think it would be nice if the sisters sent Commuter cards. She is seriously ill and while unable to read them herself they will be read to her.

Zulieka: That was a very nice verse on your card. You flatter me, I'm afraid.

Skipper: Where did you find it? It was great and I've shown it to everyone.

Cosmos: E. L. M. said she told you of the Yellow Jacket's objecting to having the Cosmos picked. I was sorry I couldn't have been there. I see the judges did a good job though.

Pyrethum: You shouldn't have done it but never the less I appreciate it very much.

B. Natural: Thank you for the cards and hope you will be able to get out when the days are nice.

Ravena and Lauret: The reports are better so you must be more encouraged. We haven't phoned you, as often it is inconvenient for you to answer but have inquired in other ways. We were thinking of you. Doesn't it seem as though everything comes in a bunch sometimes.

H. E. M.: Hope you are gaining now.

Sympathy for those in trouble and best Easter wishes for everybody.

GLAD TO RECEIVE CARDS.

Dear Readers of the Social Corner: the first thing I wish to do, is to thank those kind friends, some are members and some are not, who so quickly and generously gave me cards for the children in the hospital. Already one package has started on its way to cheer up those little boys and girls. One sister said if I would send my address she would send me some, but at present I do not wish to reveal my identity, and I know our kind editor is willing to forward all letters, cards, etc. By the way, Mr. Editor, please accept my thanks for the trouble. I received the package O. K.

I see I am found out though, by one member. Queer, isn't it how a mother knows her own child? Well, as Honest Abe said "You can fool all of the people some of the time, and some of the people all the time, but you can't fool all of the people all of the time."

Stranger in the City sent us a very interesting letter didn't she? One could almost see with the mind's eye those lovely flowers and delicious fruits, she described them so clearly.

Brothers and sisters, don't fall back on that letter writing. I see there were less in the last two pages. Three different people told me last week they took the Norwich Bulletin just for the Social Corner page. The letters are so interesting. Now doesn't that sound good? Doesn't that go to show our letters are appreciated? So get a little more "pick-up" in that pen so those people won't become uninterested and stop the subscription of the paper. So many new members, more the merrier, but I hope they won't get cold feet and only write twice a year. I know they have something interesting stored up for us.

I often wonder how many read the quotation that is printed each Saturday at the top of the Social Corner page. I always read them and find they are food for thought. Will close this letter with this little verse I read some where and memorized:

O, fickle harbinger of Spring,
April, thou art dear to me;
Amidst thy wildest storms I sing
Of brighter days to be."

OMAHA BEE.

A TRIBUTE TO A FRIEND

Dear Social Corner Readers: As my letter was not mailed in time for the 29th I will endeavor to start this one sooner.

This is the most disagreeable day we've had for a long time. A terrible wind with snow squalls. Let me think, what have I been doing since I wrote last, Oh, various things. I helped clean up the garden and had a dandy bonfire of pea brush and refuse we took from the strawberries. I have been cleaning the kitchen and I have at last finished papering.

The evening of the 21st I attended the prize speaking contest at Wheeler library. It was very interesting. No. 1 was unanimously voted the best speaker and has been given the honor of having her name being engraved on the silver cup, given by the class of 1924. The title of her piece was "Singing Leaves" by Lowell. Six students participated in the contest. One of the judges said, "I am sorry six prizes were not offered as each did so splendidly." That is true, they all did well.

Saturday, the 22nd, I attended the funeral of a dear old lady. I believe nearly everyone by now has read of her. She reached two months of being 103 years old. Can you imagine one hundred and one long, long years% A whole century. Isn't it marvelous! Just wonderful that she could be spared to those she loved all those years? Let us stop and think. As a mother of four children she kept with them whenever they were ill and again let us consider the pleasures she had with them, too. For where is a mother who has never taken comfort with her child or children as well as seen sorrowful days.

May 25th of last year the world listened in and heard "Cheerio" from WEAF announce the 101st anniversary of her birth and for the first time in her life she had the privilege of listening to a radio and was delighted to hear her name spoken from out of the air.

She accepted Christ as her Guide and Savior when but a child twelve years old, and the words ring true that "a little child shall lead them," for soon others were converted.

It seems as if a landmark has been removed with her passing away. She will be sadly missed by her children (three are left to mourn her loss), grandchildren, great grandchildren and great-great grandchildren as well as her neighbors and friends.

But at last her work here is finished and she rests safe in the arms of Jesus, safe on His gentle breast.

The wreaths, baskets and sprays of beautiful lilies, roses and carnations showed the esteem and great devotions her relatives and friends held for her.

Please let me write as the closing paragraph, that since her death records have been found, those papers the dear old lady laid away so carefully. It is recorded in those leaves of a precious book the date of her birth which was May 25, 1828.

PRAIRIE CHICKEN

MARRIED 50 YEARS

Dear Editor and Friends: Several years ago, April 5th, we observed our golden wedding anniversary, with relatives and friends.

I have many gift remembrances that mark the event, and recall the years that have passed since we were married, my thoughts wonder back to youth when we were young and standing before one of God's servants, promising for the better or worse, in prosperity or adversity to live together and to share each other's joys and sorrows in fair or squally weather. The matrimonial voyage began skirting the hidden reefs where dangers lurked and where many a frail bark has been wrecked, we were guided by the pilot and a safer course was charted on this cruise for life. We are still on the barque of time living the every-day life that has lengthened into years of over a half century.

During this period of time many noticeable events have occurred some of which have stirred the heart of the nation to joyous pride at the hero's glorious achievements. Other scenes have turned joy into sorrow and laughter into tears. Amid the many changing scenes broken vows that once were plighted mingle in the wreckage in the busy whirl of life that has the restless spirit for adventures. So man with success has kept pace with the onward stride of progress and by the cunning of the brain, wonderful inventions have been perfected that would surprise our forefathers if they were to come back and see an aeroplane, a radio, telephone and hear the chug of the tractor which eliminates much horse labor, all of which inventions were not in being when our wedding bells rang.

What will the next fifty years bring forth in the way of inventions time only holds in store.

A CORRECTED RECIPE

Dear Social Editor: My graham suet pudding recipe of last week was not complete.

It should be:

Graham Suet Pudding: 2 cups graham flour, 1 cup white flour 3 teaspoons baking powder, 1-2 teaspoon salt, 1-2 teaspoon cinnamon, 1-4 teaspoon all-spice sifted together, putting back the bran, 1 cup chopped beef suet, 1 cup raisins, 1 cup water, 1-2 cup molasses. Serve with foamy sauce. I vary this recipe, leaving out 1 cup graham flour and using 1 ccup chopped figs or dates or currants or fresh blue or blackberries, in their season. Serve with any sweet sauce. spice sifted together, putting back the bran, 1 cup chopped beef suet, 1 cup raisins, 1 cup water, ½ cup molasses. Serve with foamy sauce. I vary this recipe, leaving out 1 cup graham flour and using 1 cup chopped figs or dates or currants or fresh blue or blackberries, in their season. Serve with any sweet sauce.

Please forgive my stupidity in not writing the recipe properly the first time.

BIDDY

EARLY SCHOOL DAYS IN NEW ENGLAND

Dear Sisters of the Social Corner: It is memory alone that lasts and nature alone that is true. The years that have passed since early school days in New England are indeed "like a tale that is told," but the memories of those beautiful days are the foundation of existence today. Those were the days when life was song and sunshine, freedom and innocence, obloquy and unhappiness unknown.

In the ecstacy of youth how we watched for our schoolmates coming from the further farms over the distant hills! How on winter mornings we gathered around the firesides from house to house, then off, ploughing through the snow, across the lots, dragging our sleds and lunch pails, sometimes getting a "hitch" along the way, little realizing the breaking lines of after life.

The little saw mill, where the gathered waters shimmered by its side, the road bridge over the stream, the broad fields and forests where in summer we picked the berries and gathered the nuts in winter. All are as of old, except the mill has long since fallen into decay, but the memory of its whirr is a stimulus.

The treasures of those woods! As true today as of old! The paths that led through a wilderness of bloom, the apple orchards, the far off hills that met the horizon, the birds' hidden nests, the wild strawberry beds, the old uncovered well—a forbidden pastime—sheltered by a clump of trees, where we would peek into its depths when the rope bucket was lowered, a great attraction; nothing escaped our childish eagerness, for nature alone is true.

The district schoolhouse still stands by the roadside in the fork of the roads back in the country aways, in some ways remodeled to meet the times, but where spelling matches and arithmetic tests were of more value than today. Bare were its furnishings, the little stove in the corner, work desks and blackboards, but under its roof the basic education for life was gained. During the winter session when the farming boys attended school, the teachers were put to some strain in maintaining discipline for the "district school" was the rendevouz of harmless mischief

The brook where we played during the recess hour still flows by its side as merrily as in those cherished days. I knelt by that litle brook in later years to see, not the happy face of childhood, but a face worn and marred with the stress of years.

But what of our schoolmates? Many have wandered beyond our knowledge, some have heroically mastered the fate of life, others have gone to their rest, but as in the stillness of evening, memory brings each one to mind. And as I pause in the gathering twilight, one by one their faces come before me, one by one their names come to my lips, one by one I take them by the hand, until as with the shifting mist of the years, the trembling lines of daylight vanish and the vision fades into the night.

THE LITTLE SPINSTER

WHAT HOME MEANS.

Dear Editor and Social Cornerites: It has been such a very long time since I have written to the Corner that I suppose I have been forgotten ages ago. And it serves me right. But though I have been unforgiveable in my neglect—I do trust you will have a "welcome back" for the returned prodigal. I have never missed a Corner page during the time—and have been following you all, in your joys and your sorrows and trials:

Hope Cobweb's letter in Saturday's Corner page especially appealed to me, and I just felt I must write my own tribute to home. It's pretty hard to define in mere words what home means to us. To me it's just another word for Mother. Oh, yes, there is a lot more to home. There is Dad, and brother and sister. Perhaps a dear little grandmother or an adored granddad. But the real meaning is just Mother, for what is a home without one? As a child, returning home from play, meant back to mother's arms. To the ones in their teens, away at school, holidays and week-ends meant coming back to mother to tell her all our joys, our aims and ambitions. She was always there, waiting for us ready to listen and encourage and understand. She never failed us once, did she? And in our grown up years, away from her, either in homes we have made for ourselves or in the business world what does going home mean? Simply back to mother for advice, comfort and encouragement to carry on.

I think to really appreciate home one must get away from it and board out among strangers. Then we can fully realize each and every little thing that spells Home. To me away from my home, when I get hurt or blue, and who of us doesn't at times, I just pack up overnight case and go home to the family, all of them, but mainly to mother. For it's her that gives me that loving and petting I was needing. I am just my mother's little girl again, and what good that little visit home does. I go back into the every day world again, strong and ready to cope with the battles of life once more. And so that is what Home means to me. To see my mother's face, feel her dear arms around me, hearing her loved voice, knowing that the whole world may turn against me I have always one sure haven, Home and Mother and her never failing love.

Aries: I really am going to answer your lovely letter in the very near future. Your letters to the Corner are always so helpful and as Jane of R. I. says "What a smart woman she must be," echoes my sentiments exactly.

My sympathy to those in sickness and trouble and a big "Welcome" to all new comers. Just SASSY.

LINCOLN'S LOG CABIN.

Dear Social Cornerites: It has been a long time since I have contributed to the Social Corner but I have read the letters every week. I sincerely wish I could have been at the anniversary meeting at Buckingham Memorial but it was not possible and so I had to be satisfied with the description given on the Corner page.

I can't give you a discourse on Cheese Making because I know nothing about such things. Neither can I write a sermon on the faults of "The Middle-aged Woman," because some of my best friends are middle aged ladies.

There has been talk of trundle beds and although I am not as old as some who have told of sleeping in a trundle bed I have experienced that thrill.

Some one spoke of log cabins. Last fall I had the privilege of visiting the log cabin in which Abraham Lincoln was born. The chinks between the logs were filled with clay just as history describes it. The rude door hung on wooden hinges and was held shut with a wooden latch. The cabin is surrounded by a marble memorial on the walls of which are marble tablets bearing information about Lincoln and his parents. A short distance from the building is the spring from which Lincoln often got water and there is also a long stretch of rail fence. I could not help but wonder if Lincoln split the rails that made the fence.

The next time I write I will try to send some pet recipes which I learned of recently and have proven to be good.

A CHEERING MESSAGE

Social Corner Editor and Writers: I will write again and thank all the Corner members and others that sent me cards, sunshine packages and other birthday presents on March 21st. To say I was surprised is no name for it. And on top of all that was a big surprise that evening. As I was going to retire an auto with six people in it drove up with a lovely birthday cake. I woke up, believe me, and soon had a nice warm fire and had lunch ready. I thank all who gave and sent me presents that way. The next day there was a big sunshine surprise package in the mail.

Elida: I was so glad to meet you at the anniversary. You sure brought back pleasant memories of the past 40 years or over. The supper was lovely.

Red Rose: You were so still in your corner I did not see you until you spoke. I am glad you did. I was after the two Corner sisters waiting for me at the table. We had to eat early and we just caught the bus and car with not a minute to spare. I would have talked with you and other sisters longer. It was late and dark when I got home. I enjoyed every minute. Weren't the flowers, music ,address and all lovely? I was glad to see so many familiar faces there. I was sorry I could not have joined you too, but I am far away now but my heart's best wishes are with you all the same. I pray it may always remain the same willing band of united workers and helping hands.

Zero: Many thanks for the package. I am trying to root geranium and ivy Aunt Jerusha gave me a slip last year. I rooted it for Violet who has a big one now. I love flowers but cannot keep them in winter as I do not keep a fire nights. I gave all my house plants away this fall. All I had froze a year ago while I was away and sick. Among them was a crab cactus I had 46 years. So no more house plants but more hardy and outdoor ones.

Aries: How are you and the pets. I suppose you will soon have little geese and ducks hatched out. I hope you have good luck and take a snap shot of them for the Corner page.

Joan: I am glad you went to B. M. and had a good time.

Bumblebee: I hope you are O. K. again and can walk again. I can sympathize with you as I have been there and on crutches several times. I don't like them a little bit. Is your father living now or not?

Polly Peppermint: I just learned who is who. Do you remember the blacksmith and carriage shop at Coreyville years ago? I would not know you now or your brother.

Apple Blossom: How are you and why don't you write me a letter% I will answer it. Absent but not forgotten and many pleasant and happy memories of the past.

Ora: A Corner letter from you would look nice. I am still piecing quilts. I have a few of the strips left I had 26 of 27 years ago. I wish I could get more of them. Do you still live at same place?

Violet: I hope you got home O. K. I was so glad to see you all but time flew too fast. It seemed only a few minutes you were here. I am glad the days are getting longer. Such lovely sunrises and sunsets, makes one feel well paid for watching them. If one could only paint them.

Green Hollow: Your prize letter and poem was fine. Yes, if the weeds were kept out of life and only pleasant memories and good deeds raised what a nice world this would be. When a lovely pure little plant is growing how the briers and weeds try to crowd it out or hide it. How many less aching hearts there might be if only the weeds and briers were pulled out in the open and exposed to the sun. Many a hidden word said for spite has grown and covered many choice flowers. An ugly brier can be of use and beautiful with its green burrs so glossy and bright, would it only turn toward good sunshine and let some beautiful vine or even smell like like morning glory or bitter sweet cling to it and grow toward the beautiful sunshine. It would cheer many sad aching hearts with the night colors. So let us all pull out the weeds of life and grow the beautiful that God loves best. Lend a helping hand to the fallen, sick and needy. Kind words can never die and cost nothing. When at last we are called to answer to the Great Judge who words or money can not bribe, he will say: "Well done thou good and faithful servant, you have won a prize at last. Although your path was strewn with thorns, briars and weeds, and not fell by the wayside, heartsore and weary, you have kept to the right and reached the goal, at last."

Best wishes to all sick or shut-ins.

A MEETING TO BE REMEMBERED

Dear Social Corner Friends: I want to say we were glad to see so many at our 1930 anniversary meeting, invited guests and members from out of town made the day long to be remembered. We had so many good things to eat that none go away with yellow crepe paper 'round the hungry. The tables look so pretty edge, and bouquets at each corner, with yellow napkins, and flowers on each table. Primrose was there early as well as Last Rose of Summer to have everything ready when the members arrived. Your Neighbor had charge of the entertainment program, Avon and I had a part to do. The last Social Corner member to come was Merry Dimples from high school. We had all ages from a baby to a lady 81 years of age so I think Corner No. 4 may feel well honored for their anniversary day.

Pisces: I have thought of you in your double sorrow. Try and keep up courage so to be able to come to our next picnic.

Fan Tan: Where art thou? Does my big brother keep you cooking most of the time?

ROSALIND.

CLUB NO. 2 MEETS APRIL 8

Social Corner Members: Don't forget that club No. 2 meets in Buckingham Memorial Tuesday, April 8th. Remember, each person coming must bring his portion of food for the table to make the dinner a success. Red Rose looks after napkins, etc., for the table each month, thus taking that care off the hands of each hostess. Isadore and her helpers will have charge on April 8. Bring something for the entertainment if called on for it.

CALLY LIY

HELP OUT ON ENTERTAINMENT

Dear Social Corner Sisters: I wish everyone would try and have something to read or recite for entertainment for our next meeting. I am sure after eating Too Late's good dinner you will all be willing to help her entertain. As I am one of the helpers I want to help her as much as I can. Lonesome Pine, Olga, Biddie, Alfalfa and all the rest, bring something. Every little bit helps.

PALEFACE (Club 1)

NEARLY THROUGH WITH CLEANING

Dear Social Corner and Editor: Have just run out of tatting thread so will spend the rest of the evening writing letters. Am wondering if anyone of the sisters has beat me by finishing house cleaning. I've been cleaning for three weeks and hope to finish up next week if weather is nice. We are going to paint pantry and bath room walls ivory. I'm always cleaning and have an electric cleaner but my, the dirt! Where does it all come from?

Am sending in a poem I cut out of the Sunday Boston Post a couple of weeks ago. The title is Cleaning and Dusting. Am interested in the sister's letter about planting flower gardens. Sweet peas are my favorite. Hope some day to live where I can have a small garden. I planted some three years ago in a plant stand husband made similar to a fern stand. They grew quite tall but did not blossom. We thought the afternoon sun was too hot for them or that the box wasn't deep enough, as it was all filled with roots when I pulled them up.

Omaha Bee: I have 8 or 10 Woman's Home Companions which I would gladly send you if I had your address. Am all through with them. You might find some pictures in them you could use.

Cork Cake: (an old recipe) 2 eggs, 1 cup of sugar, ½ cup of milk, 1⅓ cup of flour, butter size of an egg, ½ teaspoon of cream of tartar, 1-4 teaspoon of soda. Flavor to taste.

Apple Float: Pare core and bake 2 apples, let cool, beat the white of an egg to a stiff froth, add 1 cup of sugar and the apples. Beat all together until thick, spread between layer cake and on top.

Suet Pudding: 1 cup chopped suet, 1 cup chopped raisins, 3-4 cup molasses, 3 cups flour, 1 teaspoon salt and all kinds of spice, 1 cup milk and 1 teaspoon of vanilla. I have another suet pudding recipe with carrots and potatoes in it, if any of the sisters would care for it.

With friendly greetings to all for Easter.

Hope and Gladness, Peace and Rest
Make your Easter truly blest.

LADY SLIPPER

CAKE AND PUDDING.

Dear Social Corner Friends: When I read requests for Raised Cake and Old Fashioned Suet Pudding I thought, now's my time to add my bit of help. I make plenty of the cake the same as some call Quick Raised Cake but I can't quite agree that it tastes as good or the same as that where yeast is used. I regret I can't give any certain amount of flour as I had had to guess that part for thirty years. I think the greatest mistake is using too much as that makes cake dry and hard. This is my way and sometimes it is good—so they say—and sometimes not as good, I think on account of too long baking or as I said before, too much flour.

Raised Cake: Use a large teacup if you have one; 3 cups sweet milk, 2 cups sugar, 1 1-2 yeast cakes dissolved in warm water or milk, flour to stir to a thin batter at night or early in the morning. When the batter is light or full of air bubbles add 2 cups sugar, 1 2-3 cups butter (or part lard), 2 eggs and a small teaspoon soda dissolved. Nutmeg or any flavoring desired. Mix with the hands as near to one-half hour as you can, adding more flour but leave much thinner than other cakes. Let rise again. When light add raisins or any fruit and bake in a slow oven about an hour. I hope some one finds the desired taste they have been longing for.

Suet Pudding: 1 cup chopped suet, 1 cup molasses, heat together; 1 cup sour milk, 1 cup raisins and currants if desired, 3 1-2 cups flour, 1 teaspoon soda, 1 teaspoon each cinnamon, clove and nutmeg. Steam 3 or 4 hours. Serve with either liquid or hard sauce to taste.

Here is one I often make instead of using suet and we like it equally as well:

English Pudding: 1 cup molasses, 1-2 cup melted butter, 1 cup sweet milk, 1 teaspoon soda and all kinds of spices, 1 cup raisins and 3 1-3 cups flour. Steam 2 or 3 hours.

I don't remember ever seeing a recipe for banana pie so here is one and don't leave it in sight if you wish to keep it for another meal.

Banana Pie: Cream 1-2 cup sugar, 2 tablespoons butter, 1 egg and add 1-2 cup sweet milk, 1 cup flour sifted with 2 teaspoons baking powder and salt. Bake in a layer cake tin. Cool, then cover with the following mixture that has been cooked and cooled. Yolk of 1 egg mixed with 1-2 cup sugar and 1 teaspoon flour or a little more if not thick enough. Stir into 1 cup milk and cook. After placing the custard over the cake cover with sliced bananas and then frosting made from the beaten egg white and brown in the oven. This is better chilled before serving.

Now I will ask for a little help. I wish more would write about rug making. Patterns, colors, kinds and shapes, drawn-in rugs made of rags, combinations of colors, etc.

I hope I haven't lost my pen-name for being a slacker. Best wishes,

RAINBOW.

MAKES LETTERS PLAIN

Dear Social Corner Friends: I was glad to see Firefly's letter of explanation in Saturday's paper, for something of that sort was in justice needed. One of the lessons taught by this explanation is that we should be very careful in our letters to make it very plain as to what is original and what is quoted. We owe this to ourselves, to those quoted, and, I believe, to our editor also for he might award a prize to one of us for helpful thoughts supposedly the writer's own, when in reality they are merely copied. That of course would not be quite fair. I think the subject of the potentialities of middle age is an interesting one. At a club meeting I attended recently an article was read on this subject which ended with the words, "God bless middle age!" My heart echoed the sentiment for I am now ejoying that period and can truly say that so far I find it the most satisfactory part of my life. I am endeavoring in a number of ways to keep it so. One of these ways is by having one or more hobbies whereby to keep young and interested in life today. Writing is one of my hobbies and I cannot tell how much pleasure it gives me and I hope am able now and then to bring a helpful thought to some one else. Other ways include making new contacts, reading up-to-date books and so keeping up with contemporary thought, taking up new activities and in fact keeping too busy with these constructive and interesting things to have time or desire to meddle with other people's affairs or make a nuisance of myself. It is my aim to be watchful of my tongue, careful about speaking the disastrous word that can never be recalled. Whether one finds employment at home or in business or wherever one is placed one should see to it that each year the old useless wood is trimmed off one's life and that some new green shoots are sent out. In this way we may grow more charitable, broader-minded and younger in spirit as the years pass and keep so busy as sunshine makers that we shall have no time for saying unkind things or even for thinking unkind thoughts. The inspiration I have received from the middle-aged member of our Corner helped me to a fuller appreciation of what this period in a woman's life may mean to herself and to others. I see no reason to sigh for the days of youth but with all my heart I echo the sentiment: "God bless middle age!" I am enjoying the Corner letters more and more. Let us continue to keep the page filled. May the springtime bring health and cheer to the shut-ins. With best wishes to you all.

PEN AND INK

GETS KICK OUT OF ANSWERS

Dear Social Corner Members: Many thanks to you, Firefly, for coming to my rescue. Had just started on the dose The Banshee had prescribed. I'm afraid to write or copy any more articles of Dorothy Dix, or anyone else's for fear one of the sisters will send me a dose of poison. I certainly have been getting quite a kick out of the different days the sisters took this article. Mother says "I haven't enjoyed anything as much since I had the measles."

I wonder if any of the sisters could tell me how to dye wild carrot (that grows along the roadside) any color to make up bouquets like everyone is making now-a-days.

Has anyone used the Calumet Baking Powder? I have and had very good luck, I have an easy two-layer cake which I am giving below:

Layer Cake: 2 tablespoons butter, 2 eggs, broke right into creamed sugar and butter, 1 3-4 cups flour, 2 teaspoons baking powder, 1 cup milk and flavoring. (I use this one so it is tried and true.) Here's a recipe for:

Raisin and Nut Filling for Cake: ½ cup sugar, 1-4 cup water, ½ cup raisins (chopped) and 1-4 cup chopped nuts. Boil sugar and water until it forms a firm ball when tried in cold water. Add chopped raisins and nuts and cook until stiff enough to spread.

I went out in the yard and played ball with two of my boys this afternoon. Found out I wasn't quite so young (tho' not middle-aged yet) as I used to be. Made me breathe a bit quicker than usual when I had to run for bases. It was only a scrub team, so the boys said. I suppose I was a picture right out of the funny paper, but the boys liked it. Have to act foolish once in awhile to please them and give the neighbors something to laugh at.

Firefly: Won't you send me your name and address so I can write you personally?

Best wishes to all the Corner members.

BY JINGO

LETTER OF APPRECIATION

Dear Corner Friends: Another week has passed and yet another and if it is not too late I want to thank my committee for their faithful and untiring efforts to make the anniversary meeting a success. Especial appreciation to Practical Polly and Eliza Jane for their great assistance in my time of dire need; also to Biddy to take the entire responsibility of the program which I am sure you all enjoyed as it brought back memories of other days in the far past to the older people. Thank you, Sis Hopkins, for the good report you gave of the meeting. We were so glad to see you with us again. You have been missed.

I have not time this busy morning to say all or what I want to but to Primrose will say the note and card were promptly received and Brave was very pleased with it and your thoughtfulness. She remembers seeing you at some of the picnics. Her troubles have been most as numerous as Job's and she has been blessed with patience and fortitude equal to his,also. A year ago she had diphtheria which was so severe it left her vocal chords paralyzed and she has not been able to make a sound since. She has been quite ill this winter but is some better, so she sits up part of the time. But for the radio to help cheer her and give her something else to think about it would indeed be a harder trial than ever. My intentions are the best ever to write but my time seems limited.

Best wishes to all.

THEODA

TO SUSANNA.

To The Social Corner:

Susanna: Many thanks for your nice reply to my last letter. So that yellow slip is money! Well, I shall never get one as I am not lucky. I never won any thing of that kind and of course my letters cannot compare with many other in the Corner each week. When a sister answers as you did it pleases me greatly. I can not imagine a woman your age, painting a room. I get so so tired just doing house work for one. I am discouraged and tired most of the time, and bet I feel older than you do.

Firefly writes a very kind letter in behalf of By Jingo. I am making my letter short this week as I am sending in a little poem entitled "Streets," by R. Jere Black, Jr., whoever he may be. Please write to me again Susanna, I should like to know you better.

GERTRUDE.

PINEAPPLE TAPIOCA

Dear Editor and Social Corner Sisters: What a nice full page we had last week of Corner letters. We enjoy reading them so much. I am enclosing a recipe for pineapple tapioca which we like and hope some of the other sisters will like it, too.

Pineapple Tapioca: 1 quart water, 4 heaping tablespoons of tapioca, pinch of salt, 1-4 cup sugar. Put all together and cook until it thickens and add small can of pineapple. Serve with whipped cream and also pimento cheese. 1 cup with 1 tablespoon flour, little salt, ½ pound cheese. Mix and cook until thickens and add small jar pimentos cut in pieces

Yours for the Corner,

YELLOW DAISY

WOVE STRAW FOR BONNETS

Dear Social Corner Members: I hope I am not too late to answer the roll call, I have been sick the last three months. I was interested in the letters about the trundle beds. I can remember them well, those were happy days. I wonder if any of the sisters remember the shaker bonnets. When a child I wove many of the bindings of straw for them.

I also want to thank 1926 for the lunch she brought me last week from the meeting. It sure did taste good. Best wishes to all the Corner sisters:

EXPERIMENTING WITH FLOWERS

Dear Social Corner Readers: Just imagine, the first day of April, and almost time to make flower gardens. I enjoy the letters so much about flowers I wish more would write about them. I have nearly every window in my house filled with plants. Although they haven't grown as I would like to have them, they look very good. I have nine different kinds of perrenials that I planted the seed, up and nearly ready for the ground. They will be by the time the ground is ready for them. I love to experiment with different kinds that I don't know about.

I received two new ones yesterday that I sent for. They are new to me. one is a Plumbago and the other Pleroma. They are very pretty in the book. I also have eight kinds of annuals planted. If anyone would like some red

THE SALT OF THE SEA

By DOROTHY R. SCOVILLE

JENNY THOUNGHT SHE HAD CONQUERED THE TRADITIONAL ADAMS LOVE OF DEEP WATER UNTIL THE OLD HORATIO F. WAS TOWED INTO NORTH HAVEN.

"WELL, here we are, Jenny." Ben Adams lifted a bright new suitcase down from the rack overhead and stepped out into the narrow aisle of the train.

"Here, Ben?" His wife bent toward the window with parted lips, her eyes aglow with eager curiosity. "I can't believe we're really home."

The train slowed to a stop beside a bare little red-brick station. Clustered around it was the complacent village of North Haven. Substantial white houses with lilac bushes and white-painted stones to mark the edges of the grass. A straggling line of stores that catered to the common needs of the community. Beyond the trees sparkled a blue harbor dotted with little boats.

"I didn't know it was so close to the water, Ben." She sniffed at the salty air.

"Well, yes—'tis near," he admitted over his shoulder. "But you can't see it from my—from our place, wouldn't even know it was around."

They stepped down to the platform and the train slid away. A fat, white-haired man waddled down on them, his pink face creased with smiles.

"Well, Ben Adams!" he wheezed. "Glad to see you! Sarah Gifford was cleanin' up to your house this mornin' an' she said you was due back." He perked his head on one side, seeming to see for the first time the slender girl who stood by Ben Adams' side. He blinked for a moment, then turned to Ben for explanation.

"Jenny, this is Sam Davis, who runs the only taxi around here." Ben Adams took his wife by the elbow. "My wife, Sam." He blushed as he said it and his tongue tripped awkwardly over the words.

"How d' do, Mi's Adams; I'm real glad to know you." Sam beamed and offered his pudgy hand, which Jenny took after a moment of hesitation. "I knew Ben here when he was a little feller," he said. "He an' his father used to sail together in the Margaret B." He picked up the suitcase and started toward a dilapidated car which stood forlornly by the side of the station house.

"Same car, Sam?" asked Ben, opening the door.

"Yes, sir!" Sam grinned. "She was new that fall you went off. You was quartermaster on the Zapara then, wasn't you, an' that was eight years ago? You're mate of a real ship now, ain't you?"

BEN nodded, with a quick look at his wife; started to say something, thought better of it and held his tongue while Sam fuddled with his ancient conveyance.

"Yes, sir, I was just sayin' the other day that there's salt in the blood of all the Adamses—can't stay ashore no more'n a fish."

A wrinkle of annoyance appeared between Jenny Adams' dark brows. She sat stiffly on the back seat beside her husband, who was apparently occupied with the passing landscape. Sam Davis chattered on.

"There's the old Adams place right ahead there," he waved his fat hand toward a little gray-shingled house, half hidden by trees, that clung comfortably to the hillside. "Course you won't be able to see much of the harbor from there, but then it's a real nice place."

"When you goin' off, Ben?" Mr. Davis suddenly remembered that he would be questioned at the postoffice that night.

"He's not going off, Mr. Davis." A positive voice spoke quite clearly.

"What's that!" Mr. Davis was plainly taken aback. "Not goin' off!"

"Not for awhile anyway," Ben admitted.

"Not ever," repeated Jenny Adams firmly.

Sam Davis gave the wheel of his contraption a mighty haul and the car bounced off the dirt road to a grassy track that led to the house. With an abrupt jerk, he pulled up the brake and the car halted close to the front door.

LIFE quickly returned to the old Adams house. It was a livable place and took kindly to the efforts of the new owners. Frilly white curtains appeared at the kitchen windows, with lace drapes at the others Jenny proudly stitched them by hand and hung them herself. Ben cut the tall grass from around the house.

"They look real fussy, don't they?" Ben admired. "We used to have white ruffled ones up to all the windows. They were always starched out stiff," he added.

Jenny turned to him. "But don't you like these?"

"They're real pretty, honey, as long as you like them." Ben kissed her and laughed.

Their first real disagreement was over Uncle Benjamin Adams. Jenny hated the huge gold-framed picture that hung in the front room over the slippery haircloth sofa, and one day in a spasm of cleaning she took the stiff likeness down and carried it to the attic. A week later Ben discovered the loss.

She paused in the midst of the supper dishes. "Why, it was so ugly I put it in the attic," she laughed lightly.

Ben looked pained. "But, Jenny, I was named after him and he was one of the best skippers along the coast."

"That's no reason why he should disfigure our walls!" Jenny flippantly told him.

"Uncle Ben was a fine man," Ben said very sternly, and he disappeared out the door. Jenny heard his footsteps going upstairs to the attic. Five minutes later he was back with the old-fashioned picture. Very carefully he rehung it on the wall of the front parlor. It seemed to stare disapprovingly at Jenny, reminding her that she was an outsider.

"He was one of the finest seamen around here," Ben told her. "I wish I could win his reputation as a shipmaster."

Cold fear gripped Jenny's heart. "There's no future in the sea," she said.

"And there's no future here, either!" he flung at her. With a quick slam, he was out the door and gone. Uncle Benjamin frowned at Jenny, and she ran into the kitchen with tears on her cheek.

With December came the longer harsher days of New England winter. [illegible] kitchen was the only room [illegible] that could be kept com[illegible] warm. After the supper dishes were done, Jenny would draw a straight chair up to the fire stove and [illegible] in front of the oven door. Ben sat by the window, and now that the trees were bare he could look across to a little patch of gray harbor. With an east wind they could hear the surf beating on the outer bar and sometimes the heavy throb of an oil engine as the fishing boats came in.

Ben was restless when he heard those sounds. He squinted through the window pane, carefully wiping the steam off and cocking his head to listen.

"The Gleaner brought in 35,000 pounds of fish this morning," he would tell her. "Cap'n Ed can smell the fish—his crew makes money." Then, very carefully, as though it were an afterthought: "He offered me a berth if I wanted to go with him."

Jenny's hand flew to her throat. "You're not going, are you?"

Ben sighed. "No, I guess not—you'd worry too much."

"I'm afraid of the sea, Ben."

"Yes, I know."

"We'll have a garden and chickens in the spring," she wheedled.

"Yes, I know." He patted her arm.

Winter dragged by. Jenny seldom went to the village. It was two miles down the road and Ben went in every day, so she let him do all the errands. Once she had gone in with Mrs. Gifford to the Ladies' Aid meeting. There was talk of things entirely alien to her. Babies, children's diseases, troubles and ailments, bits of gossip that Jenny had no part in. There was talk of the fishing boats and the men who sailed in them. She learned that three of the women had lost their husbands in a winter's gale of five years past.

"You're lucky your husband doesn't have to go off shore in the small boats, Mrs. Adams," a slender, oldish woman nodded at her. "The big steamers such as he sails in seem so much safer, though I suppose it is hard to have him away so long at a time."

"My husband has left the sea," Jenny said.

The talk around her suddenly suspended.

"Well!" exclaimed a sharp-faced woman, looking at her, "I never knew an Adams to do that before!"

"My husband has often said he would quit the boats, but he never has and I don't believe he ever will," sighed a drab little person.

"They never do," said Mrs. Tupper, the sharp-faced woman, biting off her words.

The curious glances of the older women took form in short questions. Where had she come from and how had she met Ben Adams?

Without hesitation Jenny told them how they had met while she was cashier in a New York restaurant.

"And you never knew each other before!" exclaimed one. Her voice reached all corners of the little church parlor.

"That's done nowadays," said Mrs. Tupper. "It's because divorce is so easy, I suppose!"

Ladies Aid meetings did not appeal to Jenny.

IT WAS early in June when Ben Adams was offered command of the big yacht Sea Witch. The Farnhams, who lived in the elaborate show place over on East Point, owned the craft, which rode at anchor in front of their palatial summer home. Their former skipper had gone back to the sea and they wanted some one to take his place.

Ben Adams went over to the Farnhams' and came back fuming indignantly.

"They want a lackey, not a captain," he told Jenny disgustedly. "They never go anywhere in the tub—she's just for show.

"But that wouldn't be hard, would it?" Jenny ventured, "and you would be near home."

"Dressed up in gold braid all the time—"

"But, Ben, you look so nice in a uniform."

"Nothing but a rowboat captain," snorted Ben.

But there was good money in it and Jenny approved. She gloried in his new uniform with the four wide gold stripes on his blue sleeve and she could not understand why he would not wear it down to the village.

"They'd think I was showing off," he refused briefly. "I'm not proud of this job."

She caught him looking at his four gold stripes one day and there was a somber darkness in his face.

"I wish to heaven I could be proud of these stripes," he said bitterly.

"Why, Ben!" Jenny rebuked him.

"I could have had my master's papers if I'd only stuck to the Ortero a year longer."

The last of September the Farnhams closed their summer place for the season. They would spend the winter in Italy. Ben was to move the yacht over to the boatyard, where she would be hauled out for the winter.

The baby was born in December. A girl, with blue eyes and a tiny topknot of fuzzy gold hair. Joan, Jenny called her.

"She's got Adams eyes, just as sure as I'm standing here!" said Mrs. Gifford when she saw the baby.

"I'm glad it wasn't a boy," Ben said. "He'd most likely be running off to sea and that would break Jenny's heart."

But he said it rather wistfully and Mrs. Gifford pressed her lips together to keep from saying what she thought.

"Yes, Adams men have all been captains." She gave him a long look.

The bleak winter wore away, with Ben puttering around the Farnhams' yacht, seeing that she was well protected from the weather and working on odds and ends of her gear. When spring came he painted and scraped and fussed until the crew came down and he turned the job over to them.

Shortly before the owners arrived Ben informed Jenny that he was sick of being a hired man.

"I'm going back to sea and get my master's papers," he informed her none too gently.

For a moment or two she tried to beguile him in the devious ways she had learned since marriage.

He shook his head. "It's no use, Jenny; I'm going back where I belong. You can get Mrs. Gifford to come over here with you and I'll be able to run home once in a while between trips."

Jenny tried tears. She was tired, with keeping house and tending the baby, and the tears came easily. But Ben was firm. He told her of Adams women who had bravely carried on their duties while their men sailed to the edge of the world and back.

"Well, I'm not an Adams woman!" Jenny suddenly shrilled at him. "I hate the sea and I won't have you going off! If you leave me I'll go away, too!" She flung the threat with blazing eyes.

"Jenny!" Ben's voice commanded.

"Y-s—Jenny!" she mimicked. With one quick sweep of her hand she picked his glass-framed mate's license from the wall.

"That's all you've ever got from the sea!" She shook it at him. "A piece of paper!"

She flung it at his feet and the glass tinkled into sharp slivers. Before he could answer her she ran from the room and up the stairs. He heard the door of their bedroom slam. In a few moments she was back, Ben was looking out the window toward the harbor.

"There!" said Jenny, breathing hard, "your books and charts and sextant and all the rest of the rubbish are locked in my closet! They'll stay there, too!" She tucked the key into her dress.

Summer came again and Ben remained with the Farnhams. Jenny fussed with the garden and took care of the chickens. Joan occupied much of her time. The women of North Haven did not interest Jenny and they, in turn, felt that she considered herself too proud to associate with them.

"Though land knows she's got nothin' to be proud over," was the general opinion. There was more than one comment on Ben Adams. Most of the fishermen considered him foolish to waste his time on a yacht, while the womenfolk condemned him as plain "shiftless."

"Ben Adams is a good worker, but he's shiftless," they said later when he took to working in the boatyard after the Farnhams' yacht was sold.

BEN knew what they were saying behind his back. He had heard North Haven judgment before. Joan comforted him. She begged to go with him to the boatyard and sometimes he took her down to see the fishing boats unload their catch. She rode high on his shoulder and laughed with happiness, watching the men packing the silver fish in barrels.

As Joan grew older she liked to play along the beach, Jenny tried to coax her to play in the pine wood that lay just back of the house, but Joan rarely played there. Jenny was glad when she went to school. It kept her away from the beach.

* * * * * * * * *

The summer Joan was 17 she found her father's sextant and his charts and all his books on navigation. They were tucked away under the attic eaves where Jenny had hidden them out of sight. That night when Ben Adams came home Joan brought the armful to him.

"Are all these things yours, father?" She tumbled them into his lap.

He nodded and put down his pipe.

For three hours they pored over charts of foreign waters, while he marked off the penciled courses that he had followed as mate of the Ortero. Together they turned the pages of the Bowdich Epitome and he showed her how a course was plotted.

"Will you teach me navigation?" she begged him, sliding the parallels across a chart.

"Joan, why do you waste your time on such foolishness?" questioned her mother.

The girl laughed. "Oh, I might marry a captain some day and I'd have to understand those things." Her blue eyes were dreamy with vision. "It would be wonderful to go off to sea with your husband, wouldn't it?"

Mrs. Adams gave a mighty sniff. "No!" she said tartly. "In the first place, women aren't allowed on ships; you'd have to stay ashore and wait. Then he might come back and again he might not—plenty of them don't!"

"You could go back to sea even now, couldn't you, father?" Joan ignored her mother. "You're not too old!"

He sighed. "No, but shipping is poor now and there are younger men looking for jobs."

"I wouldn't ever give it up if I were a man." Quite unconsciously Joan condemned her father.

"M—mh!" said her mother, jabbing her needle into a sock. "You'd better get those romantic notions out of your head!"

WHEN the dismasted schooner Horatio F. was towed into North Haven by the government cutter, Joan was the first one to go down to the shore where she was beached. She was a forlorn-looking wreck with a tangle of spars across her deck. At ebb tide the vessel lay within a hundred feet of shore and the lumber was being jettisoned overside, floated ashore and stowed on teams, which were taking it to the wharf, where a small cargo schooner was reloading it.

Half her days Joan spent down on the edge of the beach watching the wrecked schooner. There seemed to be a tall, darkish young man in charge. She had heard the vessel had a young skipper. It was not until the second week that she met him.

"What will you do when she's all unloaded?" Joan asked the question that had been on the tip of her tongue all morning.

"I wish I knew," said the young man with a slight frown. "She'll be towed up to New London and if it doesn't cost too much she'll be patched up."

"But it might be a big job and then they'd probably use her as a barge, wouldn't they?" Joan speculated.

"I suppose so," admitted the skipper of the Horatio. "In that case I'd be out of a job."

"Schooners are hard to get too," John nodded.

Joan laughed and her eyes crinkled up in friendly amusement. "That's what my father calls them, too. He's been to sea."

Before he went off to the village she found out his name and on the way home repeated it to herself. It had a sturdy, well-built sound: Captain Robert Allen Marchant. That was an old Cape Cod name, she knew. There had been more than one sea captain in the Marchant family, just as there had been on the Adams side.

The Adams house was visible from where the Horatio F. lay and Captain Marchant formed the habit of going up there to spend his evenings. Mrs. Adams would sit over in the corner sewing, while Joan, her father and Captain Robert Marchant joined together in talking of ships and the sea and strange ports. Often Joan dragged out the old charts and they traced the courses across their smudgy surfaces. Mrs. Adams rarely contributed a word to the conversation. It might have been a foreign tongue to her. All the talk of sights and degrees of latitude and longitude, with argument and discussion of seamanship, did not interest her.

It was the wistful note in her daughter's voice that roused the panic in Jenny Adams' heart.

"He's going out soon, mother," Joan said one night at the supper table.

"But he'll most likely come by here once in a while," comforted her father.

"Ben, do you suppose that Joan really cares anything about that man?" Jenny Adams put the question as soon as Joan was out of hearing.

"It looks that way, Jenny," admitted her husband. "He's a good skipper."

"What's that got to do with his making a good husband?" snapped his wife.

In a panic of indecision Jenny Adams suddenly realized she had another battle to fight. She had kept Ben Adams away from the sea, but here was Joan, her baby, answering its call. She had thought a girl was safe. She couldn't run off to sea as a man did. Convention, opportunity and a dozen other things hedged her in. But now all that was swept away. Joan could marry a sailor and go off with him. Such things did happen. Jenny Adams clenched her fists. Joan should have a safe home ashore and a man who would have a good steady income. Her thoughts were still in a maddening tangle when Joan cleared it all away in a single remark.

"The Horatio has gone, mother." Joan's eyes watched the harbor.

Mrs. Adams smothered an audible gasp of relief. "Well! Now you can finish up that silk dress you started. With all your gallivantin' you haven't had time for anything!"

Joan went slowly upstairs without answering her.

"Do you suppose that man will ever come back this way?" Mrs. Adams questioned her husband that night.

Ben Adams gave his wife a long look. "Why?"

"Why?" repeated Mrs. Adams sharply. "Because I don't want any common sailor around Joan, that's why!"

"He's no common sailor," protested Ben Adams mildly; "he's skipper of that schooner."

"Well, that's little enough!" Jenny Adams told him. "And I'm not going to have Joan throwing herself away on any man that goes off to sea!"

THREE weeks later Mrs. Gifford brought the news. She came in on a Saturday morning when Mrs. Adams was in the kitchen baking. Mrs. Gifford plumped herself down in the rocking chair and looked at Jenny Adams.

"I expect Joan is all excited this morning," she commenced pleasantly enough.

Mrs. Adams went briskly on with her work. "Why?" she asked.

"The Horatio F. came in early this morning and anchored right off East Point. All fixed up as good as new, too," said Mrs. Gifford. "She's a fine vessel—looks like the old Greer."

"The Horatio in?" Mrs. Adams stood still, with a dish towel in one hand and a sticky spoon in the other.

Mrs. Gifford nodded emphatically, with a keen eye on Jenny Adams.

"Robert Marchant is a fine boy," she went on. "He belongs to the Amos Marchants down Cape. They been goin' to sea as long as the Adamses—both got salt in their blood, my mother used to say."

Mrs. Adams sat down very suddenly on the edge of a chair. "You—you s'pose—?"

"Well, if my daughter got as good a man as Robert Marchant I'd consider myself lucky in this day and age," Mrs. Gifford nodded.

As she finished speaking the back door opened and Ben Adams came cautiously in, looking guiltily from one woman to another.

"I've just been telling Jenny what a fine husband that Robert Marchant would make Joan," Mrs. Gifford greeted him.

"That's just what I've always said!" Ben Adams assented eagerly. "Joan would be happy with him, I know."

"How do you know?" challenged Mrs. Adams scornfully.

"Well—er—because," Ben Adams hesitated, "because they were married this mornin' over to Tisb'ry!"

"Married this mornin' over to Tisb'ry!" Mrs. Adams weakly repeated.

THE back door creaked slowly on its hinges and widened a crack. The three turned toward it.

"Joan!" ejaculated Mrs. Adams. "Come in here this minute!"

Together Captain Robert Marchant and Joan came into the kitchen. They looked questioningly at Mrs. Adams.

"You really don't mind, do you, mother? I love him."

"And I love Joan very much indeed" added Robert Marchant firmly.

"Well," Jenny Adams sighed resignedly, "are you goin' with him?"

Joan shook her head. "No I'll keep house for him till he comes back," she said proudly.

"We've rented that little white cottage down by East Point," Robert Marchant added.

"Where I can watch for him to come in," Joan smiled up at her husband. "Wait, I'll show you where he's going," she told her mother. For a moment she rummaged in the hall closet under the stairs, then dragged out a bundle of old charts. She chose one and spread it out on the table.

"See," she pointed.

Slowly Mrs. Adams was drawn toward the chart. She hesitated for a brief instant, then with a sigh bent over to follow Joan's slender forefinger as it traced the course of the Horatio F.

Game starts at 2 p. m.

This is opening day in Norwich, when the Academy Wildcats, league champs five times and state title-holders twice in the last three years, get away on a 22-game schedule against the Richmond Radiators, one of the leading teams of the Industrial league. The game, played at the campus, will be called at 2 o'clock.

The Academy, after almost a month of practice, are still somewhat of a mystery to their followers. Lack of hitting power in the outfield is the chief worry this year as the entire 1929 trio, Capt. Jack Marks, Buck LaCroix and Anso Tombari, graduated last June. Hal Cummings, third baseman and another sweet hitter, was lost and it is to fill the places of these four boys that Coach Brigham has labored long and hard during the early practice sessions.

The infield and pitching staff is up to par, according to the pre-season outlook, with Butsy Weisgraber and Boots Greene to head the mound crops, Bud Fontaine to catch, and Alec Arico, Chubby Gibbs and Art Breen taking care of three of the infield positions. Second base and the outfields are the question marks.

In the Richmonds, the Red and Whitesters have picked nothing easy as a starter. Lefty Lucier, last year's premier Dusty league boxman, and Andy Kotch, right-hander, will toss them up for the Ironmen, backed by the same team that raised havoc during the latter part of the '29 race. They have plenty of hitting power that will tax the entire Wildcat team to the utmost.

Coach Brigham will use three pitchers today, starting with Chuck Lavarge, a husky lower middler, following with Boots Greene, from whom much is expected this year, and finishing up with last year's mainstay, Butsy Weisgraber. All are right-handers. The rest of the lineup, as shown above, will see Chet Berghinzo, Hack Pepin and Ed Flather opening the game in the outfield positions and Riordan or Fitzgerald guarding the keystone sack.

The field is in A-1 shape, it having been thoroughly gone over during the week. The pitching mound was fixed Friday, home plate sunk and the backstop erected so that everything is set for the get-away. That is, everything now lies in the hands of the weatherman. With a clear, warm day, one of the largest opening day crowds ever should be on hand.

The first call of the season to the members of The Third Base Gang was issued Friday evening and a 100 per cent turnout is expected.

Morin to Umpire

Once again the clarion tones of that inimitable umpire, "Hank" Morin will shatter the silences of Rockwell's woods when he cries "Play Ball at the Academy campus today. Hank has been getting in shape all winter for the arduous task of calling them at the campus. A good part of the winter was spent in Skowhegan, Me., where men are men and milk is delivered by the iceman. Those long northern evenings were spent between the study of John B. Foster and Noah Webster. Hank promises to handle the English language with greater consideration this year. Somebody told Hank that the study of Chaucer would help his English but Hank said that Chaucer didn't know how to spell as well as he did. With all joking aside, Hank Morin is one of the best umpires in the eastern part of the state and the Academy has done well in engaging him again this year. Johnny Murphy will work with Morin on the bases in today's game.

SCOTT WILL OPEN BEAUTY PARLOR IN ENGLAND

LONDON, April 4—(AP)—Phil Scott, according to the Express, is about to open a beauty parlor at Thorton Heath, an outlying suburb of London where the heavyweight lives. Thus, says the Express, Phil will make a beginning toward the fulfillment of his two chief ambitions—beautifying women and keeping men young.

Massage will play an important part in the treatments, Phil says, but he has some mysterious ideas that he plans to put into effect.

"You can't run a beauty parlor without some secrets," he claims.

HOFFMAN SUSPENDED BY OKLAHOMA FOR 60 DAYS

TULSA, Okla., April 4—(AP)—George Hoffman, New York heavyweight boxer, late today was suspended for 60 days by the Tulsa Athletic commission "for failure to report in fighting condition," for his bout last Monday night with Paul Swiderski, Buffalo, N. Y., "for ignoring Referee 'Chick' Higdon's instructions and for failing to heed the commissioner's warning against holding."

Hoffman who lost the fight to Swiderski by decision, has been in a hospital here since the bout, suffering from resin poisoning in his eyes.

If the local commission's order is approved by the National Boxing association, Hoffman will be ruled out of two scheduled bouts at Wichita, Kas., one with "KO" Christner and the other with Babe Hunt.

ROCKNE PLANS TO LEAVE FLORIDA SUNDAY

MIAMI BEACH, Fla., April 4—(AP)—Knute Rocke, football coach at Notre Dame, plans to leave here Sunday or Monday with his family for their home in South Bend, Ind.

Accompanying the Rocknes on their return will be Dr. C. J. Barborka, of the Mayo clinic at Rochester, Minn., due tomorrow, by airplane and train. Rockne has been recuperating from a leg ailment.

The coach was taken to St Francis' hospital last night for what consulting physicians termed a mild case of bronchitis. The attending physician, Dr. Walter F. Hotchkiss, said tonight that Rockne probably will be able to return to his apartment tomorrow or Sunday.

The Rocknes came here shortly after the first of the year. The coach recently suffered a slight setback when he stood 30 minutes while addressing a group of Miami school children. Dr. Hotchkiss said today that he had recovered from the setback.

GLENNA AND EDITH WILL MEET FOR N-S TITLE

PINEHURST, N. C., April 4—(AP)—The national champion, Glenna Collett, and a youthful Reading, Pa., star, Edith Quier, meet here tomorrow in the finals of the North and South Golf tournament for women.

They battled their way to victory today over the hazardous Number 3 course of the Pinehurst Country club, Miss Collett giving Maureen Orcutt, New York, a three and two drubbing and Miss Quier handing Helen Hicks, of Hewlett, L. I., a two and one defeat.

Miss Collett's victory was not unexpected but general surprise was expressed at the way Miss Quier staged a comeback after a bad start to down her opponent, who holds the Canadian title.

PENN. COMMISSION NOT TO RECOGNIZE H'WEIGHT CHAMP

PHILADELPHIA April, 4—(AP)—Frank Wiener, chairman of the State Athletic commission, announced tonight that the commission would not recognize the winner of the Sharkey-Schmelling fight in New York June 12 as the world's heavyweight champion. Wiener said he and the other commissioners would insist that George Godfrey, Negro boxer, be given a chance to win the title before it is conferred on anyone.

The New York boxing commissioners announced some time ago that the winner of the Sharkey-Schmelling bout would be recognized in that state as champion.

BIG BILL BACK TO HELP SMOKE SHOP TEAM

"Big Bill" Tellier, who had something to do with the destinies of the Smoke Shop baseball club last year, arrived in town Friday night from Providence, where he spent the winter and pronounced himself fit and ready for another campaign.

Tellier, who was also an umpire for a time in the early part of the campaign, will be connected with the Smoke Shop in some capacity as they make their defense of the Industrial league title this summer.

Traynor Recovering Fast

PITTSBURGH, Pa., April 4—(AP)—There is every possibility Harold "Pie" Traynor, Pittsburgh Pirate captain and third baseman will play in the opening game of the championship season, Dr. Stanley Smith, eye specialist said today. Traynor has been suffering tritis. He recently came east for treatment.

If you want first hand knowledge of a man go to his caddy on the golf course.

These youngsters who tote a bag full of golf clubs are shrewd little souls and have an uncanny way of sizing up the ones they caddy for.

It don't take them long to tell whether a man is a good sport or a sore loser and a crabby player. And those youngsters get it right pretty near every time.

I was in conversation with one of the youngsters on a certain golf course some time ago. I asked the caddy who he liked to caddy for the best. He named a man who shoots what would seem to many to be a real poor game.

"But," I said, "He's not a good player and you have to look for a lot of balls on a round with him. I should think you would like to caddy for Mr. So and So, he's a good golfer and he seldom goes into the rough."

"Yes, I know Mr. So and So is a good golfer but he is a poor sport, and a sore loser. I just don't like to caddy for him. If he misses a putt he gets mad and blames his club or his caddy. He never thinks it's himself who's to blame."

"Now, you take Mr. Blank. He breaks a hundred now and then and he's tickled to death. He never gets mad and he never bawls us kids out. He smiles all the while and he gets more fun out of the game, I think, than Mr. So, and So."

"If he misses a putt, he says, 'Well, that was my fault. I should have been more careful.' If he drives a ball and it goes into the rough he don't ask his caddy what's the matter with his eyes and what's he paying him for. He's a regular guy."

And those caddies will tell one their faults to a T and they are mighty staunch to their employers too. I overheard a conversation between two caddies last year. The boys had been out with a foursome and they were going over the round.

One youngster was defending the man he had caddied for. "I tell you he is just as good a golfer as the bird you was with. He may not hit 'em quite as far but he's straight down the fairway every time. And he plays the game right, he don't push the grass down around his ball and he don't concede himself long putts like your man did."

"Say, if your man had putted out every time I'll betcha my man would have beat him. I've seen better men than him miss shorter putts. Yes, I know he's a good putter but it ain't right to play that way."

And so it went, each defending his man whether right or wrong. And from this we can gather that it pays to watch our step even on the golf course.

HORNSBY WILL HAVE ANOTHER EXAMINATION

CHICAGO, April 4—(AP)—President William L. Veeck of the Chicago Cubs this afternoon said Rogers Hornsby would leave Los Angeles tonight for Chicago, where another examination of his ailing right heel will be made. Veeck said he knew nothing of reports that Hornsby, the main spring of the National league champions' infield, might be out for a whole season.

Veeck said Manager Joe McCarthy had told him in a telephone conversation today that Hornsby could accomplish nothing in training and suggested the athlete return to Chicago for medical attention.

"Hornsby will arrive Monday morning," Veeck said, "and probably will be examined before noon. Until we hear a doctor's report we can say nothing about how long he may be out of action."

Hornsby dropped out of the club line-up Wednesday when the heel, which was operated on last winter for the removal of a growth, again became extremely sore. Lester Bell, whose arm has been lame, returned to third base yesterday, and Clarence Blair, chief utility infielder, was moved from third to Hornsby's station at second base.

DEEP RIVER TAKES PLACE OF PLAINFIELD ON N. F. A. SLATE

Deep River high, which has given the Academy two of the toughest battles in the last two seasons, has been secured by Coach Brigham to fill the gap in the Wildcat schedule occasioned this week when Plainfield high cancelled a game slated for the campus, Saturday, April 19, because the up-state school has discontinued the sport.

Deep River, although only a small school, has been a serious contender for the state title for the past two or three years and will give the Red and White much more opposition than Plainfield could have offered. Although the school has lost Walter Linder by graduation, most of the team is back and with several likely-looking mound prospects to replace the great right-hander, who is now with the New Haven Profs of the Eastern league. Both previous games with Deep River were extra-inning affairs, the one in 1928 going ten innings before N. F. A. won 4 to 3, and last year's extending to 12 innings before the home-towners came out ahead, 6 to 5.

PHILLIES HAVE FIRST DRILL ON HOME LOT

PHILADELPHIA, April 4—(AP)—Except for one player, Dennie Southern, the entire Phillies squad had the first drill today on the home ground at the National league ball park here. The team featured the occasion with a surprising amount of batting power and was rewarded with a broad smile of approval on the face of Manager Burt Shotton.

Shotton said today he was satisfied that the Phils would be in good shape when they meet the Philadelphia Athletics here tomorrow, in the first game of the city championship.

BERG WINS POPULAR VERDICT OVER GLICK IN FURIOUS TEN-ROUND BOUT

By EDWARD J. NEIL
(Associated Press Sports Writer)

MADISON SQUARE GARDEN, New York, April 4—(AP)—Jackie Kid Berg, of England, belted out a ten-round decision over Joe Glick, Williamsburg, tonight. Glick twice floored him for counts in the eighth round. Berg, one of champion Sammy Mandell's most persistent lightweight challengers, weighed 139 1-4, Glick 137 1-2.

When Announcer Joe Humphries announced that Berg had won the unanimous verdict of the judges and referee, he received one of the greatest ovations the Garden ever has seen.

Glick's low blows caused the crowd to boo him.

In the eighth round Glick smashed Berg to the floor with a left hook that was palpably foul and Berg was forced to take a count of seven. Just as the English youngster reached his feet, Glick smashed him low again and Berg sank in distress.

But instead of rolling over on his back Berg gritted his teeth and flew at Glick. He punched like a machine and socked him groggy. Glick was very weary and bled freely from cuts over both eyes at the close. There were no other knock-downs.

In a ten round semi-final, staged after the main bout, Vince Dundee, of the Baltimore Dundees, defeated Ben Jeby, New York youngster, in a hard close match. There were no knockdowns. Dundee weighed 156, Jeby 157 1-2.

Joey Medill, smart Chicago youngster, whipped rugged Gaston Le Cadre, of France, in his ten round debut tonight in Madison Square Garden. Medill weighed 140 1-2, Le Cadre 140.

Al Rowe, of Philadelphia, won a close decision from Freddy Anderson, New York lightweight, in a six rounder, each weighed 134.

JOHNSON FAVORS YANKEES TO COP AMERICAN PENNANT

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., April 4—(AP)—The once proud New York Yankees, almost completely overlooked in pre-season baseball championship predictions, have been vouchsafed support from an unexpected quarter—the manager of a rival club.

Walter Johnson likes the Yankees.

"While I have great respect for the Athletics and I should after the way they beat us last year," says Johnson, "I like the Yankees this time. If Hoyt comes back, the Yankees ought to beat the Athletics. He was off last year, but Waite is a great pitcher when right and it was only lack of pitching strength that held New York back last season."

The Washington manager is confident that his own club will do better work than it did last year and thinks the White Sox will be harder to beat, but sees no improvement in Detroit or St. Louis. Cleveland, he thinks, is a doubtful quantity with much depending on the condition of Lew Fonseca. He praises the Red Sox as hustlers.

LABARBA WINS VERDICT OVER TOMMY PAUL

BUFFALO, N. Y., April 4—(AP)—Fidel LaBarba, Los Angeles featherweight, won the judges decision over Tommy Paul, Buffalo, in ten fast rounds here tonight. It was Paul's first venture beyond the six round limit.

Martin Zuniga, Los Angeles, featherweight, beat Micky Paul, Buffalo, 6 rounds.

O'BRIEN SETS RECORD IN WINNING STATE TITLE

NEW HAVEN, April 4—(AP)—State boxing championships were won at the Arena tonight, as the windup of competition which started last night and the only defending champion in a class came through in style, Rollo Rowland, of Waterbury, in the welterweight class. He won in that class last year but George (Sonny Boy) Hayden, of Torrington, winner in the 126-pound class last year who had to go into the next class on account of poundage, lost his final bout.

Billy O'Brien, of Derby, who won in the middleweight class, had the distinction of scoring three knockouts during the competition, in 20 seconds, 27 seconds and 57 seconds, respectively, which is a state record.

Frankie Smith, of Norwalk, who won in the featherweight class, had to fight four times to win his championship.

IN NORWICH FIFTY YEARS AGO

Fifty years ago this week the Ponemah mills was visited by a $25,000 fire which destroyed one of the large mill buildings. Trinity Episcopal church parish and the Park church society held their annual meetings the same week. Interesting extracts taken from the files of The Norwich Bulletin of the last week in March and first week in April, 1880, were as follows:

Monday, March 29, 1880—A new house and barn being built in Preston by Mr. N. B. Bates was burned between 11 and 12 a. m. Friday. The masons had not completed their labors in the house. The fire is supposed to have been caused by the imperfect arrangements made for drying the plastering. Fortunately the place was insured.

City Guard gave their closing exhibition drill of the season at Steiner's hall, this evening, composed of all the military movements, at the close of which will be a social. Prof. Miller furnishes the music. The drill begins at 9 o'clock.

According to a report of the Bible societie's missionary, Mr. Petit, there are in Norwich, 3,566 families, and by the books of the county commissioners there are 132 licensed liquor saloons in the place. Dividing that by this, it appears that to each 27 families belongs the honor of keeping a gin mill running. The town holds a free hand and honors are easy. Yet there are towns in the state that can beat us.

Tuesday, March 30, 1880—The annual meeting of Trinity church parish was held last evening in their vestry and the following officers were elected for the ensuing year: Wardens, Edmund D. Roath and Henry L. Parker; vestrymen, William Roath, Albert A. Bailey, William H. Cardwell, N. D. Sevin, Fred R. Wasley, Alexander G. Cutter, S. Alpheus Gilbert; clerk, Charles B. Chapman; treasurer, N. Douglas Sevin.

The City Brass band held its second select social at Breed hall, last night. The band gave a splendid concert. Mr. George Clark rendered a charming solo on the cornet. Some 80 couples engaged in the grand march. The Philharmonic society, of 20 pieces furnished music. Gurdon Cady directed the dance.

The Falls Manufacturing Co. and the Shetucket Co. of Greeneville have just put in fire proof safes at their offices in Williams block. They weighed a trifle over two tons apiece and were put into the second story through a breach made in the eastern wall of the block for their accommodation.

Last night about 11 o'clock the watchman at the Ponemah mills at Taftville discovered a fire in the paint shop situated in the storehouse adjacent to the southeast ell of the mill. The building in which the fire originated was completely burned out, and the machinery, lumber, paint and cotton will be badly damaged if not totally destroyed. The cause of the fire is unknown. The loss is probably not less than $25,000 and may prove to be more. The damage is covered by insurance.

Wednesday, March 31, 1880—The Wm. M. Williams Steam Fire Engine Co. held a social at their house last evening. Some 80 couples took part in the dance and a first class entertainment was enjoyed.

The Rev. C. G. Frost of this city lectured last night in Music hall at New Haven on Reminiscences of the War.

The ladies of the German Lutheran church are to hold their annual fair at Breed hall tomorrow and Friday evenings. A capital entertainment may be anticipated.

Thursday, April 1, 1880—Mr. Frank D. Albro of the police force was very agreeably surprised by some 25 friends, yesterday afternoon, at his residence in Greeneville, the occasion being the 42nd anniversary of his birth.

At the annual meeting of the society connected with Park church, last night, the officers of the past year were reelected, namely: Col. H. H. Osgood, Mr. Jonathan Trumbull and Mr. S. S. Hopkins; Edward T. Clapp, treasurer; Oliver L. Johnson, Jr., clerk.

The crew of the life saving station at Watch Hill have been ordered to remain on duty until April 15th.

The trout law goes off today and the fish remaining in the books will be thoroughly hunted for months to come.

Friday, April 2, 1880—Intelligence was received by the Hon. Henry Bill of this city, yesterday, of the death of the Hon. Edward Bill, at his residence on West Washington place, New York city.

The German Lutheran fair opened last night at Breed hall under very promising auspices. The lovely spring weather drew many out of doors and a large number dropped in at the hall to spend a few hours.

At the annual meeting of Park Congregational society, Wednesday evening, a complimentary vote was adopted, thanking Mrs. Harriet P. Williams for the valuable and useful present of the new clock which has been placed in the tower of the church.

Saturday, April 3, 1880—The report was current yesterday that the New London Telephone exchange had leased the Norwich exchange and were moving for the purchase of the old wire and poles of the Atlantic and Pacific Telegraph company extending from this place to that port. It is said to be their intent to connect New London and Norwich telephonically with all the prominent business establishments along the line.

Mr. C. H. Osgood is overhauling and putting in first class shape his sloop rigged pleasure yacht, W. H. Bennett.

A small dog belonging to Elden P. Munsey, of Wiscasset, Me., performed an unusual feat recently when he climbed a ladder measuring 23 feet to the top of a barn on which his master was putting on a strip of roofing. Needless to say, the dog was carried down when the task was completed

POETRY

The Path That Leads to Nowhere

There's a path that leads to Nowhere
In a meadow that I know,
Where an inland island rises
And the stream is still and slow;
There it wanders under willows,
And beneath the silver green
Of the birches' silent shadows
Where the early violets lean.

Other pathways lead to Somewhere,
But the one I love so well
Has no end and no beginning—
Just the beauty of the dell,
Just the wind-flowers and the lilies
Yellow-striped as adder's tongue,
Seem to satisfy my pathway
As it winds their scents among.

There I go to meet the Springtime,
When the meadow is aglow,
Marigolds amid the marshes—
And the stream is still and slow.
There I find my fair oasis,
And with care-free feet I tread
For the pathway leads to Nowhere,
And the blue is overhead!

All the ways that lead to Somewhere
Echo with the hurrying feet
Of the Struggling and the Striving,
But the way I find so sweet
Bids me dream and bids me linger;
Joy and Beauty are its goal—
On the path that leads to Nowhere
I have sometimes found my soul!

—Corinne Roosevelt Robinson.

Life

Life is a shepherd lad who strides and sings
Leading his flock, his brow bared to the sun.
Who knows the good grass and the hidden springs
From whence streams of eternal beauty run.

Life is a cowherd old, with bleeding lips,
Driving fear-maddened cattle down a hill
With matted hides worn raw at knees and hips,
Knowing no sleep, no leisure to be still.

For one the dew, the hare-bell and the song;
For one the mire, the hurry and the throng.

—Amory Hare.

Doc Mailbox—You should go out to the country where you can smell flowers all day long. Think you can manage it?

Patient—I guess not, Doc. You see, I'm a florist and this is my busy season.—Judge.—The Pathfinder.

"Did you pass your wig-wag examination, my boy?" asked Mr. Train, the proud parent of a precocious Boy Scout.

"No father," replied the youth. "I regret to state that I failed signally."—Lampoon.

A famous doctor went to an insane asylum to see a patient, and before leaving tried to telephone to his office. Not getting as quick service as he thought he should, he said to the operator, "I guess you don't know who I am."

"No," replied the operator, "but I know where you are."—Boston Transcript.

Penitent—I have stolen a fat goose from a poultry yard!

Priest—That is very wrong.

Penitent—Would you like to accept it, father?

Priest—Certainly I will not receive stolen goods—return it to the man from whom you stole it.

Penitent—But I have offered it to him and he won't have it.

Priest—In that case you may keep it yourself.

Penitent—Thank you, father.

The priest arrived home to find one of his own geese stolen.—Hummel, Hamburg.

BULL RAMPAGE IN MARKET SENT STOCK PRICES UP TO NEW HIGH LEVEL FOR YEAR

NEW YORK, April 4—(AP)—Bulls cast restraint to the winds in today's stock market and went on such a rampage as has not been seen in Wall street since the post-election whoopee of November, 1928. The price index of 90 representative issues was pushed up 8 points to a new high level for the year, and transactions aggregated 5,931,610 shares, the largest turnover since the troublesome days of last November.

There has not been such feverish activity in a normal bull market since the speculative orgy during the three weeks subsequent to the Hoover election, although sales ran higher during some of the violent rebounds last fall.

Rather heavy profit taking apeared at times, but speculators for the rise did not hesitate to rush in to take up the slack. A sore spot was the amusement shares, which were depressed by heaviness in Warner Bros. attributed to rumors that first quarter earnings for this company would not approach the optimistic estimates heard a few weeks ago.

Scores of utilities and industrials, however, were hurled up about 1 to 11 points as stocks changed hands in blocks of 5,000 to 30,000 shares. Although public participation in the market appeared to be growing rapidly, the character of the trading suggested rather definitely that it was a speculative carnival of giants. Activity was concentrated in a group of pool favorites, while scores of shares were more or less neglected.

The gain of $148,000,000 in weekly brokers loans caused no surprise and apparently no qualms. While it is granted that loans cannot continue to increase at the rate of the past month for any extended period, powerful speculative interests as yet apparently see no cause for worry. There has been no indication so far that federal reserve authorities regard the movement as getting out of bounds, although the reserve system is now in a much better position to apply the damper than it was when it made unsuccessful efforts a year ago. It is felt in many quarters that a strong market at this time will aid business sentiment and speed recovery. Credit conditions remained comfortable, with call money holding officially at 4 per cent, but available in the outside market at 3 1-2. Weekly business and trade reviews were somewhat more cheerful, pointing to better steel mill operations, moderate improvement in wholesale and retail trade, and a decidedly better tone in commodity markets. Not all reports coming to hand were favorable, however. Willys Overland reported a loss of nearly $5,000,000 for last year. President Atterbury of the Pennsylvania railroad said he saw little prospect of improvement in traffic during the second quarter.

American Telephone and General Electric were outstanding strong spots, surging about 5 points to record levels for the recovery. Allied Chemical sold up about 9 and Case 11 points, although they sagged a little in profit taking before the close. Consolidated Gas, Stone and Webster, General Motors, Colorado Fuel, Radio, National Air Transport, United Corp., United Gas Improvement, and Standards of New Jersey and California were among other issues reaching new high ground for the year. U. S. Steel sold up more than 3 points, and closed up about 2, net. Warner Bros. lost more than 3 points, and Brunswick Balke, Loews, Paramount and Vanadium lost about 2. Worthington Pump dropped 5.

In the commodity markets, wheat futures sold up a couple of cents on bullish weather reports, but encountered heavy profit taking and lost most of their gains. Corn sagged moderately, and cotton declined 90 cents to $1.60 a bale in realizing on its recent advance.

Foreign exchanges were practically unchanged. Sterling cables held at $4.86 1-2. The Latin American currencies were again firm.

BOND MARKET

NEW YORK, April 4—(AP)—Bonds carrying share features ran away from the rest of the market again today. Many of these issues touched new highs for the yea rat the peak of the advance and so large were the turnovers in several instances that the day's volume for the market as a whole increased about $5,000,000 over yesterday's total. Bonds of standard types failed to vary appreciably and continued quiet. There was, however, a firmer tone to the investment rails.

American Telephone convertible 4 1-2s regained the leadership of the list with a maximum jump of 7 points to 139, the highest since last fall. Subsequent profit-taking in the stock carried the debentures down from the top, but the closing price of 137 represented a net gain of 5 points.

Amusement bonds moved erratically. General Theatres Equipment 6s advanced 4 points to 148, a record price, and then lost their gain. Loew's 6s held only half a point of a 2 points advance while Warner Brothers Pictures 6s were heavy all day, finishing 3 points lower. Shubert Theatres 6s more than lost a 2 point gain. Pathe 7s declined 4 1-2.

Reading Coal & Iron 6s came to life after several quiet months and scored a maximum gain of 3 points, most of which was retained. Baltimore & Ohio convertible 4 1-2s traded in large blocks but rose only half a point on the day. Atchison 4 1-2s, Alleghany 5s, Missouri Pacific 5 1-2s, International Telephone 4 1-2s and Remington Rand 5 1-2s, with warrants, averaged slightly less than a point higher at the close.

Demand for numerous rails, utilities and industrials showed some improvement, but offerings about equalled the inquiry and prices changed only slightly. Some of the more active bonds were American Smelting 5s, Santa Fe general 4s, Canadian Pacific general 4s, Chesapeake & Ohio 4 1-2s, Cleveland Union Terminal 4 1-2s, Pennsylvania Railroad 4 3-4s, Southern Railway general 4s, St. Louis San Francisco 4 1-2s and Union Pacific 4 1-2s. Utilities Power & Light 5 1-2s rose a point.

United States governments worked irregularly lower after showing small gains earlier in the day. None of the issues was more than moderately active.

The market for foreign bonds was the dullest of the week and prices were uneven. European governments were firm.

WALL STREET BRIEFS

NEW YORK, April 4—(AP)—Another improvement in the insolvency record of the United States is noted this week in the reports to R. G. Dun & Co., which gave a total of 503 failures This number is 30 below last week's total, and 55 less than those reported two weeks ago. The number reported for this week is 37 in excess of the 466 defaults of the corresponding week of 1929.

Arrangements were made today for the sale of memberships in the New York Stock exchange and in the Curb exchange, the seat on the big board was sold for $467,000, up $17,000, and that on the Curb exchange for $225,000, an increase of $27,000, from the previously reported sales.

Advices received by the Rubber exchange of New York today stated that both Dutch and native planters in Borneo had voted for complete stoppage of rubber tree tapping during May and had appointed a dictator for its industry in Batavia.

Wall street learned today that negotiations were underway whereby the Melville Shoe Co. will acquire the Traveller Shoe Store Corp., through an exchange of stock, the basis to be determined on the asset value as of April 1. The acquisition will bring the total number of stores under Melville direction to 506.

THE CURB MARKET

NEW YORK, April 4—(AP)—Week end profit taking, which was heavier than usual because of the sharp advance in prices earlier in the week, brought about an irregular price movement in today's curb market, but the main price tendency continued upward. Most of the leaders in the public utility, aviation and specialty groups reached new high ground, with the oils selling close to the year's high prices.

Trading showed a moderate expansion in volume but the day's sales of 1,580,600 shares were nearly 200,000 shares below the year's peak established earlier in the week.

Resumption of the advance in Electric Bond & Share, which touched a new high at 113 1-4 and then eased to 111 3-4, up 2 1-2 net, was accompanied by unconfirmed reports that stockholders shortly would be offered the right to subscribe to additional stock at $30 a share. Niagara & Hudson, which is believed to be slated for the big board, was again turned over in large volume, closing a point higher at 21 after having set a new peak slightly above that figure. Brazilian Light & Traction, which is expected shortly to figure in some deal involving American & Foreign Power and International Telephone, crossed 50 to a new high for the year. General Gas & Electric convertible preferred jumped 4 1-2 points to 99 1-2, a new top, but lost a point of its gain.

Newmont Mining, which reported 1929 earings of $23.36 a share as against $15.52 in 1928, touched a new 1930 peak at 141 7-8 and then fell back to 136 for a net loss of 5 points. While there has been a substantial appreciation in the company's security holdings since the first of the year, the 1930 prospects are believed to be dependent chiefly upon developments in the copper situation. Aluminum Co. of America soared 8 1-2 points to a new high at 350 in response to the decision of the federal trade commission dismissing anti-trust complaints brought against the company.

Oils continued to display a strong undertone in anticipation of an early advance in crude oil and gasoline prices. Standard Oil of Ohio jumped 6 3-4 points on a few sales, Gulf advanced 3 points and retained all but a fraction of its gain and Humble and Vacuum each closed more than a point higher.

North American Aviation crossed 12 to another new peak. Among the many issues to reach new high ground were Anglo-Chilean Nitrate, Deere & Co. issues, De Forest Radio, Electric Household Products, Foltis Fischer Jefferson Electric, Libby McNeil, St. Regis Paper and Taggart corporation.

CHICAGO GRAIN MARKET

CHICAGO, April 4—(AP)—In a big rapidly swinging market, new upturns of wheat prices today encountered heavy profit taking sales, but resulting setbacks were followed by fresh rallies. The reports of hazardous crop conditions because of persistent drought in Kansas, Oklahoma and Nebraska had something of an offset in assertions by some experts that needed moisture was likely to be received before damage became severe. There were late advices however of huge dust storms over the Canadian prairie provinces and of unfavorable weather as well for seeding in domestic spring wheat territory.

Closing quotations on wheat were irregular, varying from 3-4c net decline to 1-2c advance compared with yesterday's finish. Corn closed 1-4-1 1-8c down, oats 1-8-3-8c off, and provisions showing 2c-5c gain.

At today's top quotations, wheat was up about 2c a bushel over yesterday's finish here and as much as 13c higher than prices current last week. Under such circumstances, the incentive for selling to realize profits was too tempting to be withstood. On the other hand, venturesome speculative sellers who tried to reverse their market position found difficulty in doing so as the day drew to an end, especially as Calgary reports toward the last said dust clouds were the worst ever seen south and west of there, making the surrounding region dark as night.

Acting as more or less of a curb, though, on friends of higher prices for wheat was the fact that the Liverpool market today closed at a material reaction from top levels reached earlier. Besides, export business today in North American wheat failed to equal yesterday's total, new purchases for Europe being estimated at only 1,000,000 bu., mostly Canadian. A contrary influence nevertheless, in the late dealings was notice taken that in the last 40 days, Kansas, Nebraska and Oklahoma have had only about one-third of normal moisture, and that today's forecast pointed to cloudless skies and rising temperature during the next 48 hours, tending to make drought conditions more critical.

Corn belt weather conditions were favorable for field work, and this circumstance made the corn market unresponsive to late rallies in wheat. Country offerings of corn were said to be increasing from Iowa and Illinois. Oats followed corn.

Provisions reflected hog market upturns.

Closing indemnities: Wheat—May 111 5-8, 115 5-8; July 111 7-8; 117 1-8-1-4; Sept. 114 1-4-3-8, 119 5-8-3-4. Corn—May 86 3-4, 86 7-8; July 87 5-8-3-4, 89 1-8-1-4; Sept. 88 3-4, 90 1-4-3-8.
